10. All other parts are of genuine Lunkenheimer Steam Bronze.
11. Easy-gripping handwheel.
12. Every valve is stamped with an arrow indicating direction of steam flow.

Simplicity of design in any mechanical device spells strength and long service. Complex, complicated, involved and intricate mechanisms are to be avoided as a plague.

A boy can see and understand the working of the Lunkenheimer Valve. It's as simple as 2 and 2. And just as surely as 2 and 2 make 4, not sometimes, but all the time, the Lunkenheimer Valve works—not sometimes, but all the time.

Every AGMCO steam heating plant is equipped with Lunkenheimer valves. To be sure, the initial cost is more—but in the long run, they cost less.

YOU are a practical man. YOU know valves, too. And YOU'VE had valve trouble, just when you've had no time to fool with it.
Here's your chance to dodge that trouble.

carried on the plate of the wall where the shorter coil is to run, the 3-inch flow passing over the doorway and connecting with the longer coil at the corner of the house.

Since the other house has only one and one-half feet of glass in each wall and has a length of but seventy-five feet, and a width of twenty-one feet, a 3-inch flow should be able to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees. While the 1½-inch pipe used as a flow for the propagating house will probably carry all of the radiation, I would prefer to use 1¼-inch pipe for the return coil. So far as I can judge from the data furnished, the amount of radiation in the different houses is correct and I would not suggest any change in any of the houses except putting in a 2½-inch main to supply the short coil in the wide house.

VARIOUS PROBLEMS IN PIPING.

Please give us instructions regarding the piping of a greenhouse 25x100. Hot water is to be used for heating it, and the temperature desired is 60 to 70 degrees. The height of the walls is four feet. What size and number of pipes should be used if the walls and roof are entirely of glass and the rafters are sixteen feet long? Occasionally the outdoor temperature here drops to 15 degrees below zero.

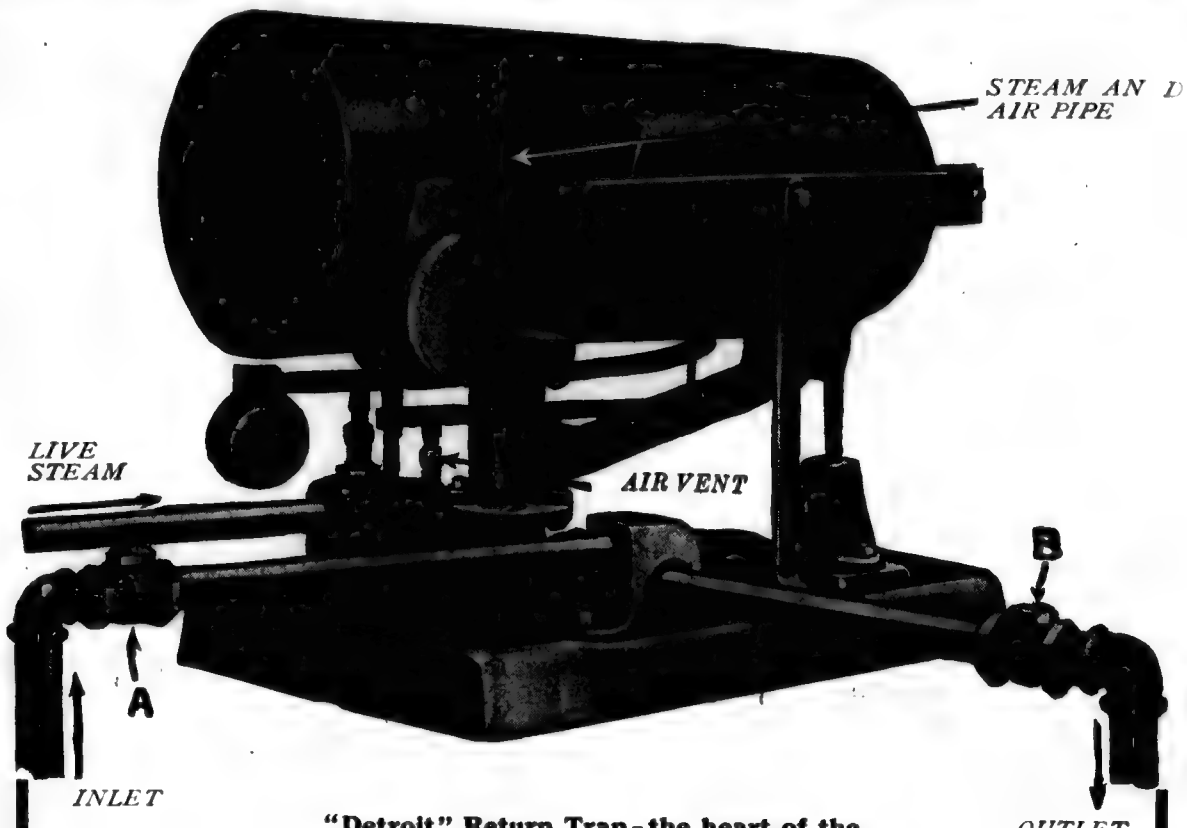
We also enclose a pencil sketch of a house 12x100, with 4-foot walls and 8-foot rafters. Please inform us how many and what size of pipes will be required to heat this house if the walls are entirely of glass; also if the back wall is of boards. Describe how the pipes should be run, and state also whether the hot water heater shown in the enclosed circular will heat the house. You will note that the heater has a large firebox, which is surrounded by water at all times.

Please tell us, also, what piping should be used in a house forty to seventy-five feet long and of the same dimensions otherwise as the second house we have described. In other words, what effect does the length of a house have on the piping? R. M.—Ill.

For a house 25x100, with glass side and end walls four feet high, to be heated to a temperature of 60 to 70 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero, we would suggest using three 2½-inch hot water mains and eighteen 2-inch returns. Place one flow upon each plate and the other two feet below the ridge. Six returns may be in coils upon each wall or under the side benches, and the others may be distributed under the middle benches.

To heat a house 12x100, with walls four feet high and with 8-foot rafters, to 60 degrees when the walls are all of glass, we would use three 2½-inch flow pipes and nine 2-inch returns, arranging the pipes as suggested for the other house, except that there would only be three returns connected with each flow pipe. Two flows and ten returns might also be used. If the north wall is of boards, leave out one of the returns on that side, and if the wall is not much exposed a 2-inch flow pipe may be used upon the north plate.

We would not make any particular difference in the piping of houses from forty to 100 feet long, except that 2-inch pipe may be substituted for the 2½-inch flows in houses forty and fifty feet in length, and it would answer if 1½-inch pipe were used for the returns, increasing the number proportionately.



It is difficult to make a definite estimate of the capacity of a boiler from the grate area only. If it has a liberal amount of fire surface, we would consider that a boiler having an 18-inch grate is adapted for 300 to 325 square feet of hot water radiation. For this, however, we would prefer a smoke pipe at least eight inches in diameter, instead of six or seven inches.

It is seldom that a greenhouse twelve feet wide has rafters eight feet long, or four feet of glass in the walls. With only two feet of glass in each wall and rafters seven feet long, the amount of radiation could be reduced twenty-five per cent. A 50-foot house would then require 300 square feet of radiation.

IMPORTANT
Watch Your Condensation

Heating Systems are very often under comparatively low pressure, and it is desirable to remove the condensation from them as quickly as possible and at the same time to return this condensation to the boiler, which may be at a considerably higher level than the apparatus drained, or a long distance from it. In such cases the is the most effective machine for draining the pipes, discharging the condensation to any desired point. It is automatic in its operation, requiring practically no attention from the engineer, and is much more economical than any other piece of apparatus that can be obtained for similar duty.

The "Detroit" System is so simple in its operation that when fully realized, the possibilities, and new uses, will suggest themselves.

DUBUQUE, IOWA, Nov. 28, 1915.

I wish to report that I have used my No. 45 KROESCHELL WATER TUBE STEAM BOILER for the past two seasons, and will say I could not compare it with any former boiler, as it is so far superior in every way that there is no comparison whatever.

It does the work of two tubular steam boilers—saves fuel, needs less attention, as the fire lasts much longer—is easily cleaned, there being no flues to clean every night, as was the case with the old boilers.

If I should need another boiler, I would not think of buying any other kind.

With best wishes, I remain,

American Beauties continue about the same, the sales of these increasing since the swan song of the mums. Other roses are sufficient for present needs. Carnations are sold as quickly as they arrive, at prices ranging from $2 to $6 per hundred. Valley is none too plentiful at $7 per hundred. Cattleyas and gardenias continue about the same as last reported. The demand for violets has increased within the last week. Sweet peas are few but of excellent quality. Other miscellaneous stock, such as stevias, marigolds, yellow daisies, mignonette and snapdragons, is somewhat erratic but good as to sales. Bouvardias enjoy a good demand and Paper White and yellow narcissi are abundant. Greens are plentiful, Asparagus Hatcheri enjoying a fair demand. Christmas greens are arriving in large shipments.

A fine crop of roses is coming on just right for the holidays. In red roses this concern grows about an equal proportion of Hadley, Milady and Hoosier Beauty. The last-named rose is showing up much better than last year. The fault that some growers find with this variety—weak neck—can be overcome by growing the variety cool. Milady still is a well paying rose. Carnation propagation is well under way; 100,000 are already in the sand. H. C. The flower stores have taken on a Christmas appearance and from all reports business will be better than ever before. Azaleas probably will be scarce, but there is an abundance of everything else. Carnations undoubtedly will reach $1.50 per dozen, with the reds even higher.

Until now there has not been much call for wreaths, but that is not unusual, as many customers have not been trained to shop early.

Various Notes.

Fred C. Covill has had a most attractive display during the week of red baskets attractively filled with box and red immortelles and tied with red ribbon. The display was simple yet most effective.

Julius, the Florist, expects to do a tremendous Christmas business and is making ample preparations.

Ernest Chamberlain has been busy with funeral work. Mr. Chamberlain believes that Christmas trade will be as good as usual, or even better.

The azaleas received by the Peckham Floral Co. came so late that for some time there were doubts as to their making Christmas. However, by judicious forcing Mr. Reid, the manager, believes he has succeeded in realizing on the majority of the plants.

Edward M. Pierce will have a fine crop of carnations for the holidays. Mr. Pierce reports business good.

H. V. Sowle reports business good. Mr. Sowle's new store on Bowditch street is a great success. W. M. P.

The chief interest centered in the election of officers for the coming year. George Strugnell was elected president and H. E. Downer vice-president. James Whiting was reëlected secretary for his fourth term. His report showed the club to be in a good condition and it is satisfactory to note a steady progress from year to year.

Greenhouse White

is made for us by paint experts, by people who have made a life-long study of painting problems; and in buying a product which bears their endorsement you can depend upon securing a product satisfactory in all respects for the purpose intended.

The value of a pure white, light-reflecting surface, which will diffuse and re-use every ray of light, cannot be over-estimated.

Greenhouse White will stay white—therefore, it is the paint to use.

Remember,

all ordinary paint will not do. The conditions are extreme—not to say remarkable, and it takes a paint complying with certain technical requirements to give satisfaction. You will find Greenhouse White to be the paint.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business as a whole is fair. Decorative and Christmas supply lines are busy, but the flower market is only fair. The shipping trade is good.

Roses of all kinds are in excellent supply. The choice grades, however, are not selling so well as the shorter ones. Carnations, too, are in excellent supply and Easter lilies and callas are plentiful. Receipts of Paper White narcissi are fair and the stock meets a good market. The supply of double violets is equal to present needs; the singles generally sell readily. Valley, orchids and sweet peas have enjoyed a good demand. Stevia sells satisfactorily. The supply of greens of all kinds and Christmas material is large.

Various Notes.

The William Murphy Co. has been marketing a considerable quantity of holly for the holiday trade.

C. E. Critchell's boxwoods and red berries last week experienced a heavy demand.

J. A. Peterson & Sons have an excellent lot of Mrs. J. A. Peterson, Melior and Cincinnati begonias, as well as cyclamens.

P. J. Olinger is entertaining his brother-in-law, Fred Funk, of Emerado, N. D. C. H. H.

DETROIT, MICH.

The Market.

Business has slowed up a bit and prices have stiffened. Roses are scarce, except White Killarney, and short cuts are almost unobtainable. Beauties range in price from $1.50 to $6 per dozen; other roses sell at $4 to $10 per hundred. Mums have left us and carnations are becoming more plentiful and make $3 and $4 per hundred. The demand for valley has weakened and the stock is none too good. Sweet peas arrive and find ready buyers. Orchids again are sky-high in price. Violets sell well, including the single California stock.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Bowling Club held a well attended meeting at the Broadway alleys December 7. Philip Scott, of Buffalo, one of the visitors, has entered the employ of the Atlas Floral Co. M. Bloy was a star bowler. He brought some choice mums from Guenther's, in western New York, and F. Pautke had some new pompons on display. December 14 captains were elected, followed by bowling.

If we should build a greenhouse for ourselves we would put the best material we could into it, but it would not be any better than we put into the houses that we build for our customers.

Yes, it would be an easy matter to skimp here and substitute there, and gloss over in another place to save a little and meet the lowest bidder. We do not do business that way. Why should we cheat ourselves in order to cheat a customer?

Valuable Aid in Transplanting Carnations

Mr. Arthur Taylor, of Boonton, N. J., writes:

"The Skinner System is highly valuable in transplanting carnations from the field to the greenhouse. After watering them the night before, the soil was in ideal condition so that we could dig the plants up with every root intact. The plants were strong and started right off growing. They have done better than any lot of plants I have ever had."

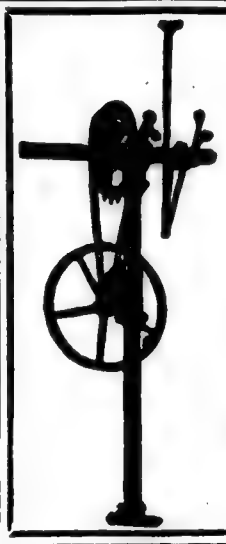
BAY CITY, MICH.



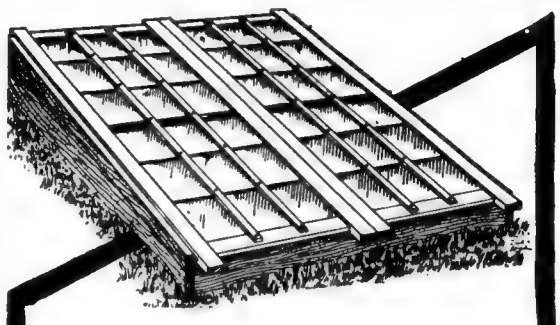
The regular meeting of the Saginaw-Bay City Floricultural Society was held December 4, at the store of R. L. Leidy, in Bay City. The exhibition of roses at this meeting was most interesting. Exhibits were made by Boehringer Bros., R. L. Leidy, John Marsh and Martin Keit, of Bay City; Grohman the Florist, Wm. Roethke Floral Co., Chas. Frueh & Sons and J. B. Goetz Sons, of Saginaw. The attendance was the largest in several months. John Irvine and C. O. Wilcox acted as judges and awarded the honors as follows: J. B. Goetz Sons, first; the Wm. Roethke Floral Co., second; Chas. Frueh & Sons, third; Boehringer Bros., fourth; Grohman the Florist, fifth. J. B. Goetz Sons had the largest display and the greatest number of varieties.

Speaking of the quality of roses grown in northeastern Michigan, it is amazing what can be done with a little care and patience. Roses with 4-foot stems were shown and many of the vases contained roses with 3-foot stems. Hadley, Richmond, Hoosier Beauty, Shawyer, Killarney, Mock, Ophelia, Russell, Sunburst, Ward, Kaiserin and White Killarney were the varieties shown. Large, heavy buds, stiff stems and nice, clean foliage characterized the flowers shown. Taking the weather during the month of November into consideration, much credit is due the growers. The judges expressed much pleasure at being able to judge so splendid a showing of roses.

Members from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Adams, of Chesaning; C. A. Hawley, of Vassar; A. J. Packer, of Caro; C. O. Wilcox, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago. Mr. Wilcox said it was a wonderful showing of roses, comprising as good stock as he had seen anywhere. Gee.

Columbus, O.—Friends of Frank Miller and wife, of the Columbus Floral Co., were sorry to hear they were going to the hospital for an operation on Mr. Miller for rupture and treatment for burns received three years ago by Mrs. Miller, and all the craft wishes them both soon back to their good health again.

Marysville, Kan.—H. R. Fisher has placed an order with the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, for the erection of two more greenhouses in the spring, one 27x92, the other 24x80. During the recent dull season a new office building 30x36 was erected, with panel walls and steel ceiling, with a new icebox, 7x9, and the whole place was fitted up in first-class, modern style.



Our customers know that they can send us their orders for sash-operating device and greenhouse fittings and have shipment made the same day order is received.

CYPRESS "THE WOOD ETERNAL"

WHY BUCK AGAINST THE INEVITABLE?

CYPRESS RESISTS ALL ROT INFLUENCES

What's the good in trying to get a half-nelson on the inevitable? What's the use in trying to row against a swift current, when you may as well easily and profitably float with the tide?

When you build a Greenhouse of other wood than Cypress, you are simply bucking the inevitable. As Greenhouse material Cypress is inevitably the one article that you must use to "save your bacon." Its character is so thoroughly established that there is nothing else to the proposition.

When you use a "substitute" wood—a substitute for Cypress—in any of the parts of the Greenhouse, or in any of the wooden tools and appliances about the place, you are simply rowing against the current. Cypress is so thoroughly established, so universally recognized as the one perfect material, that to use it in Greenhouse construction or appliances is like floating down stream.

So quit "kicking against the pricks"—get into line and use the one certified material, which is nothing less than "Tank Grade" Cypress.

Of course you want PECKY CYPRESS, however, for your benches. And that is cheap enough to suit anybody—and for such homely uses lasts longer than grades costing more.

ASK US TO "PASS THE GRAVY"

Those Cypress booklets are like gravy at a dinner—one can't do without them. Vol. 3 is the Greenhouse Book; Vol. 4 is the Barn Book, and Vol. 28 is the Trellis and Arbor Book—all free. Then there are Vol. 20, the Farm Needs Book; Vol. 36 is the Carpentry Book, and 37 is the Big Silo Book. Ask us to pass you one, or a dozen—there are 42 free books in the library. If you ask for VOL. 1 you'll get full list of all.

PELARGONIUMS.

PELARGONIUMS.

Remember we are the real distributors of Easter Greeting; the first one to advertise it,—now look at 'em. Wide awake florists know a good thing when they see it. Some are a little slow at first, but that isn't to be wondered at when one considers the "new frauds." But listen! Get in the swim for 1917. We have over 25,000 coming for November and December sales and hope to have 50,000 coming a little later, $7.50 per 100. We are making them by special machinery and the war hasn't changed the price. Our guarantee covers everything.

WOOD LABELS.

LABELS FOR NURSERYMEN AND FLORISTS.
Benjamin Chase Co., Derry Village, N. H.

Columbus, O.—Under a 4-column drawn heading which suggested that the reader buy his Thanksgiving flowers early, a daily paper of November 28 gave good write-ups to eight local concerns. The lucky ones were the Art Floral Co., the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., Emil Metzmaier, the Livingston Seed Co., the Wilson Floral Co., F. C. Viereck, the Munk Floral Co. and Stephens & Son.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

F. J. Bertrand, Tom Taylor, A. Nevramont, Mr. Roche and R. Lohrmann. An application for membership in the society from Carl Biedenbach, superintendent of Mills College grounds, was favorably acted upon.

For the flower show committee, Mr. Plath reported all bills settled and all prizes paid. The committee was given a vote of thanks. It was decided to have a smoker at the next meeting. Several suggestions were made, mostly by Secretary Hofinghoff, for stimulating interest in the regular meetings and making the organization more effective in other ways. Along this line it was voted to create a reception committee of three to see that new members are made acquainted and are properly received. It was also voted to have a lecture committee of six, each pledged to secure two lectures during the year. A committee was appointed for the stimulation of attendance, to report at the next meeting. The only exhibit of the evening was awarded ninety-eight points for its exceptional merit. It was a new brasso-cattleya, named Queen of California, said to be the first seedling orchid grown in the state. The plant is 9 years old and this is the first time it has bloomed. The exhibit was made by J. A. Carbone, and he was given a vote of thanks for displaying the plant. As a field day it was decided to visit E. James' place next Sunday.

Various Notes.

John Gill, of the Gill Nursery Co., Berkeley, says he is shipping more rose plants than ever before; all to distant points, there being little demand in this immediate vicinity. He has one of the new greenhouses about finished and will use it for pot stock, with the intention of branching out in that direction. Heretofore he has not gone heavily into that line.

H. Plath is installing a new boiler at his place, "The Ferneries."

On Tuesday of last week Mrs. MacRorie entertained the ladies' auxiliary of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society at the Ladies' Club, Burlingame. There was a large attendance and the affair was most enjoyable. John Gill won the men's prize at whist, which was a box of cigars. Miss Hofinghoff won the ladies' prize.

W. A. Mabee, secretary for Geo. C. Roeding, of the Fancher Creek Nursery, Fresno, Cal., was in town a few days ago.

The Garden City Pottery Co., of which D. Raymond is manager, now is handling a full line of jardinieres and cut flower vases.

Tom Fenton, vice-president of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, has been in the hospital on account of trouble with his feet.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is holding back its roses for a large cut in a couple of weeks.

The Growers' Cut Flower Co. still has a good cut of pompons and reports a strong market. This company made a large planting of ranunculi and anemones and will begin to cut early in the year. It also has a lot of new variety Spencer sweet peas, indoor-grown, which it will begin to cut for Christmas.

J. P. Parker, of Santa Cruz, Cal., has been sending in some orchids that have helped to relieve the shortage a little.

MacRorie & McLaren report a good season in Dutch bulbs; the large shipment they received from Holland has been sold out. This company has a fine lot of begonia, cyclamen and poinsettia plants coming on for Christmas.

Messrs. Matria and Eppstein, of the Art Floral Co., say they had all the Thanksgiving business they could handle comfortably. They are looking forward to a banner Christmas trade.

Nice American Beauty roses now are coming in from the Hillsborough Nursery Co.

John Kelly, formerly gardener for the late Governor Leland Stanford, a unique character of early days in California, passed away at Sacramento December 1, at the age of 90 years. He left an estate valued at $250,000. For the last four years Mr. Kelly, adjudged incompetent, was under the guardianship of D. H. Miller. He had no known relatives, but it is expected that a legal contest over the estate will ensue on account of various claims of relationship.

A. Traversaro, who has been with Pelicano, Rossi & Co. for about eleven years, has accepted a position with H. A. Hyde, prominent nurseryman and florist of Watsonville, Cal., and will leave to take up his new duties as manager of Mr. Hyde's retail store January 1.

S. H. G.

SPIDER WEBS IN GREENHOUSE.

Our rose house frequently is a network of spider webs. We cannot understand this, as there are no spiders in sight and so far no damage has been done. We fear that the spiders may cause trouble and want your advice as to what should be done. It is likely that these webs are spun by harmless spiders, but if the insects are injurious, how should they be gotten rid of? Tobacco fumigation has had no effect on them. Light fumes of cyanide have been used as a precaution against insect pests, but the webs still appear.

G. F. C.—Kan.

So far as I can learn from your letter, the spiders have done no harm whatever to your roses. Spiders often are helpful and rarely harmful to plant life. Cyanide fumigation would unquestionably destroy all injurious insects and I do not believe that even spiders are immune from its deadly fumes. If you find any signs of damage done by these insects, write again and send one of the malefactors, if you catch it. In the meantime, I do not think you have any cause for worry.

Springfield, Ill.—Wednesday, November 24, marked the opening of Springfield's new flower store. The new establishment is that of the Springfield Floral Co. and is located in the new Broadwell building, on one of the city's busiest corners, Fifth and Washington streets. The store interior presents a handsome appearance, having been finished in mahogany and the walls in delft blue. John Bryant is manager of the store. Mr. Bryant is well and favorably known to the trade, having had thirteen years' experience in some of the best places of the central west and south. Mr. Bryant resigned his position as manager and artist for A. C. Brown, of this city, to assume the management of the new place.

Garland Quality Greenhouses

Our engineers will be pleased to go into details with you.

GARLAND MFG. CO. LOUIS WITTBOLD, President

DES PLAINES, ILLINOIS

Can YOU Say This?

"I have the finest greenhouses in this state."

You could look the whole world in the face and say it if your houses were AGMCO. If you have any doubts about the matter, ask Charles Steidle, of Olivette, Mo., for this is just what he said after touring about the state.

You know Charles Steidle, the owner of the plant. He is one of the youngest, most alert and progressive growers in the Trade. He knows greenhouses—was practically reared in one—and is an expert rose grower. He knows, too, what a ticklish thing rose growing is. Ventilation, heating and light conditions must be just so, or a crop that should develop into big profit may develop into a dead loss. That's why Charles Steidle's entire plant is AGMCC.

And it is a modern plant in every detail. It is the result of years of greenhouse engineering skill brought to a focus and concentrated on three houses, 35x250 ft. These are typical AGMCO houses. Everything about them is AGMCO, from the concrete foundations of the columns and supports to the continuous line of ventilators—from the vacuum heating system to the chimney, 54 in. x 100 ft.

Remember, procrastination is the thief of time. Now is the accepted time for you, if you grow for profit! So just send us your shipping tag or letterhead by return mail and we'll send you at once our new catalogue. You'll be the gainer.

ALL STEEL GREENHOUSES

SAFE AND SURE

FURNISHED BY US FOR STEPHEN HYDE, CARTHAGE, MISSOURI.

THIS greenhouse is one finished this past summer and is 84 feet wide and 500 feet long. There are but two inside supports across the entire house. Lengthwise the posts are set 16 ft. 8¼ in. center to center. This means also that the steel arches are set 16 ft. 8¼ in. apart.

You can judge for yourself as to the roominess and lightness of this house.

You will admit that it is easy work to drive around inside with your wagons and plows.

Then look closely at the picture; notice the size of the various steel members. Strength and weight where needed and only where needed, not a lot of heavy flat steelwork strong one way and weak in another.

We figure these things out to a hair. No guesswork.

We can prove it.

Write for our Proof Book, it's free.

A Greenhouse Construction of Everlasting Lastingness

First Cost

IT'S not what a thing actually costs at the start that is its real cost. It is what it costs at the start, combined with what it continues to cost you. That's the only safe and sound way to figure comparative costs of our house of Everlasting Lastingness with any other construction.

What a house continues to cost you, is of two kinds.

1. The continued cost of repairs.
2. The continued cost of the cost of less stock produced, and poorer quality of stock grown. A cost loss in both quantity and quality.

To consider only the first cost and ignore the continued cost, is only figuring half way.

Erection Cost

The erection cost of our Iron Frame house is less than for the Semi-iron, so what you save in cost of materials on one you come close to making up on erection saving on the other.

The fact that so much of our Iron Frame is assembled and hot-riveted or bolted together at our factories gives a decided erection speed advantage over other constructions of similar type.

Protection

It makes absolutely no difference what type of construction you put up, the cost of the benches, ventilating apparatus, heating system, glass, putty, paint stock, the glazing and the painting will cost exactly the same in one house as the other.

These things are fixed costs.

This being so, it is only the logical thing to spend a few dollars more and get a frame of Everlasting Lastingness, that will protect these fixed costs and make their expenditure a permanent investment.

That is exactly what the Lord & Burnham Iron Frame construction does.

Productiveness

The telling test of a house is not its productiveness as a plant house, but its yield in roses. That's the actual final test. A house, then, that will produce the greatest quantity and highest quality of roses can be made to produce practically anything.

A prominent grower, who has a half-dozen or so of our wide Iron-framers, says: "If you want to get top-notch prices, build top-notch houses, that will grow top-notch stock. Some houses may produce top-notch some of the time. What the grower wants is a house that will do it most of the time."

The fact that 75% of the prize winnings in the big shows are won with stock grown in our houses tells its own story of their superior productiveness.

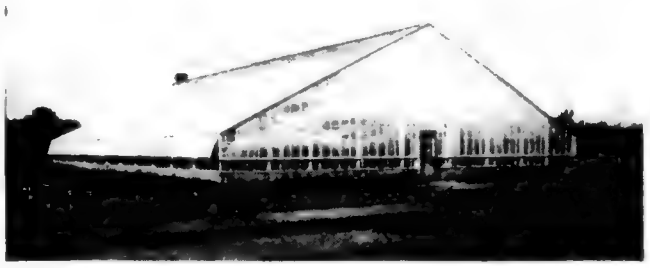
Columns

We can build you an Iron Frame house as wide as 78 feet, and use only two columns. This we accomplish without any elaborately involved system of truss-stiffening of the frame.

For those, however, who prefer more columns we will gladly use them. But our houses up to 78 feet are abundantly strong with but two. For a time we extensively used double angle iron columns, but the pipe column is now a part of our standard construction. It is easy to keep painted, and in most cases is sufficiently strong.

Rigidity

Loosening of glass tells of lack of rigidity. The fact that our houses "stay tight" year after year tells its own story of right glazing methods and entire frame rigidity.



Wide Rafter Spacing

Some time before anyone else had even started to work out a construction with wide rafter spacing, we had erected two big houses, using a spacing of eight sixteen-inch lights of glass between rafters, instead of six. It was a decided success—so much so that we have erected for the same company eight other additional houses.

Not until two years after this radical improvement did we advertise the fact of a wide-spaced construction. In those two years we were systematically making close observations, based on which we worked out a construction that went still a step farther. The present nine-light spacing, or 12 feet 6 inches between rafters, is the result.

It greatly reduces the number of rafters and columns over the old six-light spacing, making one of the lightest, prettiest houses you ever set foot in.

It's the model construction of today.

Expert Advice

Remember that at all times you are welcome to the consulting advice of our construction experts. It is a service we urge you to take advantage of. If you are ready to talk over building possibilities, say when and where and we'll be there.

What the Trade Thinks of Our "Superiora" Magnolia Leaves

FIVE POINTS THAT HAVE WON FOR US THE ACCOMPANYING ENDORSEMENTS

1. All leaves are of a medium size, no small ones and no large ones.
2. Leaves are all uniform in color.
3. All leaves will stay pliable.
4. "Superiora" leaves are the best prepared kind, particularly under the present conditions.
5. All "Superiora" leaves are the non-moulding kind.

Philadelphia, Pa., 12/13/16.

Dr. H. Dux Co., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: Having received so many compliments on our ready made Magnolia Wreaths, for their rich color and keeping qualities, we in turn think we owe you a very high compliment, as a great amount of credit is due to your "Superiora" brand leaves.

We have tried all the Magnolia Leaves that are offered, but we find your leaves to be far superior to all others, in consequence of which we only use your leaves in the vast amount of wreaths turned out by our factory.

Thanking you for your promptness in getting off our last order, we remain,

Yours very truly,
Jos. G. Neidinger Co.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 1, 1916.

Dr. H. Dux Co., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: It is the opinion of the McCarthy Co. that your good firm prepares the best leaf that has yet been offered in the United States. It is well worth the difference between the prices offered by inferior manufacturers and your agents.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) N. F. McCarthy & Co.

Providence, R. I., Dec. 9th, 1916.

Dr. H. Dux & Bros., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: We have been buying leaves from you for the past four years and have not had a single complaint against them.

We feel that we can sell your leaves to people who have used them once without any trouble. They rather pay the difference than to buy other leaves elsewhere. I think that it is a man's duty to let his manufacturer know the satisfaction he gets out of his goods.

Hoping that you will continue to manufacture the same quality of goods, we are,

Yours very truly,
(Signed) J. E. Koppelman.

Dr. H. Dux Co., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: In regard to your "Superiora" Magnolia Leaves we wish to say that we handled these leaves since our entrance into business and have found same to be the best leaves in the market. The sales of this leaf have been growing with the same rapidity as our business.

Yours truly,

Dr. H. Dux & Bro., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: We note your favor of the 5th. Regarding your Magnolia Leaves "Superiora" brand, we have used these for the last four or five years and have always found they give our customers entire satisfaction;—in fact, they are the best leaves we have been able to obtain in the last few years.

Yours very truly,
Wm. F. Kasting Co.,

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 8th, 1916.

Dr. H. Dux Co., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: We will continue to use "Superiora" exclusively, as we consider it superior to any other leaf in the market.

Since we handle "Superiora" we have not had one single complaint. Every customer satisfied, no fear of unfair competition, a fair and square deal from manufacturer to jobber and from jobber to retailer.

Yours very truly,
Smith & Young Co.,

Messrs. Dr. H. Dux & Bro., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: We have been handling your "Superiora" Magnolia Leaves for the past six years, and find in all this time that we have had no complaints, but many compliments on these goods. The trade is growing more with us every day for your leaves, as your records will show, and it is with pleasure that we sell "Superiora" Magnolias, knowing that when we do we are satisfying our customer with the best there is to be had in Magnolia Leaves.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 1, 1916.

Dr. H. Dux Co., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: Since we are handling your Magnolia Leaves our business has steadily grown. We attribute this to satisfied customers. Never as yet have we had a complaint from them nor a carton returned.

We had a great deal of trouble with the old line we handled, so many were returned to us as being unfit for use, either mouldy or dried out, and not of a uniform size.

We can only offer praise to you for the superior goods you are supplying us.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) Cleveland Florists' Exchange.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 1, 1916.

Messrs. Dr. H. Dux & Bros., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: Many thanks for your prompt shipment of last thousand cartons of MAGNOLIA LEAVES, as we were oversold on our Christmas orders and were a little anxious.

Other Magnolia Preparers have tried to induce us to stock up their goods "just as good as Dux's" at a cheaper price, but we have in each instance told them frankly that it was a case of quality with us and that we did not think their leaf would give the satisfaction yours did. We consider our Magnolia trade one of the best assets of our business, and will not take a chance of losing it—in fact, our traveling men are often greeted as "Magnolia Kings."

Wishing you the compliments of the season, we are,

Very truly yours,

Boston, Mass., Dec. 2, 1916.

Dr. H. Dux Co., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: We are pleased to state that the quality of your Magnolia Leaves is certainly the best ever manufactured in this country, and it is a pleasure to offer such stock for sale. Undoubtedly in the future we shall be able to place large orders with you again.

Wishing you every success, we are,

Yours very truly,

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1916.

Dr. H. Dux Co., Inc., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: I have been handling the "Superiora" Magnolia Leaves for the past five years or more and find them to be very satisfactory in every way. My customers insist on having the "Superiora" brand Magnolia Leaves, as they claim these are the best and do not dry out or become mouldy, and every leaf can be used, and when this is taken into consideration, they are also the cheapest besides being the best.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) C. E. Critchell.

Montreal, Canada, Nov. 30, 1916.

Dr. H. Dux Co., Inc., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: In response to your letter of recent date, we take pleasure in stating that we have been very much satisfied with the quality of your "Superiora" Magnolia Leaves.

As you will notice, our business has increased with you this year over double of what we purchased last season, and I think you will agree with us that that is a good recommendation in itself—that the trade in Canada appreciates the durability and keeping qualities of your leaf.

We would also mention that we appreciate the integrity, promptness and good business methods that have characterized all your dealings with us. Yours very truly, (Signed) Montreal Floral Exchange, Ltd.

Messrs. Dr. Dux Bros., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: We beg leave to acknowledge receipt of your last shipment of Magnolias and Oak Leaves, and we are indeed pleased to say that they are superior in every way to any we have heretofore received from you or anyone else, and considering the difficulty you must experience in procuring dyes and other chemicals used in the preparation of your different products.

We cannot but praise the appearance and finish of your last shipment, which has been like all previous shipments, as near as perfect leaf can be obtained.

We further state that our experience in leaves from other dealers has been very unsatisfactory—colors vary and leaves mould quickly. As usual you may book our order for one thousand cartons (1,000) of Magnolia Leaves. With best wishes,

Yours truly,

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

HEART INTEREST IN WINTER WINDOWS

In these intensely practical times the appeal to sentiment is stronger than ever before. Consequently, store-keepers in all lines of business are capitalizing sentiment, although few of them have merchandise which lends itself to the work as readily as do plants and cut flowers.

TAKING our cue from the "sob sister" now on the staff of every daily newspaper, we will find a ready connection between heart interest and the private purse—an appeal to one will open the other. At least so it has been found by florists who have adopted the plan described here as the work of John E. Stelzig, of Bellefontaine, O. Mr. Stelzig says his sales never were better for the time the "sentimental" window was on and that no other display has so clung in the memories of those who saw it.

The idea of the Stelzig window was to picture two poorly clad but not unhappy children, a boy and a girl, who stop, in passing down the street, to look in at the beautiful plants and flowers in the window of the warm, comfortable home of more fortunate children. To get a better view they climb upon the gate.

How It Was Done.

It was a night scene, so planned to bring the special features into higher relief. The material used was all full size and much care was exercised to see that the perspective was correct.

The store window is fifty-two inches wide and a platform was built in it 6x9 feet. The iron posts and the gate were set thirty inches from the glass, the brick-looking wall of the house was thirty-six inches from the gate and the rear wall of the room, seen through the window, was forty-two inches farther back. This afforded space for the plants, cut flowers and Christmas tree which were shown on different days. The "children" were of sphagnum moss, carefully filled into union suits and then dressed.

All the details were attended to with much care, as the success of such a display depends on the perfection of the little points.

Many hundreds of persons viewed the Stelzig window daily, for it was shown when the weather was cold and stormy and the conditions favorable to giving the public the same point of view as the "children" in the picture.

To Keep the Glass Clear.

One of the troubles at this season, whether one has a heart-interest display or merely uses the window for the storage of cut flowers, is that steam forms on the window when the water vapor in the warm atmosphere of the store comes in contact with the cold glass. As the flower store has an unusually moist atmosphere, its windows are the more liable to be coated with frost, particularly in the coldest weather. Layer after layer of moisture freezes to the pane, so that the lower part sometimes becomes covered with ice on the days when the mercury is registering its minimum for the year.

These are just the days when the florist is most desirous of making an attractive display, to suggest to those who may see it that they brighten up their homes with flowers and plants. He can afford the least of all storemen to have his windows obscured at this season.

Heat in the front of the store does little or no good. In the old days, the burning of gas-jets in the window cleared only a circle within a few inches of the flame.

Closed-in Windows.

If one could construct a double window it would solve the difficulty. This is formed of two panes of glass, with an air chamber of about one-half inch in thickness between—similar in design to the doors of florists' refrigerators. These are said to be absolutely frost-proof, but they are expensive if one has large window space. They are, also, bound to become dirty in time, even if they are as air-tight as can be made.

It seems that the closed-in window, that is, the one with the display space shut off by a partition from the rest of the store, is the one that is most easily frosted. The reason for this is obvious. Watering of plants, the presence of vases filled with water, etc., make the atmosphere in the window more moist than that in any other part of the store. If this moisture-laden air is shut off from the rest of the store, steam and frost will surely form on the glass whenever it is much colder than the air.

How an Ohio Florist Pulled the Heart Strings.

If, however, there is no partition between the window and the store, the circulation of the air will distribute the water vapor from the window through the rest of the store. Florists who have a good circulation of air in their stores and windows open to the rest of the room, have, therefore, the least trouble from frost or steam on their windows.

Attempts to create air circulation often lead to drafts, which work harm to the stock in the window and sometimes to stock in the rest of the store. This is the drawback to the suggestion of boring small holes in the sash at the top and bottom of the window, and to another, similar in character, of placing ventilators in these places.

The Use of Fans.

The simplest and most common means of removing steam and frost from the window, as well as of preventing their formation, is a small electric fan. A 10-inch electric fan placed in a corner of the window, and nearly facing it, will create a current of air that will carry away the moisture. This air movement both removes frost and steam from the glass and prevents their forming. Some florists declare their use of an electric fan in this way does not affect the flowers and plants on display.

Cold water is excellent for removing frost from the glass if it can be used in such a way as not to injure the window display. The florist may take his bulb spray and throw cold water on the glass, beginning at one corner of the top and going back and forth until the bottom is reached. If the construction of the window permits, he may flow cold water down the glass. This has to be done once or twice a day.

Anti-Freeze Solutions.

For preventing the formation of steam and frost, the application of a solution of glycerine and alcohol, say twice a week, is effective, but the window is not clear when thus coated. This method is, however, used to some extent. The quantity of each liquid varies with users. One says dissolve the glycerine in sixty-three per cent alcohol; another says take two parts of the latter to one of the former; still another recommends an equal amount of each. One recipe calls for the addition of some oil of amber to improve the odor. For any and all of these, linen cloths—old napkins, one suggests—should be used to rub the liquid on the glass.

If any reader uses a better method, The Review will be glad to carry news of it to the trade.

RAISING THE GUARANTY.

Secretary John Young has sent the following letter, dated December 12, to members of the S. A. F., and others who have participated in previous national flower shows:

At a meeting of the National Flower Show committee of the Society of American Florists held October 13 and 14 last, in St. Louis, the chairman, George Asmus, and the secretary, John Young, were instructed to raise a guarantee fund of $10,000 to cover the National Flower Show to be held in St. Louis April 6 to 15, 1918.

While the sum mentioned could, no doubt, be raised in and around St. Louis, it was the thought of the committee that the fund should be national in character and represent every section of the country. The forthcoming show in St. Louis promises to be as successful as the previous national flower shows, and it goes without saying that it will result beneficially to the trade at large.

Your kind interest in the project in the way of a contribution to the guarantee fund is cordially solicited, hence the enclosure herewith of a contribution blank. The guarantors for the last national flower show not only were reimbursed to the extent of their actual contributions, but also received a substantial share of the profits, equal to ten per cent of the entire amount subscribed.

The committee also would esteem donations of special prizes, the same to be offered under the names of the donors. If you should feel disposed to favor us with the offer of a special prize, kindly, if possible, select the subject for your award from the preliminary schedule, thus relieving our obligations to the prize fund to the extent of the value of your donation. The first preliminary schedule is now on the press.

It is planned to offer $15,000 in prizes at St. Louis. A big show is assured and arrangements have been made for the building of a balcony around the Coliseum to secure additional space.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

RETAIL DIRECTORY OUT.

Albert Pochelon, secretary of the F. T. D., has just distributed to members the new Directory of Retail Florists. It contains the list of members of the F. T. D. and other retailers, the members' names being given first in full-face type under each town. The directory is not to be sold, but is for the exclusive use of F. T. D. members. The names are printed down the center of the page, so that there is plenty of room for additions and corrections, which members are urged to make. The books are to be returned to Secretary Pochelon in November, 1917, when the changes will be checked up and a new edition issued.

The directory was published without expense to the F. T. D. through the coöperation of the Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia; E. C. Amling Co., Chicago; Bassett & Washburn, Chicago; Wertheimer Bros., New York; Lion & Co., New York; J. G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia; A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, and D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill., each being represented by a page advertisement.

WHEN FLOWERS DEMORALIZE!

While in Holm & Olson's store in St. Paul December 11, my attention was attracted by an enthusiastic lady buyer, who declared: "I am demoralized and this wonderful store has done it. I can't go on believing it is more blessed to give than to receive when I want to keep every single gift that I have selected here and covet the things, the many beautiful things I still would like to buy."

The artistic arrangement of the various novelty suggestions in this home of flowers was the reason.

Samuel Seligman.

FLOWERS SWEET MEDICINE.

Physicians at the Battle Creek Sanitarium prescribe flowers for their patients just the same as they would order a massage or an application of electricity. The influence of flowers in lightening sorrow and suffering has always been recognized, but their employment as an actual remedy is recent.

When a patient is feeling depressed, the physician orders a vase of flowers or a blooming plant. The beneficial effect is pronounced. When a person is confined to his bed for a long time it often diverts his mind to have a plant near the bed which he can watch as the buds grow into flowers.

A wealthy man who had undergone an operation at the sanitarium, while preparing to go home, asked the florist of the institution if he might take with him an asparagus that was in his room. "Of course, you are welcome to it," was the answer, "but it will be a bother to carry it so far. You can buy one like it at home for a few cents." "It isn't a question of money," said the patient. "I want to have it properly packed and shipped by express. I have watched that plant for eight long weeks as I lay in bed and I have become fond of it."

It is doubtful whether any other institution in the country pursues such a liberal and intelligent policy in regard to flowers as does the Battle Creek Sanitarium, but a similar policy on the part of hotels and sanitariums generally not only would be a boom to the florists' trade but also a boon to humanity.

SIMMONS' STYLISH STORE.

A few weeks ago it was announced in The Review that J. S. Simmons, of Toronto, had occupied his new and up-to-date retail flower store. It now is possible to present an illustration showing the general style of arrangement. This is the newest of the up-to-date flower stores in Canada and embodies all the latest ideas. It will be noted that there are no counters and that oriental rugs on the floor serve to take away the "store" appearance and heighten the effect of a reception parlor, now sought by high class specialty shops in all lines of business. It is understood that the Simmons business showed prompt acceleration following the occupation of the new quarters.

ALPHA'S RELIANCE.

The illustration on page 15 shows one of the mediums employed by a well known florist of Kansas City, to keep his name before the public. Mr. Elberfield, founder of the Alpha Floral Co., says that "if there is any business in the world that requires constant publicity, it is the flower business, because of the fact that flowers are purchased at infrequent periods by most people and consequently the florist must adopt some means of advertising his business between the times of purchase."

The Alpha Floral Co. has used outdoor advertising continuously for over twelve years, with the exception of one year. In looking over the books covering two months of that one year, it was found the volume of business in one special department had decreased over thirty per cent as compared with the same two months for the previous year. It also was discovered that this particular department was the department featured on the bulletin boards.

Mr. Elberfield uses other mediums of advertising, but makes the comparison that bulletin boards are to his advertising as is flour to a cake. Eggs, butter and sugar are essential, but flour is the body and foundation.

These large, painted bulletins are placed at advantageous points, on good street car lines and on boulevards, and are repainted each four months, so as to be always seasonable.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

New York, N. Y.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Harry A. Bunyard, Inc., seeds, at 40 West Twenty-eighth street, by these creditors: John F. Croom & Co., Magnolia, N. C., $366; A. T. De La Mare Printing & Publishing Co., New York, $649, and Wm. F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, $49. It was alleged that August 26 Harry A. Bunyard, Inc., transferred a portion of its property and gave a chattel mortgage on stock and fixtures. It was incorporated March 4, 1915, with capital stock of $25,000.

WORKING AT WASHINGTON.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., last week sought the aid of members of Congress and the State Department in securing from the British government a permit under which he could bring from Denmark three large shipments of lily of the valley pips. While Mr. Pierson claims that the pips are strictly of Danish origin, the British government seems inclined to take the view that they are of German production, and hence will not agree to their exportation to the United States. Mr. Pierson was treated courteously by the government officials with whom he came in contact while on his mission, but it is said that he failed to obtain much satisfaction, being told that his claim is but one of a large number upon which the office of the Foreign Trade Advisers of the State Department is now working.

This matter is one that was taken up some time ago by William F. Gude, as national representative of the S. A. F., with Foreign Trade Adviser Marian Letcher, also without avail. All visitors, it is said, obtain but the one answer from the State Department—that it is using its best offices informally to secure the release of the various shipments that are the subject of the applications. C. L. L.

Cleveland, O.—The F. A. Friedley Co. has had fine success with cyclamens this Christmas. They were strong on red and crimson and the house was a blaze of color. A visitor described it as looking "like a paint factory had broke loose." The Friedley collection won the first prize at the recent flower show held here.

Mantorville, Minn.—Willis E. Fryer, who has been making a splendid success in growing nursery stock, of recent years has been specializing on iris, gladioli and phlox. He has raised a large number of new varieties, many of them of special interest, and he has named his best iris, his best phlox and his best gladiolus, each Mrs. W. E. Fryer, for his wife.

POT FAMINE IS WORSE

Detroit, Dec. 12, 1916.

We regret to announce that we have closed our factory indefinitely. The labor and fuel conditions, car shortage, embargoes on freight, smoke ordinance and other matters over which we have no control, have forced us to do this.

We wish to thank you for past kindness shown and hope that at some future period we may be able to renew the past commercial friendship that has hitherto existed.

Trusting that you may have a prosperous new year, we are,

Yours very truly,

DETROIT FLOWER POT CO.,

Per Harry Balsley.

There are few more widely known pot makers than Harry Balsley, and his pottery has been supplying the trade since 1853. That present conditions should close such a source of supply is of prime importance to the trade.

Pot Makers' Many Troubles.

In this year of unprecedented prosperity there are a great many people who are not making any money. Among them are the men to whom this trade has looked for its supply of flower pots.

Chief of the many troubles the flower pot manufacturers have encountered this year has been the shortage of labor. The making of pots, although largely a matter of machinery, always has called for a considerable amount of labor, less now than in earlier times, but still enough so that labor is the most important item of cost. But the flower pot industry never has been run on the basis of skilled and efficient labor; instead, it has been run with cheap labor. This is a year in which a cheaper grade of labor has occupied a unique position. There has been no pressing extra demand for high class semi-professional labor, but an insistent demand for merely moderately competent workmen who could turn their hands to many tasks. The munition factories have offered pay that drew the pot makers away. The result has been that almost every pottery in the eastern half of the United States has been running short-handed and has not accumulated the stock of pots that usually are on hand at this season of the year.

Car shortage has hindered shipments, but it has been only a minor factor in affecting prices. When coal took its war jump this fall it hit the pot makers another blow. Fuel is perhaps the second most important item of manufacturing expense where flower pots are made. The pottery that had not contracted for coal found its fuel bill multiplied by two or even by three. On top of the many other extra expenses that have been put on the industry within the last year it presented a difficulty that could only be met by a raise of prices.

The Outlook.

The outlook for the supply of flower pots is not reassuring. Potteries now are operating short-handed; some of them, by offering wages heretofore unknown in the industry, have been able to secure a full crew, but as a whole the flower pot manufacturers are producing less than the normal quantity of pots. They cannot turn them out at the prices at which the pots formerly were sold; higher prices than those recently known in the industry are necessary if the pot factories are to be operated without loss. Several have concluded that their energies may better be directed in some other field; at least one large producer in the middle west has sold out his machinery and closed the department; the Detroit concern has suspended operations indefinitely.

Naturally, prices are higher than normal, and some of the largest makers have announced the withdrawal of all quotations; while operating at the best price possible, they are unwilling to commit themselves to prices in pots for future delivery.

Nearly all the pot makers are behind with their deliveries; some hope soon to catch up, but the majority fear they will not be able to keep pace with the demand and that there will be a pronounced shortage this spring. It therefore is to the interest of both the manufacturers and the consumers that the existing supply be conserved as far as possible. Pots are not now to be treated as valueless, but they are to be taken care of, cleaned with thoroughness and used as long as they are in condition to produce good stock.

AMERICAN VALLEY?

If the war is to continue can America not become independent in the matter of valley pips? That they can be grown here of good quality is certain, as it has been done, but that they can be grown at a profit is more open to question. Yet the culture is simple. In the vicinity of Hamburg, whence have come most of the pips, it is said lily of the valley prefers a sandy, moist loam. In natural conditions when growing wild, it appears to like a semi-shady position, and this idea seems to be the generally accepted one, yet it has been seen doing well without any shade whatever. The method adopted in the large commercial nurseries is to allow the beds to remain for three years, when the roots, or pips, are lifted and sorted into three sizes. The largest make the best for early forcing or retarding, whereas the smallest are planted up again in rows into well dug and manured soil, the rows being placed nine to twelves inches apart. All the attention they require is the hoe, to keep down the weeds, and in poor soils a light mulch of manure the second year after planting.

GENISTA CANARIENSIS.

Please tell me how to root Genista Canariensis; also when to take cuttings so as to have them in bloom for Easter.

W. H. D.—N. Y.

The best time to propagate genistas is from December 1 to February 15, while there is a nice, steady bottom heat in the cutting benches. A propagating bench that will root carnations or roses will suit genistas admirably. The cuttings most easily rooted are those rubbed off with a heel. The cuttings put in at this season, if kept potted along, will make nice plants in 5-inch or 6-inch pots a year hence.

MONEY CONTRABAND

REMITTANCES ARE RISKY.

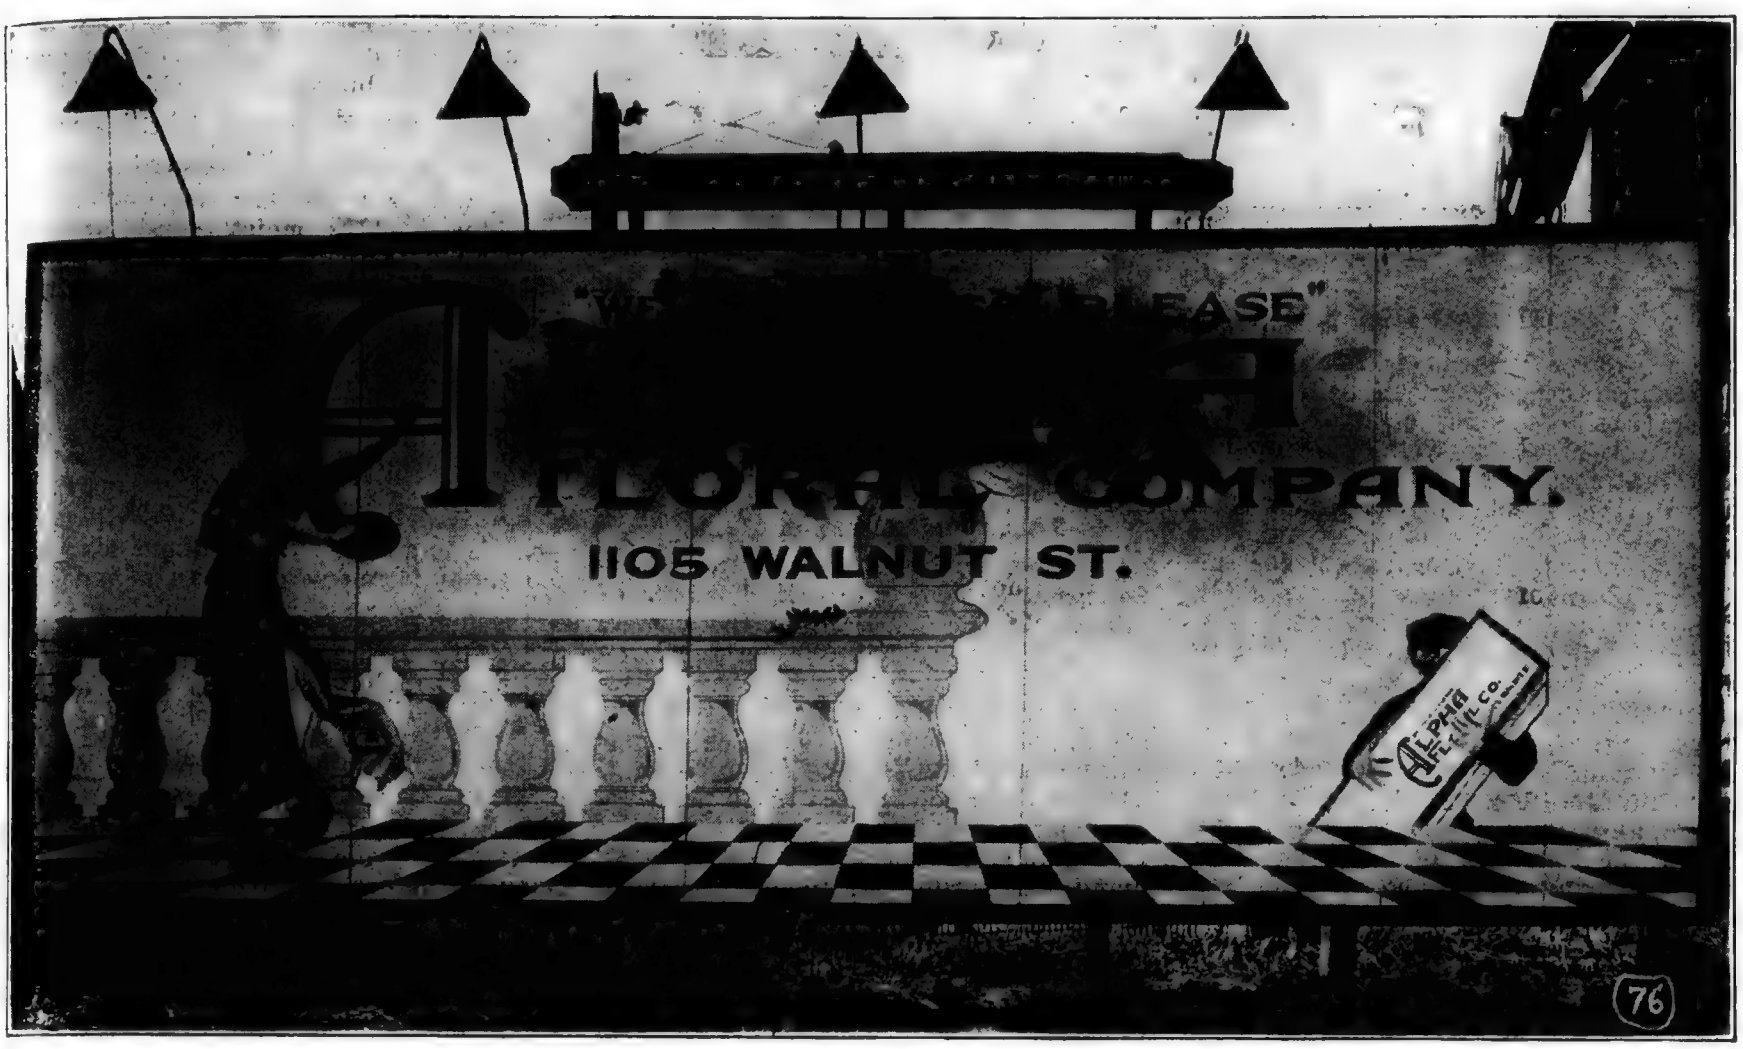
British Seize Funds.

If you sent your money to a German specialist and a British warship intercepted it en route, you may as well say good-bye unless the remittance happened to be in unnegotiable paper. In the latter case you probably will be able to get your money back.

This information grows out of the cyclamen seed case.

Although practically everyone in the trade knew of the British blockade, few were farsighted enough to appreciate what it meant to the individual member of the trade in this country. Had the significance been realized, The Review would not so long have continued to publish advertisements ordered before the blockade shut off free communication with German customers, nor would members of the trade in this country who have looked to German seed specialists made their customary remittances in accordance with that advertising.

The Cyclamen Money.



It was not until the cyclamen seeds were due in the late summer that the real situation became apparent. It was about August that The Review began to receive numerous inquiries with regard to the non-arrival of seed specialties from Germany, particularly cyclamen seeds ordered of Ferd Fischer, of Wiesbaden. It then became apparent that a large number of remittances had been dispatched to Germany, but never heard of afterward. The appearances were either that the men to whom the remittances had been sent were prevented by the British blockade from filling the orders, or that the British censor had intercepted the orders and the accompanying remittances. Conjecture was set at rest by the arrival of a postcard from Fischer, of Wiesbaden. It read:

Please do not publish again my advertisement of cyclamen seeds because orders, checks and The Review also do not arrive more since months now.

The card was dated at Wiesbaden June 30 and did not reach Chicago until September 12. The fact that it carried the O. K. of the British censor showed where it had been in the meantime and where the "orders, checks and The Review" had gone.

Government Assistance.

It was apparent that while none of the sums was large, the remittances were sufficiently numerous so that the aggregate loss was important. Consequently The Review addressed an inquiry to the Department of State at Washington, requesting information as to what could be done to recover the money. In most cases, no doubt, the remittances are in the form of unnegotiable paper, which may be confiscated but on which collection of the funds is impossible, so that in the course of time the sender should be able to get his money back.

One of the Billboards that Keep the Alpha Floral Company Before the People of Kansas City.

In a letter to The Review Alvey A. Adee, Second Assistant Secretary of State, made the following offer:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE
WASHINGTON

October 30, 1916.

Florists' Publishing Co.,
Chicago, Illinois.

Gentlemen: The Department has received your letter of the 12th instant in which you ask to be advised as to what disposition the British Government is making of the German mail it takes off neutral steamers, more particularly, what becomes of the remittances contained in this mail.

In reply you are informed that if you have in mind a particular case in which you are interested and will furnish the Department with a complete statement of all the facts in connection therewith, the Department will be glad to consider the matter and to advise you as to whether, in its opinion, it can be of any assistance to you.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
For the Secretary of State,
Alvey A. Adee,
Second Assistant Secretary.

The Review printed the letter for the benefit of all concerned.

Remittances Are Contraband.

As a result, C. C. Schaffer, president of the La Crosse Floral Co., La Crosse, Wis., wrote to the State Department at Washington advising that July 15 an international post-office money order for $9 had been forwarded to Ferd Fischer, Wiesbaden, Germany, on a steamer subsequently reported to have been relieved of its mails when calling at a British port. Mr. Schaffer asked that the State Department do what it could to ascertain what had become of the post-office money order and procure its return to him. The following reply was received:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE
WASHINGTON.

December 7, 1916.

La Crosse Floral Co.,
La Crosse, Wis.

Gentlemen: The Department has received your letter of November 18, 1916, advising that July 15 you forwarded a money order for $9 to Ferd Fischer, Wiesbaden, Germany, which you consider "must have been confiscated by the British Government." You ask the Department for an investigation.

In reply you are informed that according to the Department's information, all remittances intended for persons residing in the territory of the Central Powers are treated as contraband of war by the Entente Governments unless accompanied by satisfactory evidence that the money is for the relief of the citizens or subjects of neutral countries.

In view of the foregoing, therefore, the Department would not be disposed to request an investigation unless furnished with satisfactory evidence that Mr. Fischer is an American citizen.

It is suggested that you endeavor to trace the money order through the Post-office Department.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
For the Secretary of State,
William Phillips,
Third Assistant Secretary.

While remittances may be contraband, commercial paper which requires the signature of the payee to become negotiable is otherwise uncollectible and any reader of The Review who has failed to hear from remittances sent to Germany is advised to seek a refund from the source of which the remittance paper was purchased. If a post-office money order was sent, ask the postmaster for a refund. If bank paper was bought, ask the bank for a refund.

Durham, N. H.—The first flower show given by the horticultural students of the New Hampshire College, which was held in the Agricultural Club's rooms November 27, was a marked success. Besides flowers and plants from the college greenhouses, exhibits were made by Penn's and H. M. Robinson & Co., of Boston; W. H. Elliott, of Madbury, N. H., and Charles Davis, of Dover, N. H. Short talks were given by John S. Elliott, J. B. Scherrer and James Macfarlane.

Webster, Mass.—Edward Gustafson has sold an interest in his greenhouses to Olaf Marthius, formerly of Cromwell, Conn.

Auburndale, Mass.—F. W. Fletcher & Co., Inc., say they have come across another "scrap of paper." In this case it was an arrangement with a coal man, sometimes termed a contract, by virtue of which certain quantities of fuel were to be delivered at a specified price. Many growers having similar arrangements are unable to understand how it is that cars have not been obtainable for the contract deliveries and still were to be had when the grower, in his extremity, agreed to pay the market price.

THE GLASS SITUATION

TODAY AND IN THE FUTURE.

All Markets High.

The grower who is postponing his 1917 building program with the expectation that he can buy cheaper later in the season might as well make up his mind that nothing of the kind can occur.

The prices of most of the things that go into the building of a greenhouse have advanced, but the market for the tank grade of cypress is only slightly higher than it was a year ago. Any change in the cypress market is sure to be an advance; there is no chance that the market will fall. Steel, pipe, paint, putty and other items are materially higher than they were a year ago, but manufacturers are far behind their orders and, even if no more business should be offered, it will be well towards spring before any of them will have filled all the orders now on hand; indeed, steel mills are said to have booked orders that will keep them busy practically all of 1917 and at prices that make it absolutely impossible that the output be resold at anything less than prevailing rates.

Window glass, which constitutes one of the principal items of expense in building a greenhouse, is higher today than it has been in many years. There is difference of opinion as to whether or not the market will advance between now and spring. Some persons well informed in the glass trade say that the tendency will be continuously upward, while others believe prices will remain stationary until some new developments occur. But everyone informed on the situation agrees that it will be many months and probably more than a year before there is a decline in prices.

Fuel Supply Closes Factories.

One of the principal troubles the glass manufacturers are encountering this season is with the supply of natural gas, which is an important item in the glass trade. It takes about 2,000 cubic feet of natural gas for each box of fifty square feet of glass manufactured. Window glass factories close down in the summer, but their demands for gas are so enormous that it is customary to store gas during the inactive months to accumulate the requirements of the winter season. This has been more than ever necessary during the recent years of declining gas supplies. But during the summer of 1916 the steel mills and munitions factories in Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia have been working night and day and have been consuming so much gas that there were no opportunities for the glass factories to accumulate their usual quantities. As a result, the glass factories in Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia this winter find themselves short of fuel. It is reported that December 14 twelve window glass factories in those three states closed indefinitely. Some of them may start up soon, but others are likely to remain closed at least until next season. All these factories cut more or less glass of greenhouse size.

Persons well informed in the glass trade say that the factories in Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia that are having trouble over the fuel supply represent seventy per cent of the entire output of the window glass in the United States.

Labor and Stock on Hand.

Another trouble that the glass manufacturers have is with the demands of labor. In the glass trade the cutters are paid more money for cutting large sizes than for cutting small sizes. Consequently, with labor in an independent attitude the demand is for specifications calling for the cutting of large sizes; to get the greenhouse sizes cut a premium is demanded.

Within quite recent times a new demand has sprung up to compete with the greenhouse trade for small sizes. Modern factory buildings are being erected with steel window frames glazed with glass that falls within the same bracket as the greenhouse sizes. So large has this demand become that it consumes an important percentage of the output of small size glass.

Neither factories nor jobbers have their customary stocks on hand at this time of year. As an instance, one large jobber opened his mail one day last week and found in it orders for more than 700 boxes of greenhouse glass. In his warehouse there were not twenty-five boxes that could be used to fill these orders. The filling of orders, therefore, is a matter of getting shipments from factories and delays are interminable.

The Present Prices.

A large number of growers look back to the time when the price of 16x18 double strength A glass at Chicago was about $3.05. Rightly or wrongly, a habit has grown up of considering this a normal price. Today the prices in carload lots at Chicago, delivery at some indefinite date in the future, are about as follows:

Size	Grade	Per 50 ft.
16x18	A	$4.64
16x18	B	3.88
16x24	A	5.06
16x24	B	4.13

This is an advance of about fifty per cent. It is not so great an advance as the advance in steel, nor is it so great an advance as that in the white paper used for printing The Review, which has practically doubled in price within the year.

If the War Ends.

Of course the war in Europe is blamed for the glass situation. But if the war should end this week it will be many months before conditions in the glass trade are affected. It will take months to fill the orders now on file. Many months will be required to accumulate normal stocks, and Belgium will not again be manufacturing glass to supply her own needs and the needs of a large part of the rest of the world for many, many months after peace is declared.

Jobbers in window glass do not like high prices any more than their customers do; they prefer moderate prices, as tending toward a large volume of sales. But in the jobbing trade hope of lower prices has been abandoned for all of 1917.

Old Joke in New Garb.

A well known architect up Westchester way was standing before one of his newly completed creations. Its mistress, plentifully sprinkled with diamonds at 11 in the morning, turned to him and said:

"It's grand! And I've just decided not to employ a gardener. I know just what I want. Banked up right against the porch there I want a real thick border—now, what is that name? You know; those bright red flowers that look so dressy—yes; now, I have it—saliva!"

The architect was staggered for a moment, but soon recovered and came back enthusiastically.

"The very thing!" he agreed. "And right in front a nice row of spitunias!"

This Was No Joke.

A Chicago Sunday paper runs a column headed "My Most Embarrassing Moment," in which the following recently appeared:

"When the manager of the concern for which I was stenographer died, the employees decided to purchase a beautiful floral piece. The money was handed to a friend of the bookkeeper's, together with a slip which I typed as a guidance for the florist. It contained the word 'Rest,' which was to be worked out in flowers on a pillow, and then a little farther on I had typed the words, 'From his faithful employees,' which was to be in gold letters on a purple ribbon.

"At the funeral I was naturally anxious to see how well the florist had filled the order, but could not find our offering among the many flowers. Finally, as I stood at the coffin with the widow (I was well acquainted with the family), I inquired of her, fearing the florist had not sent it in time. I thought she acted rather queerly as she pointed to the pillow almost hidden under the other flowers.

"I bent over, and you may imagine my embarrassment when I noticed that while the florist had placed the word 'Rest' on the pillow, he had also placed it on the purple ribbon with the rest of the sentence, and, what was the worst of all, had changed the word 'from' to 'for,' so that the sentence read: 'Rest for his faithful employees.'

"I never felt so embarrassed in my life, especially in view of the fact that the year before this gentleman died he had had a stroke of apoplexy, which had left him a nervous wreck, absent-minded, forgetful, and a regular 'crank,' who had made it extremely difficult for us to get along with him in the office."

A FLORIST'S HOUSE BEAUTIFUL.

Not every florist, of course, can afford to own so handsome a residence as the one shown in the illustration. That statement is sadly and self-evidently true. But it is just as certain that almost every home, of whatever shape or size or substance, is capable of outside embellishment by the use of plants, shrubs and trees, if there is room for these to take root and grow. No edifice is so unattractive, or even hideous, that its deformity cannot be partly veiled and disguised by the right sort of surroundings. No structure is so graceful that its beauty cannot be enhanced by the same means. No dwelling is so rough and rustic, or so smoothly classic and elegant, that such decorations will not blend harmoniously with its outlines. Moreover—and here is the point that is pointed straight at the reader—few other people have so great ability and opportunity for such home beautification as have the florists, and few others can derive such a combination of profit and pleasure from the operation.

After viewing the home of John F. Rupp, of Shiremanstown, Pa., as seen in the picture, does anyone dare to say that such a home does not benefit the community in general, the florists' trade in particular and Mr. Rupp's own trade most particularly of all? Mr. Rupp's home says persuasively to each passer-by: "You see how my owner has bedecked me; go and do likewise with your place of abode. You see, too, that my owner is consistent; he practices what he preaches. He does not neglect his own dooryard while trying to get the job of planting yours."

Moonvines on the Residence of John F. Rupp, Seedsman, Shiremanstown, Pa.

Among the most striking of the adornments of Mr. Rupp's residence are the ipomœa vines that have curtained the porch and the windows, climbed to the eaves and even festooned themselves on the dormer window. "These moonvines," says Mr. Rupp, "are of the giant white variety, Ipomœa grandiflora. They were planted June 1 and are now thirty-four feet high." Probably such a height as that has seldom been exceeded in the short summer seasons of the north, even by so lively a twiner as the ipomœa.

In order to attain a good growth in northern latitudes, moonflowers should be started early by sowing the seeds in small pots in the greenhouse, say in March, and moving the seedlings to their places outdoors when danger of frost is past. It is well to prepare the seeds by soaking them about two hours in warm water. The moonflower may also be propagated by cuttings, which may be taken from the small side shoots in September. It is easy of culture, but thrives best in good, rich soil and bright sunshine, with plenty of water.

NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS

London, England.—The trade is protesting vigorously at the attitude of the authorities. Here is the way one spokesman sums it up: "It is admitted business is to be had for the seeking, because in manufacturing and mining centers money is plentiful and enthusiasm for gardening is keen, but the unfortunate thing is, the idea appears to be prevalent that horticulture is so unnecessary from a national point of view that it doesn't matter seriously if the whole industry is crippled or crushed."

T. van Waveren, under whose leadership the business has flourished and attained its present position in the horticultural trade, will devote his energies toward its further development as president of the company. A branch office was established in New York many years ago and incorporated in 1916 with H. Langeler as managing director.

London, England.—A member of the trade who visited Germany just before the war, says, "The various nurseries I visited were practically all devoted to the production of stock for foreign trade." These nurseries have done no export trade worth mentioning for two years, and will do none this season. Much stuff is, no doubt, spoiled, and is, or will be, burned, but what of the accumulation that is still fit for sale? The seed business will also be affected, as though there has been a leakage of light seeds through the parcel post and other ways to America, there must be big lots of the more bulky and heavy seeds in store, for which openings will be sought.

ROSES FOR EASTER.

Please give us your expert opinion on the following: We have a bed of Paper White narcissi that will be off about January 1. Could we use field-grown, dormant Cecile Brunner roses in the bench afterward and get a crop in for Easter? The temperature of the house is 60 to 65 degrees. How about Brunner or Fireflame for potted plants?

T. N.—S. D.

Such polyantha roses as Cecile Brunner can be had in bloom for Easter without much trouble. They should be dug up and potted at once. This will allow the plants to make some fresh roots before they are started. Store them in a coldframe or cold pit until time for starting arrives. Pack leaves or straw among the pots to prevent hard freezing if the storage place is a cold one. House the plants when your stock of Paper Whites has passed, but do not give them a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees for a start; let it be 45 to 50 degrees at first; then, as growth advances, raise it gradually until 60 degrees at night can be given. Run them a little cooler as the flowers open. Dormant plants set in benches need similar treatment. It would not do at all to start them in a strong heat. You would get better results from plants in pots than from dormant field stock benched in January. C. W.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society at its meeting December 11 in New York registered the new rose, Mrs. Charles Gersdorff, a climbing hybrid tea, offered by Charles E. F. Gersdorff, of Washington, D. C., described as follows:

The plant is of strong climbing habit, sending strong canes yearly from the root, both in spring and fall. The thorns are strong, not too thickly set. It has a profuse and almost constant flowering habit. Flowers generally borne singly, though always in clusters of two to four; foliage durable, remaining in good condition in hot sunshine for five days, by actual test; buds large, like tulips in shape; color a beautiful Killarney pink, shading to blush shell pink. The flowers possess a strong hybrid tea fragrance. This rose has been outdoors for the last seven years, without protection, in both northern and southern exposures, without winter-killing.

A communication was received from Cleveland, O., inviting the coöperation of the American Rose Society in the Cleveland flower show, which is to be held in November, 1917. November 7 will be designated as special rose day. This invitation was accepted.

A contract was ordered signed for the lease of the First Regiment Armory for the spring show to be held in Philadelphia March 20 to 23, inclusive.

Arrangements are being made for a center attraction on the floor of rose gardens. The committee on plant schedule and prizes reported, and the support received so far has caused an increase in the premiums to be awarded for cut roses. There will be a special gold medal valued at $50 offered by Kroeschell Bros., of Chicago. The Toronto Horticultural Society also has sent medals.

WHO SETS THE PRICE?

I see it stated in today's newspaper that the purchasing power of a dollar is only about fifty-three per cent of what it was two years ago. And still flowers are selling at the same old price, are they not? Or practically so. Where is the wisdom of this?

Was there a general complaint that the growers were getting wealthy too fast two years ago? If not, it looks like it is up to us now to sit up nights to eke out an existence.

In recent articles in The Review it has been said that the retailer ought to charge more. Supposing he did, would it do anyone any good but himself? The retailer goes to the wholesaler for his goods and pays the wholesaler's price and sells so as to make something like a certain percentage of profit. I suppose the growers as a class can not set prices, and of course the retailer is not going to pay more than he is asked to pay. Is it not a fact that the wholesaler sets the prices and rules the flower market? Carleton Gould.

WHITE FLY EXTERMINATOR.

I have found a sure remedy for the white fly. It is not poisonous and I give it here for the benefit of those who do not like to use cyanide. Paint a line of pipe with a mixture of sulphur and air-slaked lime in equal parts. Spray the house thoroughly, run the temperature up to 90 degrees and hold it there for two hours. Do this every five days until the eggs on the plants are hatched.

This remedy will be found in L. R. Taft's book, "Greenhouse Management," in which it is given as a remedy for red spider. It was while trying it for red spider that I found it would destroy the white fly. I had a chance to test this remedy thoroughly this year. When I took charge here last June there were some flies in the house, more on the flowers outdoors, and when it became cold the insects came indoors in swarms.

I notice in The Review of December 7 that C. W. tells A. A. S. to sow his calendula seed in pots. I wonder why. I sowed mine in a flat and transplanted them, and I could not ask for better plants than those now coming into bud. John T. Whiting.

THE SITUATION OF SPHAGNUM.

In regard to the moss question, will you permit me to state that this is a matter that could be taken up with some of the large jobbers? They are the ones who put things in that line where they are.

In the first place, pulling sphagnum moss is by no means an easy or pleasant job. Then, after it is pulled in small piles, it has to be carted on small push cars, for few can afford to lay tracks and have motor cars to put it on high land for drying beds. Then, after spreading and turning it until it is fit to be put in the press and baled up, it has to be hauled to the station and shipped to its destination.

Now, this takes time and labor, and then some fine looking gentleman comes along who tells you that moss is coming down and tries to get a contract for all you have. Then the moss man gets busy and writes to some of the firms, but cannot get rid of his moss, so he advertises. He gets some orders, but not enough to get rid of his holdings and finally he lets go of his moss on a contract with some commission firm until they get about all the available moss that is to be had. Then the prices go up. But, on the other hand, if we hold the moss, people get disgusted and will not pull any more than what they get orders for. Unless this thing of the middleman holding down the producer and holding up the consumer is put on a better footing, the supply of moss will be decidedly less within a few years.

There is not much moss in this territory this season; not over 5,000 bales, and prices will run high next spring. I expect to see sphagnum reach the $1 mark at the baling station by April and then everybody will start pulling full blast and just about when the new crop is ready to come in, down comes the price far below what it will cost to pull it, not taking into consideration the baling and the material used in baling. This is the way the moss business stands in this section.

Just as soon as the people who are pulling moss can get a fair price for their crop the public can have all the moss that can be gathered in this section. A fair price at the shipping point in Wisconsin would be about 50 cents without burlap or wire. That would bring the bales to about 70 cents with burlap and 55 cents wired.

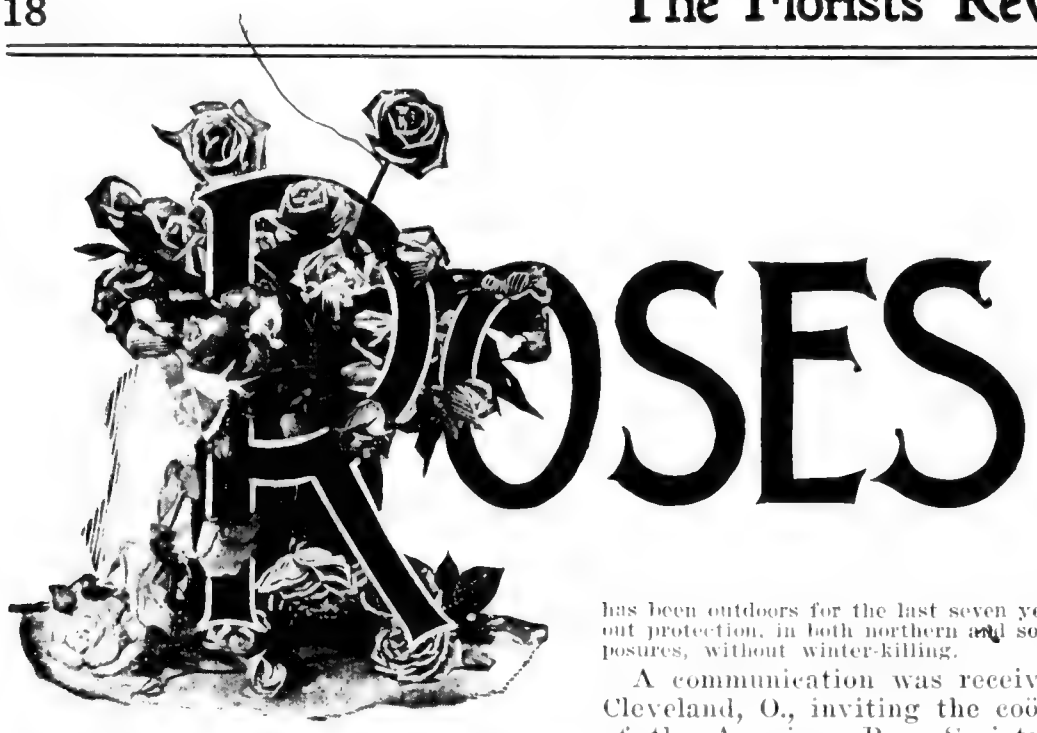
DISEASED GERANIUM FOLIAGE.

I am enclosing some leaves taken from my geraniums. I have found only two plants in this diseased condition. My plants are young and vigorous, and I am at a loss to know the cause of the spotted leaves. It is the new leaves that are affected and I am afraid the disease will spread and prevent me from marketing the cuttings or pot plants. I have been using liquid cow manure quite freely, and the plants are growing well. T. H. G.—N. Y.

You are not treating your geraniums properly. Discontinue the use of cow manure water at once. This makes the plants produce a rank but flabby growth, which makes them fall an easy prey to bacterial diseases. A little liquid manure occasionally is all right in the spring, but it is not needed now, and it is easily overdone even in the spring. If your plants need stimulation a light sprinkle of fine bone is the best food. Scratch the surface after applying the bone. Bone also should be used in the soil for all geraniums, at the rate of a 4-inch potful to a bushel of loam. The bone promotes a sturdy growth and makes plants more floriferous. Constant feeding with liquid manure produces rank, soft wood, which will flower but sparsely.

Pick off all affected leaves, and if only one or two plants are affected throw them away. Keep the house well ventilated. Do not spray the plants; they like a dry, buoyant atmosphere. Plenty of sun and cleanliness below and above the benches will help to keep your plants clean. C. W.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY



E. B. WASHBURN.

WHEN "Ned" Washburn had absorbed the soil chemistry and other fancy farming notions that go with learning the variations of "On Wisconsin" he stepped into a partnership in Bassett & Washburn and settled down to the pleasant life of a cut flower grower at Chicago. A beautiful wife soon came to make his lot a happy one. But the rigors of the winters beside Lake Michigan proved too rough for him; the mellow climate at Pasadena was what he needed to maintain robust health. So he settled there. Then time hung heavy. The result is the Pacific coast branch of Bassett & Washburn, at Sierra Madre. There palms will be the specialty, grown under glass and under lath. The nucleus of the establishment is just approaching completion; its development will be carried on contemporaneously with the education of three fine boys as the fourth generation of florists in this family.

Honeoye Falls, N. Y.—Charles Fowler has erected an addition to his range, which will be devoted to vegetable and bedding plants.

Decatur, Ill.—Henry Gerstenkorn has bought out the interest of his partner in the firm of Gerstenkorn & Klumpp, and will conduct the business under his own name in the future. The firm formerly was Charonne & Klumpp.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Washington, D. C., enjoyed to the full the displays made by the tradesmen during the chrysanthemum season, all of them exhibiting according to their various possibilities. The Gude Bros. Co. extended its show into a second week—"By request," observed W. F. Gude, "as many of our best people had not yet returned home. Yes, we keep a register of our distinguished visitors and regard it with pride—please sign here. We have tried to surpass ourselves in the decoration of our store." The latest thing is varicolored electric fountains. Cages containing song birds were all about and, to my surprise, from a group of palms came the sweet notes of the nightingale. "You are not the only one who has been charmed by its singing," said Mr. Gude. "A day or so ago a woman customer was speaking with me over the telephone, when, on hearing the nightingale's song, she requested as a favor that the line be kept open for a while, as she had not heard the bird's song since she was in Switzerland, twenty years ago. 'But how is it,' said she, 'that this bird is singing in the afternoon, when it usually sings in the evening, at twilight?' 'That's because of the electric light,' was my answer. Although terribly busy, we must observe the principle of courtesy to our patrons." Noting a handsome aquarium filled with rare fish, my attention was called to a "tumbler." "It is sometimes on its stomach looking down, then on its back looking up, illustrating the condition of business," observed Mr. Gude.

F. Fallon, of Roanoke, Va., is a firm believer in advertising, as is seen by the artistic signboards when approaching his town. The store, recently remodeled, shows the stock up well. Business is only limited by the supply.

Norfolk, Va., needed a sharp frost to cut down the outdoor chrysanthemums, was the opinion of L. A. Blick, who said that several amateurs have caught on to the method of disbudding and that their flowers rival the greenhouse-grown stock.

J. W. Grandy, of Norfolk, commented on the rapid strides made in the business. He introduced the "Saturday Box Special," one of the best cards played. He is not in sympathy with those who sell carnations at 60 cents per dozen.

A. B. Garden, of Anacostia, reports an excellent market business, especially since stock has been cut down in the gardens. Bulbs are selling well, with good orders for planting. W. M.

Appletown, Md.—After a little bookkeeping to check up costs, production and sales, D. H. Green says he is well satisfied with his mum season. More than 600 dozen of his best mums were shipped to eager Washington buyers at Thanksgiving.

Aberdeen, Miss.—The Aberdeen Floral Co. and J. W. Moore will open a flower store at 113 Capital avenue, Jackson, Miss., January 1. The fixtures will be furnished by A. L. Randall Co., of Chicago. The Aberdeen Floral Co. houses will be managed by J. M. Moore, of Bristol, Tenn., formerly with Hugh Seals, Birmingham. It is the intention of this company to make numerous improvements the coming season.

Brunswick, Ga.—C. S. Tait, bulb grower, is specializing on the amaryllis and this season is marketing some 3,000 bulbs of his seedlings. In establishing his stock he bought all over Europe and also secured 500 unbloomed American seedlings, from which he selected the best. He believes he has a stock that is fairly representative of the best the genus affords. The blooming season here is the last part of March and first part of April and 15,000 bulbs will make a grand show at that time in 1917.

Springdale, Ark.—S. L. Johnson recently has completed a greenhouse, 54x 100, of Moninger material.

New Orleans, La.—The work of moving the large greenhouse on the old Howard property next to the City hall to Audubon park, for the propagation of ladybugs to fight the cushiony scale pest, has been completed.

College Station, Tex.—The first annual exhibition of the Department of Horticulture of the Texas A. & M. College was held December 8 and 9. The show was a decided success. Perhaps the most prominent exhibit was the display of Texas-grown Satsuma oranges and grapefruits, along with the citrus fruits of California and Florida; but the most striking feature of the show was the showing of chrysanthemums, roses, ferns, azaleas, begonias, primulas and cyclamens. The exhibit of named varieties of pecans was, perhaps, as great as any collection ever exhibited in America. The Landscape Art division of the department had a collection of eighteen designs from the Department of Landscape Architecture of Harvard University, as well as many designs made by the students of the department.

OBITUARY

William Crawford Barry.

In the death of William Crawford Barry, president of Ellwanger & Barry, Inc., of Rochester, N. Y., than whom there were few more able nurserymen, American horticulture has lost a leading exponent. Ten days prior to his decease, Mr. Barry contracted a severe cold, which, abetted by acute kidney disease, developed into pneumonia. Although the patient rallied and hope for his recovery was entertained during the last days of his life, a sudden relapse was followed by death on the morning of December 12, at the family residence, 706 Mount Hope avenue.

As an expert technical and practical horticulturist Mr. Barry occupied a position at the head of the profession; but his energies also found play in numerous enterprises outside the nursery business. He was a many-sided man, one to whom the city of Rochester owes a great debt of gratitude, for Mr. Barry assumed a leader's part in the birth and growth of Rochester's park system. He was closely, although not ostentatiously, identified with the great commercial development of Rochester, and he and his colleagues frequently were deservedly lauded in the public press for their civic generosity. Mr. Barry was an ex-president of the American Rose Society, ex-president of the American Association of Nurserymen, ex-president of the Eastern Nurserymen's Association, and for twenty-seven years president of the Western New York Horticultural Society. He also was a member of many other bodies, as enumerated later on.

The decedent first saw the light of day at Rochester, September 17, 1847, so that at the time of his death he was one year short of the allotted threescore and ten. He was the son of Patrick Barry, a pioneer nurseryman of the eastern country and a pomological author of note, who, in 1840, in partnership with the late George Ellwanger, formed the firm of Ellwanger & Barry. The nursery business, therefore, engaged the attention of Mr. Barry when a lad.

Young Barry was tutored at home for a number of years and subsequently became a student at Seton Hall College, of New Jersey. After completing his college course he was sent to Europe, where he studied at Heidelberg and Louvain. Among other things, he acquired a comprehensive knowledge of French and German and was able to converse in these languages almost as fluently as a native. Returning home in 1873, at the age of 26, Mr. Barry took up the details of the nursery business established by his father and Mr. Ellwanger. He started at the bottom and mastered each department, one by one, and when the firm was made a corporation in 1890 he was elected treasurer. Later he became president of the concern, which operates the Mount Hope Nurseries.

Although few men have succeeded in mastering so thoroughly the many branches of the profession, Mr. Barry gave the study of rose culture his especial attention. He was the prime mover in the reorganization of the American Rose Society at New York, in 1899, becoming its first president. He was the author of several pamphlets on rose propagation.

No sketch of Mr. Barry's career would be adequate without a description of his work as president of the Ellwanger & Barry Realty Co., a subsidiary concern of the nursery, which was such an important factor in the beautification of the residence section, or the city bordering on Highland park. Indeed, it was largely through the taste and example of Mr. Barry that the homes in that and other sections of the city became so attractive as to win for Rochester the cognomen of "City of Homes." Mr. Barry was a member of the Rochester park commission from its inception until it disbanded in 1915. He was particularly interested in the formation of Highland park and took much pride in its popularity. Nearly twenty acres of land were presented to the city by Ellwanger & Barry as the first step in its creation. In this way and that, Mr. Barry added to the park, got appropriations for it and, through the assistance of Prof. C. S. Sargent, of the Arnold Arboretum, of Boston, increased its educational value and beauty. In 1890, in celebration of Ellwanger & Barry's semicentennial anniversary, the company erected an elaborate 2-story pavilion at Highland park and dedicated it to the children of Rochester.

Mr. Barry lived to see his Lilac day, which now is an annual feature in Rochester's parks. In 1909 Mr. Barry introduced the variety of lilacs known as Syringea cærulea superba, which is considered one of the best of its color, a rich blue. Mr. Barry at this time printed several treatises on lilacs.

A splendid presiding officer, Mr. Barry became president of the Western New York Horticultural Society and served in that office for twenty-seven years; in fact, the members of that most utilitarian body would not permit him to retire and he died the incumbent of the office of president. During his administration the membership grew from 300 to 1,500. As previously stated, Mr. Barry served as president of the American Rose Society, of the American Association of Nurserymen and of the Eastern Nurserymen's Association. He also was deeply interested in the State College of Agriculture at Cornell University and in the establishment of experimental stations. He was president of the board of control of the New York State Experimental Station and was a member of the American Pomological Society. He was a member of the Chamber of Commerce and the Business Men's Association and at one time was connected with the various electrical railways and railroad enterprises of Rochester. Mr. Barry was president of several of the leading banking institutions of the city at the time of his death. His name frequently had been mentioned for the position of mayor.

Funeral services were held Thursday, December 14, at St. Patrick's Cathedral. The services were largely attended, including Hiram H. Edgerton, mayor of Rochester, city officials, county officials, several court judges, members of the park board, a large representation of the horticultural society, officers of the Chamber of Commerce, members of the Rochester Florists' Association, officers and directors of the city banks and the employees of Ellwanger & Barry, Inc.

Mr. Barry is survived by three sons, William C., Jr., Frederick G. and Arthur A. Barry; a daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Stearns, and a sister, Mrs. B. Leisching. Mrs. W. C. Barry, nee Miss Louise Gaffney, whom the decedent married in 1874, died five years ago.

William C. Barry.

Charles A. Hanley.

Charles A. Hanley, of Orange, N. J., was stricken with paralysis December 11 while at the station of the Lackawanna railroad at Orange, and died before midnight. He was to take charge of laying out the flower beds and shrubbery around the new station. Mr. Hanley was 49 years old. He was a native of West Orange and had been a florist all his life. Besides his wife, he leaves two daughters and three sons. Interment was at St. John's cemetery, Orange. R. B. M.

George Hunter.

George Hunter, senior member of the Crabb & Hunter Floral Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich., died December 14 at the home of his son-in-law, George F. Crabb. He would have reached the age of 90 had he lived until spring.

Although Mr. Hunter was in the florists' business for thirty years, he was not well known commercially, as his interests were mostly with the mechanical ends of the business. Born at Leith, Scotland, May 31, 1827, he came to this country at the age of 20 and began his career hauling logs on the site of what now is Cleveland. Later he became interested in the chain-making business at Detroit. Thirty years ago he moved to Grand Rapids with George F. Crabb and established the florists' business of Crabb & Hunter Floral Co.

Mr. Hunter was a studious man and gleaned a fine education from books after reaching this country. Many floral tributes from the trade were in evidence at the funeral services, which were held December 16. He is survived by three sisters and nine grandchildren. A. F. C.

George Sawyer.

George Sawyer, of Murray Hill, N. J., died December 7 at the Overlook hospital, at Summit, N. J. The deceased entered the hospital for an operation for cancer, and, while the operation itself was successful, he did not rally from the effects of the cancer.

The decedent was one of the foremen at the L. B. Coddington rose growing establishment, at Murray Hill. He was well liked by all who knew him and a most valued friend. He is survived by his wife, three children, two sisters and his father and mother.

Decatur, Ill.—This town recently has had an exhibition of the folly of price cutting, for as late as December 15 two of the local florists were trying to see which one could lose the most money selling carnations at 15 cents per dozen and paying the advertising bill.

Huntingburg, Ind.—Peter Morgen is increasing his facilities with much regularity. A potting shed 63x75 feet has just been added, a greenhouse 15x150 and a plant house 33x60. Beauties continue to be his leading specialty, but he also finds a profit in roses, carnations, lilies and other bulbous stock and is trying the forcing of imported pot plants.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

ANONYMOUS inquiries always go into the waste basket. To receive attention, full name and address are required.

TOMORROW, December 22, will be the shortest day of the year, not only by the almanac but by comparison with what the average florist must encompass in the way of work.

THE great conflict will leave an impress on the trade, more or less permanent as the longevity of the varieties develops, through the strong tendency to apply to novelties names brought to notice by the war happenings.

NOW come reports that orders for both English and French Manetti stocks are being cut heavily, with the prospect that deliveries will be so far short that a normal demand for grafted rose plants can not be met next spring.

AN unfortunate number of claims for frost losses have been filed with the express companies as a result of the cold snaps of November and December. Readers of The Review are urged to be as reasonable as possible in such matters, as the companies will raise rates if the business is considered unprofitable.

IN every line of business there are men who are afraid—who never ask quite as much as their competitors. Sometimes it is because of a consciousness of the inferiority of merchandise or service, but among florists it more often is simply for want of confidence; one man could get as good prices as another if he only thought so.

THE Census Bureau has been investigating the cost of delivery as affecting retail prices and has found that with ice, coal, wood and milk the cost of delivery is about eight per cent of the retail price. How is it with flowers?

THE settlement of the season's losses on azaleas will be a difficult matter, as between shipper, purchaser, forwarding agent and transportation company. The insurance people stayed out of it after last year's experience and have reason to congratulate themselves.

HARD LINES!

The law known as the Act of August 24, 1912, makes a publisher liable to a fine if he prints in his reading columns statements which properly are advertising matter and fails to add the word "Advertisement," or "Adv." Although the law has been in existence four years, no effort has been made to enforce it until recently. The Post-office Department has just drawn the attention of daily newspapers in many cities that the automobile notes, published as reading notices, really are advertising matter which, while printed without direct charge, are quite plainly a part of the service given on an order for other advertising in the same or a subsequent issue and that such reading notices must be plainly marked "Advertisement," as the law requires.

If the post-office ever gets around to enforcing the law with respect to certain trade papers the word "Advertisement" will be more overworked than the word "very" now is in their text pages.

A REASON FOR CLOSER CREDITS.

The following is printed on a paster attached to the trade list of W. W. Wilmore:

I wish to say to the trade in general that, with the exception of postage stamps, everything connected with the management of my business, from the tools used in the production of the crops to the paper on which the finished product is billed, has advanced in price from twenty per cent to over 100 per cent in the last year or two—still I am quoting the same prices as heretofore. And while I realize that this course will cut into the season's profits, still I hope to serve my patrons and still have a working profit left over.

To do so will require more care in extending credit to persons unknown to me and also to those who in the past have been negligent in meeting their obligations when due. Orders, therefore, from persons unknown to me must be accompanied with the remittance or satisfactory references or the order will not be recognized.

Tracing references causes delay in executing orders. I trust that the reasonableness of the foregoing will appeal to all fair-minded people.

With costs as they are, losses through the accumulation of uncollectable accounts become a serious item and nearly everyone is examining credits more closely than in years when margins of profit were wider.

MUST EARN OUR MONEY.

This is a Christmas that florists will be compelled to earn every cent of profit they make. The cold wave is general over almost the entire United States and it adds tremendously to the difficulties of the holiday season. In the first place, it has held back the shoppers, reducing the early buying and adding to the rush that always comes as Christmas eve approaches. In another direction it has added to the complexity of the situation because the cold, dark, snowy weather has reduced the supplies of stock; reports indicate that the supplies of cut flowers as well as those of blooming plants are less than usual this year in spite of the rapid increase in glass. But after the florist has taken his orders and found the stock to fill them with, his troubles are by no means at an end. Delivery with the temperature in the neighborhood of zero is no joke. Unusually thorough wrapping must be done this season because of the unusual severity of the weather. Those wholesalers who have neglected it already are paying the penalty, because they are having complaints that stock has been frozen in transit. The retailers must wrap heavily and carefully or they will meet with large losses in delivery; at zero plants cannot make the trip from curb to doorway without thorough covering.

THE PENULTIMATE NOTICE.

No subscriptions to The Review mailed after December 31 will be accepted for a full year unless accompanied by a remittance of $1.50, but so long as 1916 is with us any member of the trade is welcome to extend a present subscription or enter a new subscription at the old rate of $1 per year. Welcome, although this is the way a Maine subscriber looked at it:

Please advance the date of my subscription two years, although on account of the increased cost of paper it seems like taking advantage of you.—G. W. Huff, Sanford, Me., December 11, 1916.

Although The Review's paper bill in November was $1,500 greater than in the same month of 1915, the publishers want every reader who will feel the extra 50 cents to take advantage of the opportunity to save the money—go as far as you like:

Enclosed is a check for $7 for extension of subscription seven years from date of expiration (June 7, 1917), as we find The Review indispensable.—Lyle E. Severance, Lansing, Mich., December 7, 1916.

The assurance of even larger circulation than ever, thus given for 1917, insures the continuation of prompt returns to advertisers. Like this:

The ad in The Review did it; sold out the first day; had about twenty offers for my plants.—Henry Gerstenkorn, Decatur, Ill., December 8, 1916.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The dark and cold weather of last week shortened all stock considerably. This shortage was further added to by the fact that growers were holding back as much stock as possible so as to have it in the market after Christmas prices went into effect. Apparently what was true of Chicago obtained nearly all over the country, for many outside markets drew on Chicago for their wants. This, together with a brisk demand from regular customers, made for a good shipping business and tended to tighten up prices considerably. The demand from outside customers was so great that it was at times almost impossible to fill orders. Local trade, on the other hand, was slow and, while larger retailers were kept busy with parties and special work, almost all of the smaller dealers complained of poor business, a not unusual condition in the fortnight before Christmas.

Present indications are that this Christmas will be a most successful one for florists, retailers, wholesalers and growers alike. That there is a general shortage of stock seems certain, but just how short the supply of cut flowers will be it is difficult to estimate. That high prices will be asked and obtained seems a matter of certainty, however. More early advance orders have been booked this season than any previous year, which would indicate that the retail trade is looking for good business and is anxious to make certain of receiving its supply in ample time.

All varieties of roses have been in short supply for the last week and no difficulty has been found in clearing stock at good prices. American Beauties in all lengths generally are reported scarce and clearing easily. Carnations have shortened up considerably in the last few days and prices are steadily advancing. Indications are that red varieties will be as scarce as ever and no difficulty should be found in obtaining good prices for them. A few mums may still be seen on the market.

Lilies are arriving in larger quantities and are moving more easily. The supply of valley is just about meeting the demand. Violets are arriving in good supply and are clearing fairly well. Sweet peas are in larger supply, the quality is improved and they sell readily at good prices. The demand for calendulas has been constantly increasing and good prices are being obtained. The supply is a little short. Paper Whites are about the only flowers in oversupply and are moving slowly. Stevia has shortened up markedly, the quality of the stock is good and it is clearing readily. Roman hyacinths and bouvardia may be seen in small supply. The supply of winterberries is at present far below par. Not only has the excessive cold in Michigan, together with sleet and snow, made it almost impossible to obtain pickers, but it also has impaired the quality of the berries, turning them black.

Losses on California Stock.

It develops that the California shippers and the express companies which encouraged them to try the long-distance shipments have encountered enough difficulties to make it seem fairly certain that the Chicago market will not be seriously affected by this competition.

The cold snap caused heavy losses by freezing while crossing the western states in the special refrigerator cars. These claims follow others made in November as the result of losses on the chrysanthemum shipments and, if they have not discouraged the shippers and consignees, have caused the express companies to reconsider the proposition. Where they formerly solicited business for as well as of the California shippers, they now are holding back until they can figure out a way of preventing the losses, as the claims have made the business unprofitable.

It looks as though it would be found that the radius of successful regular business for the Californians would be found to fall quite a little short of reaching Chicago and that this market can be entered profitably only under exceptional circumstances.

Various Notes.

Early in the Christmas rush many of the retailers noted a disposition to buy the better grades of stock this year. Persons who came in to spend $5 saw something they liked and did not hesitate if the price was twice what they had intended to spend. The result was that in many cases the retailers came into the market to buy better grades of flowers than they had intended using.

Certain members of the trade have this week received a telegram as follows: "New member of our firm, Edward H. Goldenstein. Langhout & Co." The firm whose name is signed to the telegram is a well known one at Sassenheim, Holland, whose representatives at present are in this country. Mr. Goldenstein, who is well known in the bulb trade as connected with a Chicago house, has made no announcement.

August Jurgens underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Alexian Brothers hospital last week.

Schiller has sent out a 12-page Christmas folder showing plants in colors and has enclosed with it a notice that the three Schiller stores will be open all day and evening Sunday, December 24, and also Christmas day. Evidently the motto there is "Make hay while the sun shines."

The Birchwood Flower Shop, formerly located at 1534 Jarvis avenue, has removed to a new location at 7365 Greenview avenue, where improved facilities were available. The new store is finished in white throughout, the floors being of white marble.

A splendid Christmas trade at his west side store is a secondary consideration with H. N. Bruns, as he has now assured himself of his supply of lily of the valley pips for 1917. The first shipment arrived from Rotterdam December 16, a second one came December 18 and another lot is on the way from New York. It is supposed to be Holland-grown stock.

The E. C. Amling Co. reports the arrival of the first jonquils of the season December 18. The company made a shipment of roses to Boston that day, the order being received by long distance telephone.

At 1046 Argyle street the Argyle Posey Shop is finding this an unusually good season. Mr. Cutler, the proprietor, says a fine lot of ferns sold well during the autumn and that by the middle of December red baskets of ruscus, boxwood, etc., were going rapidly.

A week's trip through the east, principally for the purpose of visiting the rose growing centers around Philadelphia, New York and Boston, has just been made by Otto Amling, Maywood, who has returned with many new ideas for consideration.

Next May Peter Dougas, 1125 Argyle street, will rebuild at that location. The store will be of modern character and there will be two large greenhouses at the rear, which will be of great value in handling a steadily increasing plant trade.

The J. A. Budlong establishment is becoming known in the market as "The Corner House," which in Wall street is the title given J. P. Morgan & Co.

With an early expiration of his lease at 11 West Randolph street, John A. Huebner is looking about for a location where he can better his facilities. Of course a renewal of his present lease means an increased rental.

Because he had an excellent crop of gladiolus bulbs at his farm in Michigan this year A. L. Randall considers himself particularly lucky.

Although he has been uniformly successful, A. H. Schneider never had a better season with cyclamens than this year. The plants were unusually fine and as early as December 15 he had sold every one except those set aside for his own retail store in Oak Park.

E. T. Wanzer, who sold his greenhouses at Wheaton several years ago and retired, now lives in Oak Park. He still keeps in touch with the trade by frequent visits to the A. L. Randall Co., where he shipped his flowers in the old days.

The George Wittbold Co. sent out an unusually elaborate folder to its retail trade this Christmas. It consisted of eight pages printed in colors and enclosed in an attractive wrapper made to give the appearance of a box.

F. J. Scibior opened up a retail store at 2004 Armitage avenue this week.

Sam Pearce, whose present specialty is Easter lilies, soon will be cutting bulbous stock in quantity. Anticipating a good season, he has made arrangements to increase his output considerably during the spring of 1917.

An attractive changeable aquarium containing goldfish and surmounted with a spray of vandas was on display in one of George Wienhoeber's windows last week. This aquarium has recently been patented and that at Mr. Wienhoeber's store is one of the first manufactured. An electric lighting device beneath the glass tank reflects red, lavender and yellow light through the aquarium. Mr. Wienhoeber has several of them for his Christmas trade.

"Wanted—Girls to Make Wreaths" is the sign that has decorated the front of Winterson's Seed Store for several days. The demand for holly wreaths and lycopodium roping has been unusually good and help enough to keep up with the orders has been difficult to find.

P. L. McKee and B. F. Dupre, of the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., motored from Ft. Dodge, Ia., to Chicago last week during the coldest weather. The only tool they carried was a 10-cent wrench and even it was not needed.

A. Miller is in Detroit this week, but is expected home before Christmas. Sam Seligman and Robert Newcomb also are on the way home to spend the holidays.

Visitors.

Wholesalers say the last few days have brought an unprecedented number of inquiries and orders from eastern cities which usually do not draw stock from this market, which has given the impression that the east is short of cut flowers this Christmas. But J. E. Fancourt, representing the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, and F. W. Romer, representing the Briarcliffe Greenhouses, Scarboro, N. Y., both were here last week looking for orders for Beauties, which does not look like a shortage. The eastern orders, however, have not been for Beauties, but for Russell and other roses.

We have had two gentlemen from Winnipeg in our midst this week. H. E. Philpott, who is president of Pyfer & Co., came down as usual to lend a hand, and J. H. Bowyer, of Norwood Grove, a suburb of Winnipeg, also is here. Mr. Bowyer is a plantsman and pickle packer and has been under the chaperonage of C. S. Claussen.

The Bedford Floral Co., Ltd., Bedford, Ontario, Canada, was represented in Chicago last week by two of its members who visited the houses of Weiland & Risch to inspect Champ Weiland rose.

The presence of the following visitors was noted in Chicago last week: H. S. Will, Minneapolis, Minn.; J. R. Millman, Milwaukee, Wis.; G. B. Frank, Champaign, Ill.; A. B. Barber, Cleveland, Ohio; Frank Gorly, St. Louis, Mo.; Arthur Schultz, Hammond, Ind.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Christmas is with us once again, and conditions this year seem to be worse than the local market has seen in some time. In the first place, there is a tremendous call for all kinds of stock. The general supply is far short, and it seems as though there will not be a satisfied florist, wholesaler or retailer, in this vicinity. Carnations seem to be in best supply, but the demand for red is so great that, despite the supply, there undoubtedly will be a shortage of this stock.

Roses are extremely scarce. Mrs. Charles Russell and Ophelia, which bear the brunt of the attack, are in short supply, and it is next to impossible to fill orders for these varieties. The quality is excellent and well worth the price charged, but that does not increase the supply, and these will be almost unobtainable at any price. Of course the demand for red roses is strong and the supply is light, although a good proportion of the crop will be of this color. Killarney and White Killarney are selling well and good prices are realized on them because of their extreme shortage.

Violets also are unusually scarce, the supply of the doubles being far short of the demand, and there are practically no singles to be had. The so-called Sweetheart roses are being substituted in many instances and are giving satisfaction in every case. The supply of orchids is fairly large, but the cut is disposed of easily at $12 per dozen. There are some exceptionally fine cattleyas to be had and, considering the quality, the buyer is getting his money's worth even at the above price.

There are few sweet peas in the market, and they are picked up readily at good prices. There has been no change in the valley situation, and it is almost impossible to supply any of this stock, regardless of price.

The sale of supplies, such as wreaths, ruscus, frieze, etc., has been brisk this season, as the retailers must have something to offer their trade in place of the usual cut stock and plants.

This brings up the plant situation, which is as bad as we ever want to see it for a holiday. Azaleas, while they reached this country, were so late in arrival and in such poor condition that it was impossible to take care of any orders for early delivery. Even with hard forcing it is doubtful if they will be in shape to sell at the end of the week. This leaves a tremendous hole in the market which the other plants cannot begin to fill. Due to the fact that other plants, especially the blooming kinds, were only in small supply, foliage plants had an exceptionally quick sale; and it was impossible to get an order filled on most kinds two weeks ago.

Nobody makes any money when such conditions obtain, even if the prices advance, as they necessarily do when there is a decrease in the supply. The condition is unhealthy, and all we can hope is that spring business will be a great improvement over the present holiday season. H. J. S.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business this week surpassed that of last week, despite the scarcity of stock. The present indications are that roses of good quality will not be overplentiful at Christmas. Carnations will be more abundant and will not bring the high prices of previous years, white and colors other than red now bringing $5 and $6, and red selling at $7 and $8. Poinsettias of good quality are making their appearance and the prospects are that they will be plentiful, with prices ranging from $1.50 to $5 per dozen. Smaller flowers, such as violets and sweet peas, will surpass last year's supply. The quality and prices of valley and orchids will be about the same as in previous holiday seasons.

The demand for holly, evergreens and Christmas trees has been unusually large, but this branch of the business is fast slipping from the florists, as every corner grocery handles trees and wreaths. Fancy wreaths for holiday purposes arrive and are used by the florists in place of holly. These are made of magnolia leaves festooned with thistle, red berries, teasel, red ruscus and immortelles.

Various Notes.

A. F. J. Baur attended the St. Louis Florists' Club's meeting last week and took with him his new carnation, Merry Christmas, which scored eighty-nine points. He is at present sending out premium lists for the carnation show and anyone desiring any information with reference to the show should address Secretary Baur. All entries for the show must be in by January 21.

Robert Glaubke is the proud father of a baby girl.

Several shipments of fancy plants have been received from the east in a frozen condition.

The local branch of the Weather Bureau now is sending out daily notices of weather conditions, which are posted in the downtown flower stores and commission houses.

The Holland bulbs now are coming into bloom, but with little profit for the growers, because of their high price, lateness and poor percentage of good flowers.

The coal shortage is being felt again in this locality. Also a shortage of pots, even at an advance of twenty per cent.

The A. Wiegand's Sons Co. had a house devoted entirely to poinsettias, which was a beautiful sight with the plants in bloom.

The E. G. Hill Co. and the Pahud Floral Co. had unusually attractive Christmas windows.

Rose growers of Indianapolis and vicinity are bewailing the fact that they will have to do without Manetti stock.

Leo Rickenbach and Albert Kempe have been picking fine sweet peas, with prospects good for a Christmas crop.

Although there has been a great demand for them, ferns this year have been poor. Despite this, prices have been high and a shortage has been predicted for the holiday season.

Temperley's have a fine line of Chatelaine begonias from 5 to 8-inch pots.

The Circle Flower Store reports successful business so far. It has been having quite a run on corsage bouquets for debutante parties.

H. W. Rieman was extremely busy with funeral work last week. He was well satisfied with Christmas prospects, as orders came in earlier than usual.

A. W. Herre, of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, visited the trade last week.

C. H. Bookedis, proprietor of the Claypool hotel flower store, has always prided himself on his display window and called it his "silent salesman," but this year his Christmas window ceases to be silent—it is a scream of blazing Christmas red. The interior of the store is in keeping with the windows—everything is most attractive in its Christmas dress. E. E. T.

This year's Christmas business will exceed that of any other year by just as large a percentage as the trade will be able to handle—that is, there will be no limit to the amount of business that can be had during the last three days, providing one has the help, the equipment and the stock. McCray Florists' Refrigerators

The McCRAY construction keeps flowers cool and fresh longer than by any other system of refrigeration. It provides an even temperature of the correct degree for cut flowers and stops the great waste and profit loss that is caused by imperfect refrigeration.

The various compartments in a McCRAY are of different sizes to accommodate the different lengths of cut flower stems and your flowers are given an inviting display.

For interior linings you have your choice of either handsome bevel plate mirror or beautiful white enamel, which are very easy to clean. The exterior may be of any finish desired to match the interior of your store woodwork or other fixtures.

Invest in a McCRAY. Make it a partner in your business. You will value it more highly than its mere intrinsic dollar-and-cents value. Investigate anyway!

azaleas, which are quite scarce, begonias, cyclamens, poinsettias, etc., are sold out by the growers, and in many cases they have been sold out since December 1. Good blooming plants were plentiful in this market, with more cyclamens and begonias grown than ever before.

Cut stock promises to go the same way, advance orders showing that the retailer is alive to his opportunity.

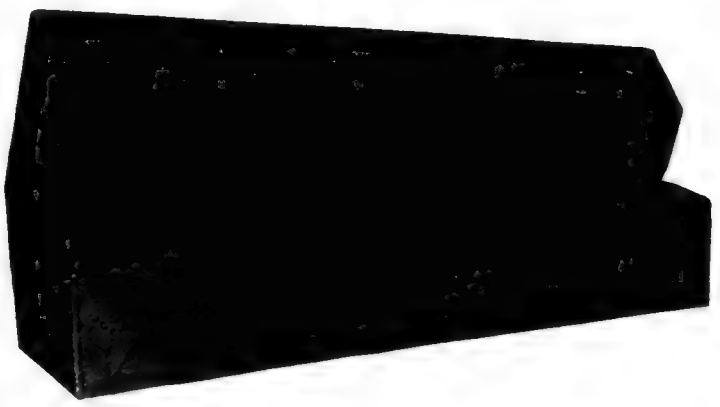
Various Notes.

Joseph Hill, of Richmond, Ind., and Henry Sheppard, of Hill's Cincinnati store, were visitors recently. They took in the wholesale market and called on the downtown stores and a few greenhouses, under the guidance of Herman Knoble.

Alterations in the store of Knoble Bros. are completed and the force is ready for the rush. The firm now has one of the best looking stores in the middle west; the improvements made have worked wonders in the appearance of the store.

Monday evening, January 8, the Florists' Club will hold a bulb night. Exhibits of any flowering bulbous stock will be appreciated. John Van Leeuwen, of Sassenheim, Holland, will address the club on "Bulbs." F. A. F.

BUFFALO.



The Market.

The usual lull before Christmas was not so marked this season. Last week's business was most satisfactory; the supply of stock was not equal to the demand. The cold weather had a tendency to shut off the supply of roses, but, then, most of the growers were holding stock back as much as possible for Christmas. Perhaps never before have there been so many mums for Christmas as this year.

Beauties are of excellent quality and in sufficient numbers, and there has been a good demand for them during the last few weeks. Other varieties of roses also are excellent. Without a doubt higher prices will be paid this year than ever before and retailers will be glad to get stock at any figures. Killarney, which has been off color, is coming in satisfactorily for Christmas.

Carnations have been selling at a good figure, but the price will soar still higher. Some extra fine blooms of Ward are coming in, with Beacon and Enchantress following closely. Lilies are more abundant, many of them arriving from eastern points. Paper Whites are plentiful. Orchids and valley are enjoying a better demand, and it seems that violets, both double and single, will again reach their former goal, as the sales are increasing. The small supply of sweet peas has a tendency to stimulate the sale of violets. Mignonette is scarce. Marigolds continue to clear

Walter Stroh, of Batavia, was in town last week. Although his crops are not so large as in previous years, he expects to do more business than ever before. Thanksgiving trade with him was most satisfactory.

The feature at Stroh's new store last week was the display of about fifteen lemons, which were grown on one tree in the greenhouses at Attica. The largest of the fruits weighed as much as three pounds. It is assured by Ed. that these make excellent lemon pies.

Artificial Christmas goods evidently will experience a fair demand this year, due to the fact that fresh cut flowers and plants are scarce.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There is every indication of a white Christmas. Two snow storms were accompanied by a degree of cold that strikes terror to the heart of the shipper of perishable plants and flowers. Extraordinary efforts are being made to get this perishable product safely to its destination, with what success will be known later. The usual period of dullness that precedes Christmas and the holidays has been absent. The market has been active from December 14 to December 20, with no surplus of stock; in fact, so light has been the supply that Christmas prices, or what is expected to be Christmas prices, went into effect December 18 and 19. Carnations took a sharp advance in the face of light receipts and cold, dark weather. Other flowers shared in the advance to a lesser extent. Roses advanced more in the lower grades than in the higher, or rather that advance was more apparent, the trading in fancies being light this week. The whole tone of the market is to take what you can get and be glad to get it, rather than the critical spirit fostered by fall surpluses.

Reviewing the market just before a big holiday is rather stupid stuff, but there are a few points worth noting. The heavy demand for flowering plants has consumed, as far as the growers are concerned, a supply of great size. The effect of this great demand has been to increase the number and size of the advance orders for cut flowers. Outside of roses, also Paper Whites and stevia, the supply of cut flowers is below normal. The trading in Christmas greens has been extremely heavy.

A Rose Garden.

When it became known that the American Rose Society was to hold a show of its own in this city next March, that it would cease to be the tail to some other society's kite and make an earnest effort to become a power in the land, all the wiseacres wisely wagged their heads and said that the show would succeed, provided the society get a rose garden. Everybody enjoys plants, everybody enjoys cut flowers, but everybody goes perfectly crazy about a rose garden.

Now it is a pleasure to announce that the first rose garden has been entered for the first own show of the American Rose Society, which will be held in the First Regiment Armory in this city next March. J. D. Eisele has promised in behalf of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., that a rose garden will be planned and executed, and that no effort will be spared to make it attractive. With a rose garden assured, a guarantee fund raised and a band of earnest workers interested, the prospects for the success of the show are bright.

The Originator of Milady.

I wonder if those western rose growers who are doing so well with the red rose, Milady, ever met "Teddy" Towill, of Roslyn. If they didn't they have something pleasant ahead, for a jollier, more enthusiastic rosarian than "Teddy" Towill never used the camel's-hair brush.

It happened at the rose meeting to start the rose show that a reproachful look and a peep at a box of seedlings prompted a visit to Roslyn. It is an understood thing that the visitor to Roslyn, he who is familiar with floral etiquette, calls on Mr. Farenwald, Mr. Groshens and Mr. Towill, all three in one afternoon. An S. O. S. call and divers duties made it so late on that eventful afternoon that it was possible to make only one call. So an hour was given over to the delight of "Teddy" Towill's seedlings and his talk about them, beginning with his description of the choice of the name, Milady, "a rose that a man can send to someone who is not his wife"—what a chance for the sisters, the cousins and the aunts, to say nothing of the best girl!—down to his new yellow, the Gem. It was all delightful.

There were pots of seedlings just coming up; crosses of Kaiserin and White Killarney and Joseph Hill, a favorite of Mr. Towill, and Richmond and Ophelia and many more. The prime factor in success, Mr. Towill thinks, is to select as pod parents varieties of which the seeds mature rapidly. There is a great difference in the time required to mature seed; the slow varieties he considers too slow for practical purposes. Of course, this is only one point of many necessary to form a good cross.

The bed of seedlings was a treat. There were three or four of unusual merit. A white of immense size, two pinks and one salmon-pink were especially charming. There were several promising yellows. The Gem has passed into a more advanced stage; three beds of it are blooming freely in a way to interest Mrs. Aaron Ward, could she but see. A mere list of the crosses and the impressions they made would prove futile. Instead, fancy a whole-souled, cheerful man tramping up and down the walk just ahead, pointing out the merit of this or that seedling, giving its history and many a little bit of information besides; then you will see "Teddy" Towill, of Roslyn, displaying his many-colored bed of seedling roses.

Various Notes.

J. Otto Thilow delivered an illustrated lecture December 19 before the Pennsylvania society in Horticultural hall. His subject was "Our Trees, Planting and Care."

Clarence J. Watson has returned to this city from a two weeks' western trip. Mr. Watson was interested in the fine vase of Mrs. Russell roses exhibited by French & Salm before the Chicago Florists' Club.

Herbert W. Johnson, a well known seedsman of this city, died at his home at Haddonfield, N. J., last week. It is a curious and sad coincidence that the deaths of Herbert W. Johnson and Walter P. Stokes, for twenty-five years partners in the firm of Johnson & Stokes, should have occurred within a few short months.

J. J. Jackson now is with the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co.

H. T. Dumont, formerly well known in florists' circles, is with D. B. Martin & Co.

Paul Berkowitz has recovered from his illness and is back at work again. I. M. Bayersdorfer returned from the west December 13.

John Berger, of Berger Bros., reports a good demand for boxwoods. There was some trouble with delayed lycopodium shipments.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Stock generally was scarce last week, following several rapid changes of weather conditions. Carnations are higher than at the same time in any of the last few years. The shortage has been marked since Thanksgiving day. The cold weather lessened the supply of roses, but those that are coming into the market show a marked improvement in quality. Narcissi have begun to come into the market in large quantities and the price has dropped. There are quite a few yellow daisies. Sweet peas sell as quickly as they are received. There still are some good late chrysanthemums, although the supply does not equal the demand. There has been no change in lily of the valley. There is little of it selling, because of its high price. Snapdragon is improving in quality and is in somewhat better demand. Stevia is good and sells fairly well. Wholesalers are somewhat at a loss to understand why the price of violets, both double and single, is so low.

Large quantities of potted plants have made their appearance and the outlook for their sale is good. These have become extremely popular in recent years as Christmas gifts.

Various Notes.

Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa., visited Washington last week at the invitation of the Takoma Park Citizens' Association. Mr. Pyle spoke on "The Arlington Rose Gardens."

William F. Gude has just been selected as chairman of the illumination committee of the inaugural committee. This is the position he held on the occasion of President Wilson's first inauguration. His committee will have in charge the entire additional lighting system of the city. Mr. Gude states that he will select his coworkers of the committee within a few days. In all probability a number of florists will be asked to serve with Mr. Gude.

An effort is being made in Congress, under a bill introduced by Representative Barnhart, of Indiana, to bring about the freer sale of poisonous compounds when intended for insecticidal use. The bill proposes to exempt these from the provisions of the District of Columbia pharmacy law.

Among the visitors in Washington last week were F. V. Covey, of Fredericksburg, Va.; Arthur Niessen, of the Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia; S. A. Starr, of the Goldsboro Floral Co., of Goldsboro, N. C.; Gustav X. Amrhyn, of New Haven, Conn., and Frank Fischer, of Fischer & McGrath, New Castle, Pa.

The Market.

Clear, cold weather opened this important week, but business is seriously threatened by light shipments, high prices and a complete clean-up of blooming plants everywhere in this part of the country. Never has such a combination of obstacles to a successful Christmas existed.

The rose market is a serious problem. The supply is far below the demand, especially in the lower grades, and prices are already as high as the usual Christmas level. Many of the wholesalers think they have already reached their top. Everything now depends upon increase in quantity and there is no certainty of this until the holidays are over. Last week American Beauties were not overabundant and for some choice flowers 60 cents was obtainable. This figure also was offered for the long-stemmed Hadleys. A high mark for the present week probably will be 75 cents for both varieties. Fine Russells held strong at 35 cents and Prima Donna at 25 cents, while Mock, Ophelia, Ward, Stanley, Sunburst, Shawyer, Key and Killarney Brilliant all were quoted at $12 to $15 per hundred December 16, with a further rise anticipated.

Carnations at the week end were held at 6 cents. The outlook for Christmas is not encouraging. Some predictions are unreasonable, but a scarcity is certain, and the reds may reach $15 per hundred. Lilies sold December 16 at $10 to $12 per hundred. The supply is not abundant. Valley was not higher than $5 per hundred last week and no great rise is anticipated for Christmas. Gardenias have fallen to 25 cents each for the best.

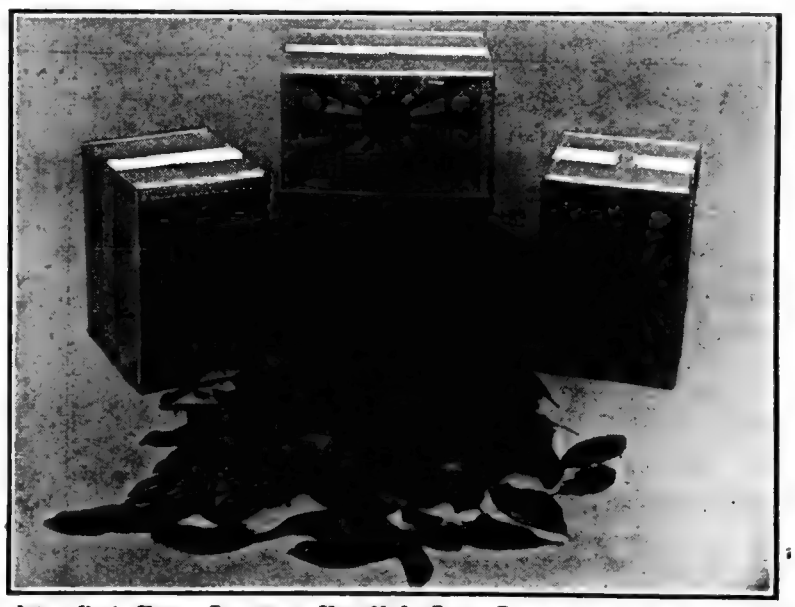
Orchids range from 50 to 75 cents each. The sweet pea shipments are increasing. There will be plenty of violets. Just as was anticipated, there were plenty of good mums in the street last week and there will be some fine late flowers right up to Christmas.

There will be the usual variety in other flowers.



The supply houses are overwhelmed with orders. Everything in green goods is abundant and the demand has been enormous.

NATURAL SPRUCE MINIATURE CHRISTMAS TREES

With Round Birchwood Stand

November, 1909, we introduced these beautiful Decorative Spruce Trees to the Trade, and the supply each season has not equaled the demand. They are almost perfect in shape and in various heights of from 15 inches to 42 inches, with a spread of 12 inches to 42 inches. The base is firmly attached to a round block of selected white birch about 5 inches in diameter, and they are not only desirable for general decoration, but likewise suited for basket and other artistic work. We have arranged for an increased number for the coming season, but urge early purchase for shipment as wanted.

fact that for nineteen years Mr. Schenck has been a member of the organization and has not missed a meeting in ten years.

Arthur Herrington has been appointed manager of the spring flower show. The committee will meet weekly, commencing January 8. Last week twenty-two members were present at the meeting in the Grand Central Palace. The use of a third floor for the exhibition seems probable.

Warendorff's decorations at the headquarters of the firm in the Ansonia hotel are elaborate. An extra store adjoining has been secured.

Although there has been no scarcity of immortelles this season, thirty additional cases came in on the boat from Marseilles which docked December 15. The name of the actual consignee was not made known, as they were in care of Lunham & Moore, forwarding agents.

The New York office of M. van Waveren & Sons, of which H. Langeler is the head, has been removed from 17 State street to 26 Cortlandt street.

McKenney, at 503 Fifth avenue, has had some notable decorations lately, at Delmonico's and in some of the large nearby hotels.

Kottmiller has greatly enlarged and improved his handsome store at 426 Madison avenue. A fountain and basin with goldfish adds to its completeness.

Max Schling, as usual at this season, has doubled his force.

Siebrecht Bros. are much delighted with the location of their new store, at Seventy-third street and Madison avenue. It is a splendid corner. Will Siebrecht is in charge.

H. H. Burns says he is more than satisfied with his first year's experience. The store looks well and its location at 509 Madison avenue is ideal.

M. A. Bowe says his first Christmas on Fifth avenue promises to be a hummer. He has a branch, as usual.

The Market.

The cold weather and snow have added to the Christmas spirit. Shopping commenced earlier this year and good business is being done. There is a decidedly good showing of Christmas plants and baskets in all the flower stores. All seasonable stock is selling well and many retailers report an unusual increase in business during the last two weeks. According to local growers, there promises to be an abundance of good stock in the market for the holidays. Prices have advanced considerably, now that the chrysanthemum season is almost at an end. A large quantity of funeral work consumed much stock, and social functions, including the Masonic ball, which called for a great deal of work, kept things humming during the week. Shipments have not been extra large at any time this week and some of them were rendered useless by freezing.

Stock in general is good, but the shortage of some kinds has been keenly felt. Roses are fine and have sold well. Double White Killarney roses are in splendid condition, especially the better grades. The red roses have not been plentiful, but they promise to be for the holidays. Carnations, too, have been scarce, with prices ranging from $4 to $6 per hundred. Violets move fairly well and are of good quality. Sweet peas are good, but they do not sell readily. Stevias, single and double, are most welcome just now. Cypripediums are plentiful and cheap. Valley is good, but does not sell fast. Yellow and white narcissi are plentiful and sell easily. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

Various Notes.

C. J. Watson, of the Leo Niessen Co., of Philadelphia, called on the trade this week.

Art Beyers, who made a rather hurried trip to the coast and back, has rejoined the J. B. Keller Sons' force.

The Rochester Florists' Association held its monthly meeting at the Musicians' Headquarters December 11. The attendance, on account of the busy season, was not large. After the usual business an address was made by George T. Boucher.

Cecil Lester, of the George B. Hart establishment, has returned to the city after a successful business trip through New York state.

A great difficulty is experienced in procuring errand boys at this time. Recently a large notice was seen in one of the florists' windows, "A good boy wanted." Eventually a boy was hired and told to deliver his first package of flowers, value about $3, C. O. D. The flowers were delivered, the money collected, but the boy did not return. This "good" boy now has become a great joke between this florist and a number of his friends.

Hugo Teute has a large number of azaleas in full bloom for the Christmas trade. His cyclamens and Cincinnati begonias also are in fine shape and clear well. His house of carnations, with good weather, will yield large crops.

Commencing January 3, the largest display of fruits ever held in this city under the auspices of the New York State Fruit Growers' Association will be shown at Exposition park. Large exhibits of fruits will be made by the state experiment station at Geneva, and the Cornell Agricultural College will be represented by an educational booth.

I learn on good authority that the business of the late Fred W. Vick is for sale. The business is in fine shape. Mrs. Vick and son are not able to assume the responsibility of continuing the business. H. J. H.

WHITE ANTS IN GREENHOUSES.

In the greenhouse insect investigations of the Bureau of Entomology, carried on at Washington, D. C., by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, records have been made of serious injury caused by white ants on many plants grown under glass, and control methods have been tried by Arthur D. Borden, who has found that heliotropes, begonias, bedding geraniums, carnations, chrysanthemums and roses are seriously injured by white ants. One hundred eighty out of 1,000 heliotrope plants were killed the first week after being potted from the seeding pans. As many as seventy-five white ants have been found in a 4-inch pot of heliotrope. The insects come up through the ground and form dirt galleries over the supports, or burrow up through the wooden bench legs and run galleries the full length of the wooden benches. They enter the soil through the drainage holes of the pots and eat out the main stalk of the root, killing the plant quickly.

The volatile liquid carbon bisulphide can be used to kill white ants in the soil if moist and not compact, if small holes be made near the infested plants and a small quantity of carbon bisulphide poured in and the hole immediately closed tightly with earth. Care should be taken in handling this inflammable and explosive fluid, and the fumes should not be inhaled.

In the experiments conducted by Mr. Borden, in the Department of Agriculture at Washington, an effective control was found in the use of a five per cent kerosene-emulsion solution. In case the benches can not be replaced immediately on account of a certain crop, it has been found practical to soak the ashes or sand under the pots and the infested benches thoroughly with this solution. This may be done by removing the potted plants from a section of the bench, spraying that section, and moving the pots on the bench up to cover the treated area, thus exposing another section to be treated. Potted heliotropes and geraniums have been treated directly with the five per cent kerosene-emulsion solution without injury to the plants and the white ants in the soil of the pots were killed. This treatment should be given late in the afternoon and followed early next morning with a thorough syringing with water to wash the surplus oil out of the soil. It is important also to remove all infested pots promptly from the bench as soon as they are noticed and to destroy the white ants with kerosene emulsion.

The removal of decayed infested woodwork in greenhouses will prevent the plants from becoming infested in turn.

Manistee, Mich.—Joseph Clarkson and his greenhouse display of mums, callas, cyclamens and primroses recently came in for lengthy comment in the Manistee press. As free write-ups sometimes are almost as effective as paid display space, it is surprising that more florists do not invite the inspired news reporter around once in a while.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The St. Louis wholesale market was in splendid condition last week, as everything in season was in good supply and prices were reasonable. The demand was large, and the retailers report a busy week in all lines. The week's receipts of roses were large and the quality of the stock of the best. American Beauties and Russell were in large demand, and Milady and Ward came in for a good call. Sunburst is in good color; also Ophelia. Beauties will go up to $12 per dozen for choice stock this week, and Russell to $6 per dozen for extra select. Fancy Ophelia will go to $25 per hundred. These will be in good supply, according to reports.

Carnations will not be so plentiful, and extra choice stock in red and rose-pink will go to $8 per hundred. Orchids will be plentiful at $12 per dozen for large cattleyas. Violets are arriving in limited quantities and last week were up to $1 per hundred. Christmas prices for these should go to $1.50 to $2 per hundred. Valley will remain at $6 per hundred, and many advance orders have been placed. Sweet peas are going to be scarce and extra fancy choice will bring $1.50 per hundred. Paper Whites are fine at $4 per hundred.

The wholesalers report many advance orders for Christmas and they expect to fill all orders. Last week the weather was cold and, the temperature down to zero, it was a capacity test for many of the growers in the county. Every florist is looking forward to the best Christmas in years.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its last meeting of the old year December 14, at the city greenhouses in Forest park, the members being the guests of Park Superintendent E. Strehle and John Moritz, foreman of the range. The meeting took place in the big office of the superintendent. After inspecting the well-kept houses, in which all the plants are grown and housed for the various parks throughout the city, the meeting was called to order by President Jules Bourdet, with nearly fifty members present.

After disposing of the preliminaries the chair called for reports of the various committees. Secretary Ohlweiler of the Flower Show Association reported that everything is in working order for the spring show, which is only ninety days away; that all the committees are working harmoniously, and that after the holidays weekly meetings will be resumed.

The committee on changing the by-laws read its report for the first time. The changes will come up for adoption at the next meeting. A. F. J. Baur, secretary of the American Carnation Society, of Indianapolis, Ind., was present and staged a fine vase of his new scarlet carnation, Merry Christmas, which took the eye of the carnation growers present. The chair appointed a committee, consisting of J. F. Ammann, W. A. Rowe and W. J. Pilcher, to judge its merits. They reported later that the new carnation scored eighty-nine points and awarded the exhibitor the club's certificate of merit.

On motion a transportation committee was appointed, consisting of David Geddis, H. Berning and W. J. Pilcher, to arrange for the trip to attend the American Carnation Society meeting at Indianapolis next month. Interesting correspondence was read and ordered filed for further reference. For the good of the club W. W. Ohlweiler started an interesting discussion on who is the more successful man in the florists' business, the practical or the scientific. This took up the greater part of the meeting. Those who led in the discussion besides Mr. Ohlweiler were J. F. Ammann, Alexander Lurie, H. C. Irish, F. J. Fillmore and President Bourdet.

The trustees announced that there would be another interesting discussion on for the first meeting of the new year—a general review of the Christmas business.

ness men last week brought many telegraph orders to Review advertisers. One of them showed the writer ten. Heavy funeral orders were reported in all parts of the city.

The H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co. is supplying the St. Louis market with fancy pussy willows. Frank Weber, of this firm, reports that they will cut 50,000 for cold storage.

F. H. Weber returned home from his eastern trip early last week. Mr. Weber states that he has many advance orders from out of town for Christmas delivery. His show house is filled with choice blooming plants.

George Schmidt, Kirkwood rose grower for W. J. Pilcher, spent a day in the wholesale market last week. He reports a splendid cut of fancy roses for Christmas this year.

The Washington avenue store of Grimm & Gorly is one of the attractions in the busy downtown shopping district. The display of an electric fountain, baskets and cut stock in the large show windows attracted the crowds and brought smiles to the faces of Vincent Gorly and his brother Frank.

The establishment of Mrs. M. Eggeling, 1707 South Grand avenue, in charge of the Misses Eggeling, is prepared for a busy week, with many advance orders for Christmas.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle met at the home of Mrs. F. W. Bruenig December 13 and spent a most pleasant afternoon. Mrs. F. C. Weber, Sr., will entertain the circle next month at her home on Berlin avenue.

There is a wealth of blooming plants in the show houses of George Waldbart, Ayres Floral Co., F. C. Weber, Kalisch Bros. Floral Co., John Boerm, Sanders Nursery Co. and Young Bros. Floral Co. for the Christmas demand. All report many advance orders.

A. F. J. Baur, secretary of the American Carnation Society, spent December 14 in the city. Mr. Baur expects a big meeting of the society at Indianapolis next month, and a big representation from here was promised him.

The Mullanphy Florists, both the Grand avenue and downtown stores, experienced a busy week. Mr. Seeger, of the downtown store, and Nat Kingsley, in charge of the Grand avenue store, say they expect a great business week.

E. W. Guy, Gust Grossart, H. Emunds, Adolph Fehr and Walter Ogle, of Belleville, Ill., recent visitors buying Christmas supplies, say business is excellent with them in all lines.

The Market.

Supplies of cut flowers have been light during the last few days, many stands being almost bare. This is due less to any real scarcity of flowers than to the customary holding back for the holidays. Prices are stiff and growers who are shipping in daily supplies are likely to make more money than those who are waiting for December 22 and 23 before throwing supplies on the market. Only occasionally does the man who holds back win. If, perchance, climatic conditions just prior to the holidays are unfavorable, his losses are likely to be heavy. The same tactics, however, are adopted each year.

Roses are in fairly good supply, with prices firmly held. American Beauties now are quoted at $60 to $75 for select stock, but they undoubtedly will hit the dollar mark at the end of the week. Ophelia is the greatest seller among the hybrid teas, which latter sell from $4 to $20 per hundred, with some fancies higher. Carnations are not coming in freely and prices are already up to $6 and $10 per hundred, with whites the weakest sellers. Violets, snapdragons, cornflowers, marguerites, Paper Whites, Roman hyacinths, wallflowers, calendulas, pink and white bouvardias and stevia clean up well. Lily of the valley is a little lower; buyers refused to purchase it at $8 per hundred. Some chrysanthemums still arrive. Lilies are in good supply, but not active. Some good poinsettias are offered. The call for asparagus is not particularly good. The cattleyas seen are chiefly Percivaliana, and these realize fancy prices. There are few gardenias coming in.

The pot plant business is booming and specialists have practically sold out their stock. Azaleas now are quite prominent, as are poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias, ericas, camellias, etc. The call for fruiting plants also is good. Dealers in Christmas greens are rushed as never before. They have secured supplies only at considerable advances in prices over former years.

Club Meeting.

For so near Christmas there was a good attendance at the election night meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club December 19. There was no contest for the principal offices, the following being elected unanimously: President, James Methven; vice-president, Andrew K. Rogers; secretary, W. N. Craig; treasurer, S. J. Goddard.

Bartsch and Thomas Coles were elected members of the executive committee. The exhibits for the evening were a collection of Christmas plants by the W. W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, and a showing of Erlangea tomentosa by W. N. Craig, who was awarded a cultural report of merit. The annual banquet was set for February 7. Eight new members were elected.

J. N. Keeler, New England and resident Boston manager for Hitchings & Co., gave a splendid stereopticon lecture on "Greenhouses, Their Design, Arrangement and Construction," which was listened to with much interest, and the lecturer was warmly applauded. It was voted to hold the annual banquet this winter in Horticultural hall in lieu of a hotel.

Various Notes.

A destructive fire at the Boylston street establishment of P. L. Carbone December 12 caused heavy loss to the immense and valuable stock of glass and pottery ware, garden furniture, etc., contained in three floors of the building. Newspaper estimates of the loss were $10,000, but Mr. Carbone says his loss, which is covered by insurance, will be several times that amount. As all of the ware is imported, it will be difficult to replace it under existing conditions. In spite of the handicap caused by this fire, business proceeds as usual at the Boylston street store and is on a higher scale than ever before.

A blizzard accompanied by twelve inches of snow hit Boston December 15 and necessitated a postponement of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club's field day scheduled for December 16 at Framingham, Mass. Another date will be selected, probably about the middle of January.

Thomas Roland was cleaned out of practically every salable plant some days before Christmas. He never experienced a greater demand. From his Revere establishment he has a splendid cut of Ophelia, Richmond, Killarney, Sunburst and other roses.

The great National Allied Bazaar being held in Mechanics building, Boston, December 10 to 20, is the event of the month in Boston. There is a tremendous daily attendance, as 250,000 tickets were sold in advance. Local commercial growers and private establishments have contributed plants and flowers liberally for the flower booth. Some of the best selling cut flowers are Bouvardia Humboldtii, camellias, gardenias, freesias, roses, carnations, calanthes, oncidiums and cattleyas. In plants there are begonias, ardisias, solanums, Buddleia Asiatica, erlangeas, coccineas, cypripediums and poinsettias. One orchid plant, Eulophiella Elizabethæ, was donated by an amateur grower of London, England.

William H. Elliott is cutting a superior grade of Cardinal, Ophelia, Miller, Stanley, Sunburst and Hadley roses, for which the demand is keen. Trade in asparagus is only moderate. Mr. Elliott has just completed an office attached to his stalls in the Boston Coöperative Market, which fills a long felt want.

James Wheeler, of Natick, our local marguerite king, has a glorious show of blooms on his plants for the holidays, every plant being golden with flowers. All are grown in solid beds. He also has his carnations in heavy crop, Alice being more prolific than any other.

Bachelor's buttons now are a popular all-the-year-around flower in the Boston market. The bulk of the flowers come from the Tewksbury carnation belt. Harry L. Shedd, of South Lowell, well known as a skilled carnationist, is proving a past master in the winter production of bachelor's buttons, or buttons, as they are termed in the markets.

Recent visitors included Harold F. Winter, of Winter Son & Co., representing Sutton & Sons, of Reading, England.

oped during the last week. Roses are in fair supply and of excellent quality, but the daily receipts are quickly taken and no surplus is left to accumulate. Carnations are on the short side, and the Tri-Cities will have to draw more heavily on outside sources. Lilies, sweet peas, violets and other flowers also are scarce.

There are no azaleas to speak of. Cyclamens are in large demand and some fine stock is arriving, as well as primroses. The Christmas demand for potted plants is increasing daily and many orders are being booked.

Club Meeting.

The Tri-City Florists' Club met in regular session at the Deere conservatories, Moline, Thursday, December 14, with Messrs. Anderson and Sorensen as hosts. The club members enjoyed a stroll through the greenhouses, where Mr. Anderson, who is a hybridizer, has produced some fine new seedling carnations. A deep pink that showed red by lamplight was exceptionally fine and may be heard from later. Long, stout stems, large flowers, not too full, and a calyx that does not split, are some of its good points. There are many more, some of which may prove good commercial varieties. Everything about the houses showed Mr. Anderson to be a painstaking grower.

The meeting was called to order by President L. Stapp, and it was decided to hold a flower show November 2 to 4, 1917, at the Masonic hall, Rock Island. P. G. Pearson read a well-prepared paper on the topic of the evening, "Potted Plants for Christmas and the Holidays." The club members showed their appreciation of it by vigorous handclapping. A general discussion followed.

The next meeting will be held at the residence of L. Stapp, at Rock Island, January 12. A vote of thanks was accorded Messrs. Anderson and Sorensen.

Various Notes.

Edward Patten, who has resigned his position as foreman of the Stapp Floral Co., has leased the greenhouses of Miss Rose Woltman and henceforth will be proprietor and grower. He expects to build several new houses the coming year. A cottage now is in process of erection and will be occupied by the Patten family as soon as completed.

The writer had the pleasure of viewing a fine bed of mushrooms grown by P. G. Pearson, of the Bettendorf Conservatories. They certainly were in good crop. W. G.

Bloomington, Ill.—Bloomington now has one more florist, Frank A. Harder, of 1408 West Locust street, who made up his mind not to remain an employee any longer and, accordingly, put up a sign of his own.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

JOHN C. LEONARD has returned to Chicago after a brief trip through the middle west.

OUR friends, the canners, got another jolt last week when the American Can Co. withdrew all quotations.

THERE are those who say 500 tons of radish seed are being shipped out of California of the 1916 crop!

"THE bulb business is not profitable but 'darned' interesting," according to Arnold Ringier of the W. W. Barnard Co.

THE Western Seed House, Salina, Kan., after forty years in the wholesale and retail seed business, has branched out by opening a retail flower store.

THE "Business Embarrassments" column this week contains notice of a bankruptcy action taken against Harry A. Bunyard, Inc., which formerly conducted "The Uptown Seed Store," New York.

ACCORDING to A. H. Smith, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, there is at present a large unsatisfied demand for beans and sweet corn. Canners in particular are trying to cover their needs on sweet corn, but are meeting with many disappointments, as crops are shelling out at much less than was estimated.

THIS will be an easy season for the contracting agents of the California seed growers. The prospects of getting stock from Europe are so remote that every seedsman is ready to contract for California crops. Almost the only subject for discussion is price and in practically every case the growers' idea of values soon is accepted.

BECAUSE of the experiences of corn growers last season, the U. S. Department of Agriculture is supplying agricultural papers with a series of articles dealing with the fundamentals of corn growing, especially with the maintenance of a balance between heat, moisture and fertility, by means of which it is hoped materially to increase the yield per acre next season.

SEEDSMEN who specialize in cantaloupe seeds will be interested in Bulletin No. 401 of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, issued October 31, 1916, and entitled "Marketing and Distribution of Western Muskmelons in 1915." It gives interesting information regarding the varieties grown in different districts and the quantity of seed required. For instance, it is shown that in the Imperial valley in 1915 there were 8,156 acres planted to muskmelons at an average cost for seed of $2 per acre.

THE Luther Burbank Co., of San Francisco, with which Mr. Burbank was associated only indirectly, is discontinuing business. W. F. Pitts, formerly general manager of that company and at present trustee of the estate, is familiar with the productions of Mr. Burbank and has organized his own company under the name of W. F. Pitts Seed & Nursery Co., for the purpose of featuring the productions of Mr. Burbank. The new company will do business at 326 Market street, San Francisco.

WITH THE NEBRASKANS.

It is already well known that the sweet corn deliveries in general will be short and some kinds of flint and field corns also are short, flint corns especially being quoted, by those who are fortunate enough to have a surplus, at higher prices than we have ever known them to sell before.

Many of the cucumber and melon crops at Rocky Ford were caught by the cold, freezing weather, some of them before they were harvested, and others were frozen quite severely in the pits.

A number of the cucumber crops, therefore, show a low germinating vitality, which may make a shortage of some kinds.

"The first cutting of the cantaloupes," says William Emerson, of the Western Seed & Irrigation Co., "were practically the only ones that made heavy, high test seed, the second cuttings being light weight, with thin meat on account of the melons not maturing. We therefore look for better prices for many kinds of cantaloupe as well as cucumber seed."

squash crops are short on account of the crops being late and not fully matured, also being harvested under unfavorable conditions, and there are a number of vine seed crops which have not yet been received from the growers. It therefore is impossible as yet to tell just what delivery will be made on last year's contracts.

FREE SEEDS.

As required by the act appropriating money for the congressional seed distribution, the Secretary of Agriculture has transmitted to Congress a detailed statement showing the place, quantity and price of seeds purchased for the 1916 distribution, now a year old. The detailed figures are interesting only as showing what a considerable part of the seeds needed the Department now is compelled to buy on the open market for lack of offers at the time the annual bids are received. The quantities of vegetable and flower seeds purchased and the cost for the 1916 distribution were as follows:

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

The enforcement of the Pharmacy Act in the District of Columbia is causing much inconvenience in the seed trade. G. E. Schultz, of the Schultz Seed Co., Washington, expressed the general opinion of the trade when he described the act as a big nuisance. This is the first instance where the act is being enforced, although it has been threatened in several other cities. A stiff fight is looked for. Said M. Schultz: "First the bugs, then the emissaries of the agricultural department—it is one constant fight." Business generally has been good.

J. Bolgiano & Son, of Baltimore, Md., have again added plants to their retail department, after omitting them for a while. The sales are good. The price list, which has a wide circulation among the seed and poultry supply trades, is more closely scrutinized than ever by the senders and recipients.

The Griffith & Turner Co., the old and reliable house which claims to have sold the first home-grown package of seeds in Baltimore and which issues the largest and most complete catalogue in the south, believes that the coming season will see the dawn of a new era in the business.

The Meyer-Stisser Co., also of Baltimore, caters largely to the market gardeners and finds that the high cost of produce is affecting all concerned. The company looks for a remedy in larger cultivation.

The Philip-Thomson Co., of Wilmington, Del., welcomed a heavy rainstorm during my visit and remarked it was seldom that showers of blessing came in double portions. The rain was badly needed; owing to the dry season much stock had suffered. Business generally was above the average. W. M.

AMERICAN SUGAR BEET SEED.

Secretary of Agriculture Houston calls attention that sugar beet seed was grown commercially in the United States this year in several of the states from Michigan to California. The crop of seed harvested in 1915 was so satisfactory, according to the report of the Bureau of Plant Industry, in each of the areas tested that a largely increased acreage was planted this year.

This bureau has assisted in an advisory way in growing, selecting and siloing the roots, planting them in the spring, harvesting and cleaning the seed and, in general, endeavored to produce the largest amount of commercial seed possible at a minimum cost.

Approximately 5,000 acres are in beet seed in this country this year, while we require the product of at least 16,000 acres for a normal planting, not considering the natural expansion of the beet-sugar industry. Each new mill will require an average of 200 acres in seed to meet its planting requirements. Several new mills are in process of construction for next year.

The problem of drying the sugar beets for the purpose of increasing the amount of raw material for the mill and thereby increasing the length of the sugar campaign has been further investigated. The principal difficulty has been in finding or devising a dryer of suitable capacity to handle enough beets per day to be profitable. A satisfactory solution of the problem will be beneficial in those small valleys in the intermountain states, where the acreage is not sufficient to support a sugar mill, and yet the sugar beet is necessary to the highest results in the farming operations.

SHORTAGE OF SEED WHEAT.

"The northwest is facing the most serious seed wheat problem ever known," says the Northwestern Miller in a recent issue, "in consequence of the low vitality of the 1916 crop, and the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce, the Duluth Board of Trade, and the Minnesota, North and South Dakota State Agricultural Colleges are flooding the country with advice to farmers to hold back good seed for the 1917 crop.

"Dean A. F. Woods, of the Minnesota State Agricultural College, sounded a warning recently, and editors of agricultural papers are also working to awaken the farmers to the situation.

"While the situation is without precedent, it is believed the northwest will get through. There was a liberal carryover of 1915 wheat and if this is insufficient there is good seed in Montana and Alberta. It is unlikely there will be any Russian seed imported, but quite probable that there will be Canadian seed wanted."

CHICORY SEED IN GERMANY.

Methods employed in Germany for planting and cultivating chicory seed have been described by Gustav Jaensch, who believes they will prove of great assistance in efforts to raise the product in the United States:

"Chicory seeds are planted there in 14.1-inch rows ('36 cm. in der Reine'), about 19.7 inches apart. The plants are allowed to grow out and bloom out until the first blossoms have developed a hard, yellow-brown grain. Neither the lateral branches nor the ends of the plants are cut off.

"In this region, where the climate is moderate and great heat rarely prevails, the plants normally reach a height of four to five feet. The crop from March plantings is usually harvested in the second half of September. The entire plants are then cut off just above the roots with sharp and slightly curved knives, bound together in small bunches, and set up in double rows on the fields for after-ripening. The seed can then be threshed only in dry weather or heavy frost in winter.

"Despite all precautionary measures at least ten per cent of the ripened seed usually lies on the ground, as a certain percentage necessarily falls off when the plants are touched. Inasmuch as chicory seeds are always considerably damaged by birds in Germany, watchmen have to be kept in the fields all day to prevent excessive loss."

WHO HAS FILLBASKET?

The Review recently has received a number of inquiries for the tomato known as Balch's Fillbasket. It is not listed in any of the catalogues, but has been recommended as an excellent forcing variety. Information will be gladly received as to who can supply the seeds.

GREEN APHIS ON LETTUCE.

Will you please tell me what insecticide to use for green aphis on lettuce, something that will not injure the lettuce for use. Smoke from tobacco stems has rid the house of white aphis, but this does not destroy the green kind.

M. A. F. C.

White fly is much more difficult to kill than green aphis. If your tobacco smoke killed the former and not the latter, it is something quite new to me. Hydrocyanic acid gas will kill green aphis, but I hesitate to recommend its use to you on account of its deadly nature. I would suggest that you try fumigating with Nico-Fume paper or even tobacco dust. Either of these will kill green aphis. The tobacco dust can be placed in tin pans or even in small heaps on the paths and can be started with a red-hot cinder or a little kerosene. A mild fumigation once in ten days when you are growing lettuce will keep the plants clean. You should not allow aphis to get such a foothold as yours appear to have done. C. W.

Lamar, Colo.—The Lamar Greenhouse Co., Roy White, manager, has completed a new house 24x110 as a means of taking care of its steadily increasing business. The year closed December 1 was the most successful the corporation has yet had. The resources have been increased from $4,000 a year ago to $7,200 now, with no appreciable increase of current liabilities. The principal difficulty now is to get stock.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Provost, Wash.—L. A. Borchers, at Turn Point Light Station, is growing for market a hardy clove-scented carnation of a variety raised from seed eight years ago. He carries his plants year after year, cutting them back in the autumn.

Port Orchard, Wash.—A. Parry, of the Annapolis Nurseries, has devised a remedy for the cabbage maggot, which annually destroys great numbers of plants in this section. It is a poison, but not injurious to plant life. Mr. Parry is considering means of putting his discovery on the market.

Pleasanton, Cal. — Henry Klopfer comes to his new position as head gardener for Mrs. P. A. Hearst well equipped in practice and theory. He was employed in the Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, for twelve years, nine of which were devoted to plant propagation at the field station at Chico, Cal.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Business during the last week has been excellent in spite of the gradually rising prices on stock; as one retailer remarked: "It is good to be doing something besides funeral work." There have been several large entertainments and funerals, besides which transient trade in all the principal streets has been good. Stock is better than last reported, with the exception of carnations. A cold, dry wind hit these badly and also the outdoor poinsettias, which were bruised severely. Wholesalers say their advance orders are better than ever before and retailers say that they never knew orders given so early, though the individual calls are not for high-priced stock.

Plants are likely to be scarce, on account of the shortage in azaleas. Red roses, the one thing needed at Christmas, are likely to be plentiful, several growers coming in with good crops; but at that it is not at all likely all orders will be filled. Red carnations will be one of the scarce items without a doubt. In greens there is some wonderful "English" holly coming from Vancouver, magnificent stock, beautifully berried. California red berry is good in color and exceptionally well berried. There is a bigger demand than usual for wreathing and other forms of redwood and pine. Desert holly is plentiful and likely to be cheaper. The ordinary greens used at other times, such as plumosus, are scarce.

Frost Cuts Outdoor Stock.

Frost of unusual severity was experienced in the Los Angeles district on the nights of December 16 and 17. At Montebello, where it usually is warm, the temperature was 26 degrees, and it was lower in the San Gabriel valley. In the Santa Ana district a blanket of fog prevented damage. The frost is expected to reduce the supply of outdoor stock and raise prices accordingly.

Various Notes.

Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson's store has been a busy place of late. There was a good deal of work in connection with the installation of officers of the Eastern Star. Twenty-five bouquets were given away at one function; at another a large number of cyclamen plants were given to the ladies present—quite a nice order.

C. Gutting, of the Superior Nursery Co., has the sold-out shingle on most of his plants. Begonia Cincinnati and Lorraine are still in evidence at the nursery, but evidently going fast.

The California Flower Market is a busy place these days in the early morning. While some stock is scarce, there is always a lot of good material coming from the many growers who have stands here and local retailers find it a great convenience.

C. C. Wooden, formerly with the H. N. Gage Co., is in town again and is thinking of making a connection with the florists' business here.

Murata & Co. were one of the concerns handling really good late mums last week, one of their growers shipping in some magnificent Appletons. The flowers were grown outdoors and covered late; consequently they were not so much injured by the rains. A big shipping business in orchids has been done of late.

A truly "decorative" window was put up at the California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co. store on Seventh avenue. Japanese frieze in the most attractive colors, pine cones and other decorative material showed how fine a display can be made without much perishable stock being shown at a time when it is scarce.

Fred Sperry is a pretty busy man these days and it is hard to get hold of him, but judging by the many boxes going out and the sweet smile on his

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Christmas business has opened up briskly in San Francisco and all branches of the trade are more confident than ever that little stock will be left when holiday deliveries are completed. The shippers have all the orders they can handle comfortably, and the local retailers are forced to pay high prices for their requirements, especially for roses. American Beauties are quoted considerably higher than they were a year ago at this time, and all other seasonable roses are higher in proportion. Judging from the close clean-up of stock, it would seem that the higher figures are justified, but the retailers are rather inclined to think the prices a little stiff. A strong feature of the rose market is that all varieties show excellent quality.

The demand for violets is so great that it looks as if the small shippers might get left. The stock has suffered some from the cold weather, the stems being a little short, but not enough to cause uneasiness. Carnations are coming in well and good stock moves quickly. Mums still linger, although the large ones are not much in evidence any more. The season has been a long one and interest is beginning to wane. As the offerings are light, they clean up, however. There is a moderate cut of pompons, but they are going off crop rapidly.

A nice cut of freesias is coming in from some of the nearby districts; a few jonquils are appearing and narcissi are to be seen. The growers are bringing in their offerings of potted plants, ferns, etc., for the Christmas trade, and the retailers report indications favorable for a heavy demand for this stock. Azaleas are extremely scarce this year and the quality poor for the most part. Great quantities of greens have been brought in, including redwood wreaths and garlands, Christmas trees, huckleberry, etc., but as this business is handled principally by produce merchants, it is not a big item in the florists' business.

Various Notes.

C. W. Ward, proprietor of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, of Eureka, Cal., arrived in San Francisco a few days ago, bringing with him 200 carnation blooms, which were put on display at the store of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., on Kearny street. The assortment included fine specimens of Belle Washburn, Crystal White, Alice, Matchless and Cottage Maid. Mr. Ward began to devote particular attention to the carnation many years ago, and though he has branched out widely in other directions he has always shown special interest in this flower and has played an important part in its development. Now he has demonstrated that he can grow carnations in California just as well as he formerly did at Queens, N. Y. Mr. Ward celebrated his sixtieth birthday December 11. He may go east before returning to his home at Eureka.

Frank Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has a nice lot of mixed baskets of cyclamens, primroses, ferns, etc., for his firm's holiday use.

"Heine" Cooper, formerly with MacRorie & McLaren, has accepted a position at Joseph's.

Joseph's force made up about 120 shower bouquets last week for the girl graduates of the city high schools. F. J. Bertrand, manager of Joseph's, looks for a heavy holiday business. From present indications, he says, it promises to be fully as good as last year, notwithstanding the large number of exposition visitors who lingered in the city until after Christmas. The first half of the month has been better at this store than the corresponding period of December, 1915.

Herman Mosso, with Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has the sympathy of the trade in his bereavement by the death of his baby.

Mrs. Frank Pelicano, who has been seriously ill for some time, now is recuperating in the country.

The park commissioners have authorized Park Superintendent John McLaren to begin the work on the first section of the Ocean Beach esplanade, which will consist of 750 feet of parking, fifteen feet wide.

Charles Navlet expected to have the improvements at his store at San Jose, Cal., completed before Christmas, but the extensive alterations have taken longer than he anticipated, and the work will not be finished until after the first of the year. Mr. Picetti, manager of the seed and flower stand in the Emporium department store of this city, which is operated by Mr. Navlet, considers prospects excellent for a banner holiday trade.

The home of Mrs. S. S. Lawrence, on Twenty-sixth avenue, was elaborately decorated by MacRorie & McLaren recently for a formal tea. The work included the reproduction of a miniature garden on the table.

ery. She and her partner, Miss Bertha Cohn, have a large stock of baskets ready for the Christmas rush and are otherwise prepared for a large business.

At T. Mosco's store, on Geary street, the demand for potted cyclamens and primroses is reported particularly strong. Cut poinsettias have had a good sale.

Plans have been completed for the establishment of dahlia trial gardens at San Rafael, under the auspices of the California Dahlia Growers' Association. The flowers are to be grown by F. C. Burns, treasurer of the organization. He expects to get stock for exhibit from all parts of the world. A good many entries have already been received. The rules regarding the entries will be published in the next bulletin of the association.

C. Kooyman is moving to a larger and more desirable location at 421 Bush street, which is well situated in the flower market district. While the rent is about the same as he has been paying for his old place on St. Ann street, the new store is about six times as large, there being a large basement in addition to a well-arranged ground floor space. With the increased facilities Mr. Kooyman plans to carry a larger stock of florists' supplies and to extend other departments of the business. During the holiday rush he is being assisted by Sidney Beattie, a well known man in the flower market.

The E. W. McLellan Co. has a fine cut of roses for Christmas and Manager J. A. Axell says that, judging from the heavy orders already booked, this will be the best Christmas in the history of the business. This company has a splendid crop of gardenias and is cutting all that the demand calls for.

Jessie	Baby Elegance	Geo. Elger

BABY DOLL

The most rapturously and strikingly beautiful little rose ever introduced. The color is absolutely new and startling in its brilliancy—golden yellow, tipped with clear cerise. The little buds and open flowers are elegantly finished and of most perfect form. Habit of the very best, strong and compact; freedom of bloom is remarkable and continuous throughout the entire season. We have given it a fair and thorough trial and have no hesitancy in offering it as the one best selling rose you ever handled. It is a money-maker.

Also special prices on all commerial varieties of Hybrid Teas.

Catalogue on request.

Charles F. Shellgrain, manager of J. B. Boland's store, has no complaints to make about business. He says the lull in trade between Thanksgiving and Christmas was not so noticeable this year as in former seasons.

E. James is bringing in some fine cockscombs, which promise to clean up during the Christmas rush, as well as his other potted stock, which shows a high quality.

Albert O. Stein had the floral decoration for the "Star ball" given at the St. Francis hotel recently, which was one of the most elaborate society events of the year. Neither time nor expense was spared in working out the details of the decoration, and Mr. Stein has received many congratulations upon the success of the affair. S. H. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Interest centers in the supplies of holiday stock, and as there is a general shortage in nearly everything the scramble among the retailers is unusually sharp. Unless there is an unexpected flow of sunshine the cuts of carnations and roses will fall far below normal. Several growers have Maud Dean mums ready and all the retailers will get a few. Excepting begonias, there are not enough pot plants in sight to fill orders. There are plenty of kentias and probably enough ferns to go around. Holly, mistletoe, Oregon grape and fir Christmas trees are offered on street stands and hawked about in wagons, so the florists get but a small share of this business.

Various Notes.

W. I. Spencer, who has greenhouses near Bullrun, has started a new pipe-frame house 32x160 and expects to get it ready for an early spring crop of Bonny Best tomatoes. He intends to follow this crop with mums. Walter Thompson planned the new house and will superintend its construction.

Julius Dossche is reported to have been seen driving a new Ford runabout.

The Holden Floral Co. has several promising seedling and sport carnations. An entire bench will be set next year to a beautiful pink seedling which has shown good qualities for three seasons.

S. G. Lubliner has a good display window and keeps it well filled with stock. He says his window display is the thing that brings him the business.

One carnation grower at Mount Tabor will not bring his crop in for the holidays. Everybody is unusually late.

The Oregon State Horticultural Society held its thirty-first annual meeting at Hood River last week. Many interesting papers were read and discussed. Robert Paulus, of Salem, was elected president; Dr. C. H. Bailey, of Roseburg, vice-president; C. D. Minton, of Portland, secretary-treasurer. The next annual meeting will be held at Salem.

DELPHINIUMS FROM CUTTINGS.

Will you please tell me if I can house delphinium plants during the winter and propagate from cuttings? If so, what should be the condition of such cuttings? What temperature is required, moisture, etc.? How long does it take the cuttings to root? G. T.—Minn.

Yes, you can house delphiniums in January. Give them a temperature of 48 degrees at night. In propagating, short cuttings rubbed off with a heel root the best. A cutting bench with a bottom heat of 60 degrees and a top heat 12 to 15 degrees lower is most suitable. Cuttings usually root in four to six weeks. It is well to state that plants from rooted cuttings lack the vigor of seedlings. Unless you want some specially fine variety perpetuated, the best plan is to use seedlings. You can procure from leading seedsmen many varieties that will come true to name. If sown in January all seedlings will flower well the same year and make strong, salable plants for fall. Even if sown as late as June, many will flower.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and General Manager, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

THIS week's obituary column contains a brief sketch of the busy life of William C. Barry, of Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester, whose death occurred December 12.

A BULLETIN on "The Apple Leaf Sewer," just issued as No. 435 in the series of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, will be of interest to nurserymen who grow fruit trees.

UNDER the name of Adams & Manning, A. Chandler Manning and Louis S. Adams have opened an office at 1700 Walnut street, Philadelphia, for the practice of landscape architecture. Their announcement states that they "refer by permission to Olmstead Bros., Brookline, Mass."

CLEMATIS SEEDS.

I am enclosing a sample of some clematis seeds that I propose to sow. How should I cure them and when is the best time to sow them here in Louisiana?

M. H. W.—La.

The sample of clematis seeds forwarded with the inquiry seems to require no special curing, the seeds being ripe and dry. In the south the sooner clematis seeds are planted after ripening the better. If sown now, it is probable that some of the seeds will germinate in the spring and others during the summer, the germination of clematis seeds being somewhat irregular.

DEALING WITH LANDSCAPE MEN.

[An extract from an address by William Kessler, landscape architect, delivered before the Southern Nurserymen's Association, continued from The Review of December 7, 1916.]

How a Landscaper Works.

As some of you may not know just how a landscape architect works, and might be led to a better understanding by a short outline of his methods, I will attempt to describe in a concise way the requirements of the work. First, after consulting with the owner, on the ground, he makes a topographical survey and map of the property to be improved, showing by this map the location of existing features, such as trees, bounding streets, buildings, bodies of water, etc., and the contour of ground surface, and such existing surrounding features as may influence the design.

Based on his study of the property and data shown on the map, he then must locate proposed buildings, consult with the architect as to the orientation of the floor plan, fix the entrances, establish elevations for floors, so that the building will not only fit the site but will be approached in the best manner, so that its arrangement with other buildings and landscape features will be to the best advantage, economically and for the best effect.

In definitely locating the buildings he uses the topographic map for the purpose of determining the height of floors, the problems of approach and drainage, the establishing of scale between building, lawn and garden areas, etc., for it should be known that unless the different features of the scheme are in scale with each other the result will not be a satisfactory one.

After the Preliminaries.

After a preliminary plan of general arrangement is made, sections are projected from the topographic map showing the conformation of the natural ground through each important axis, and a proposed grade is laid on this profile, thus enabling him to definitely fit the grade of ground surfaces, driveways, walks, lawn and garden areas, and design drainage systems to fit existing conditions. This also enables him to calculate quantities of earth work in cubic yards and form an estimate of the cost of the work.

The general plan of arrangement also shows the arrangement of plantings, giving the scale and formation of the planting masses. After this plan is definitely adopted the varieties are specified by placing corresponding key numbers on plans and planting specifications, showing the quantities, varieties and description of the planting materials, and an estimate of the cost of the work is made, so that the client may have a reasonably accurate idea of the cost of all the work of grading, clearing and grubbing, road and walk building, drainage system, lawn making and planting.

In the case of a modern cemetery, he must be familiar with modern cemetery practice, the economical subdivision of such property into salable sections and lots, the proper arrangement and width of driveways providing for adequate circulation and caring for all traffic needs. He must not only be familiar with the work of the civil engineer, but he must know the history of architecture and precedent in landscape design during the different periods of architectural design.

Nowadays the landscape architect is called into consultation with the developer of real estate for subdivision and sale, and he must be fitted to design additions to towns and cities, must know the principles governing the arrangement and widths of streets, requirements for storm water and sanitary sewer systems, paving, lighting and the making of such other suitable landscape improvements as will tend to create a ready sale of the subdivided property.

So you will readily see that the work of the landscape architect has to deal with other considerations than the mere arrangement of plantings of nursery products.

Increases Use of Plants.

The landscape architect, in the course of his work, discovers so many different uses for trees, shrubs, plants and vines that he creates a demand for larger quantities than would be disposed of to provide for the demands of the usual unadvised consumer. Therefore, his work is beneficial to the nurseryman.

I have no doubt that the sales of nursery products to retail customers, as created by the landscape architect, have been the means of inducing a number of nurserymen to greatly increase the production of ornamental nursery stock within the last few years. And this line of business will greatly increase in the years to come, as the landscape architect is helping to acquaint the general public with the different varieties of trees and shrubs, and how to use them in good arrangement for the improvement of their home grounds.

Therefore, it behooves the nurseryman to get on friendly terms with the landscape architect and assist him in his work. On the other hand, the landscape architect should be in close touch with the nurseryman and consult him as to the varieties that will be best adapted to local conditions of soil and climate, and that may be suitable for his purpose, so that he will have a known source of supply when he wishes to obtain planting material for his work.

The Question of Prices.

The matter of allowing the landscape architect dealers' wholesale prices is one that has been discussed pro and con for a number of years, but, so far as I know, no definite satisfactory arrangement has been worked out.

Personally, I do not think the landscape architect should be entitled to dealers' prices, as he does not depend on a profit on nursery stock as his remuneration for his work. I do think that he should be able to buy planting material for his clients at a reduced rate under usual retail prices by reason of the large quantities of plants of one variety that he uses and on account of the usually greater ease with which his orders can be handled than those given by the unadvised purchaser.

As most nurserymen of the present time are willing to supply the wants of the landscape architect at wholesale prices, you cannot blame the landscape architect if he holds out for this concession, but I think it would be better for all concerned if the prices were increased sufficiently to allow for better grading and better packing and delivery of suitable planting material, which would tend to create the best immediate effect after planting and which would redound to the credit of the landscape architect and the nurseryman supplying the material.

ROOTED CARNATION CUTTINGS

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

¶ We are now booking orders for our new seedling Superb, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

Superb is a seedling of Gloriosa and Enchantress. It has the good stem of Gloriosa and the fine growing habit of Enchantress. The color is a flesh pink and it keeps its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches, are very full and generally receive full score on substance. The flowers are all perfect and do not split. In the four years we have grown it, it has proved the best commercial variety, barring none.

AVIATOR

¶ If you want scarlet carnations for Christmas, grow Aviator, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

is the result of a long series of seedling crosses, beginning with Beacon and Victory. It comes with long and always strong stems early, and the bloom never appears sleepy. It is an all-season scarlet and always high-grade, never splitting the calyx and never off color. Come and see it growing.

December and early January delivery all sold.

Booking orders now for Jan. 15th and later.

The Market.

Stock last week was far over on the short side, short lengths in roses being almost unobtainable. Russell roses were particularly scarce. Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Ward, Reid and novelty roses cleaned up each day. Beauties are good, with the short cuts scarce and the specials inclined to drag. Valley, violets and orchids experience a good sale. Mums now are a thing of the past. Carnations clear readily, bringing $4 to $6 per hundred.

Bowlers Get Busy.

December 14 the Florists' Bowling Club held a meeting at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange quarters and elected as captains Robert Rahaley, Thomas Browne, Joseph Streit and E. A. Fetters. After the election all went to the Broadway alleys and rolled as follows:

THE NEW RED CARNATION WITH AN UNBEATABLE RECORD BEHIND IT

WINNER two years in succession of the American Carnation Society Silver Medals, 1915 and 1916. Also winner of the S. A. F. Silver Medal, 1916, besides numerous first prizes and certificates at various shows in different parts of the country. This is purely a commercial Carnation —very bright, clear red, large flower, non-splitable calyx, long stem and just as free-blooming as Enchantress, of which it is a seedling. Prices of rooted cuttings, ready for delivery December 15 and later, 25 or less at the rate of $8.00 per 100; 50 and less than 100 at $6.00 per 100; orders of 100 and less than 250, $5.00 per 100, and orders of 250 or more at the rate of $45.00 per 1000. All cuttings guaranteed strictly first-class.

IF YOU WANT EARLY DELIVERY ORDER AT ONCE

New Varieties

Cottage Maid: Clear shell pink, sport of Mrs. C. W. Ward, possessing the same wonderful keeping and shipping qualities.

Merry Christmas: Color, intense deep scarlet; large flower, well formed, splendid stem and calyx, splendid keeper.

Doris: Color, brilliant maroon; vigorous grower, producing a succession of high-grade blooms on long, stiff stems; good calyx.

Rosalia: A true cerise pink; splendid grower and producer; a good commercial variety in every respect.

Old Gold: Deep yellow with faint pink stripes; the earliest and freest flowering of all yellow varieties; a decided improvement over Yellow Prince.

Superb: Seedling of Gloriosa x Enchantress; good stem of Gloriosa and free habit of Enchantress. Flesh pink, holds its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches. During the past four years it has proved to be one of the best commercial varieties.

All of the above varieties, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

Along with cold weather came plenty of funeral work, and this helped to keep everyone busy. Stock has been plentiful and of good quality. Chrysanthemums are about over, only a few poor ones remaining in the market. Carnations are fair and in much better supply than last year. A large quantity of Christmas greens is reaching the market, including good, and also poor, boxwoods. Holly generally is poor this year.

The florists' windows throughout the city are filled with baskets of strawflowers, statice, boxwoods, immortelles, etc., which make a pleasing contrast to the wintry weather that prevails.

The florists were optimistic regarding Christmas business this year and expected it to break previous records.

Eli Cross has leased a large store on Monroe avenue in which to do Christmas business. He has some exceptionally fine poinsettias and cyclamens.

This week's issue contains an obituary of George Hunter, senior member of the Crabb & Hunter Floral Co., who died December 14, at the age of 89.

Miss Mary Hartnett had a pretty window of Christmas novelties.

Henry Smith has some fine cut poinsettias, also good large-sized cyclamens.

The Wealthy Avenue Floral Co. conservatory is ablaze with crotons, poinsettias, primroses, pandanus, etc.

Alfred Hannah & Sons report that their azaleas arrived too late for Christmas flowering. They are well supplied with other flowering plants. A. F. C.

C. E. Wildon is to be with the G. H. Sinclair Holyoke store over the holidays.

Every florist knows through his own purchases what has happened in the paper market the last few months—prices have doubled all along the line.

And it takes more than four tons of paper each week to print The Review!

Many readers have been so kind as to write that The Review is worth considerably more to them than its subscription price. Well, the tremendous rise in the price of paper makes it no longer expedient to sell The Review at $1.00 a year.

The subscription price, therefore, will be advanced January 1, 1917, to $1.50 a year.

Until December 31, 1916, any member of the Trade may subscribe for one or more years at the old rate of $1.00 a year.

Readers whose present subscriptions do not expire until after January 1, 1917, may renew for as many years as they like at $1.00 per year, providing that such renewals are sent during 1916.

Send $1.00 and your subscription will be extended one year from the present date of expiration, whenever that may be.

Send $2.00 and the subscription will be extended two years from the present date of expiration.

Send $3.00 for three years, $5.00 for five years.

No renewals for a full year will be accepted at less than $1.50 unless they are mailed by December 31, 1916.

The Canadian subscription price will be $2.50 a year beginning January 1, 1917. Canadian renewals mailed on or before December 31, 1916, will be accepted at $2.00 a year.

The Market.

A week before Christmas finds the market short of stock. This is due to a shortening because of adverse weather conditions and the holding-back process of the growers. The shipping business has been excellent.

Roses are in fair supply, but need several days of bright weather during the early part of this week to bring them to a maximum crop for Christmas. Carnations are in excellent supply. Easter lilies are plentiful; the same is true of stevias. There is a good cut of poinsettias, and Paper White narcissi are in fair supply. Double violets, while arriving in excellent quantities, probably will run short of the Christmas day demand. Single violets, valley, orchids, sweet peas and callas are to be had. Greens are plentiful. Boxwoods, however, are practically sold out.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell is getting in a fine lot of lilies from the Hoffmeister Floral Co., of Lick Run.

C. J. Ohmer has purchased additional ground next to his place at West Palm Beach, Fla., and has planted four acres of the plot to plumosus, thus giving him a total of seven acres planted to plumosus. E. G. Gillett, who is distributing Mr. Ohmer's cut from this city, reports heavy orders for this green for Christmas.

William Taylor has a fine lot of poinsettias for L. H. Kyrk for Christmas.

Among recent visitors were S. T. Hardesty, of Columbus, O.; Dr. A. C. Carney, of Hamilton, O.; E. J. Fancourt, representing the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The Knoxville Society of Florists held its regular meeting Monday night, December 11, at Charles Baum's store. As this was the annual meeting, officers were elected for the coming year. The voting was by ballot and resulted as follows: President, Will Ryno; first vice-president, Mrs. Goetz; second vice-president, Miss Elsie Kirby; secretary and treasurer, R. E. Mapes, reëlected.

A committee consisting of the newly elected officers was appointed to make arrangements for the annual banquet, which takes the place of the January meeting of the society. R. E. M.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The annual meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, December 13, President James Macdonald presiding. The principal business was the election of officers for the ensuing year. The judges for the monthly exhibits were James Bell, Stephen Drombrowski and Thomas Twigg, and their awards were as follows: Peter Macdonald, first for a vase of twenty-five mixed carnations; John W. Everitt, first for fifty single violets, and honorable mention to Harry Goodband for a vase of chrysanthemums. Mrs. Payne Whitney was elected an honorary member of the society and three applications for active membership were received.

The president presented to the winners the silver and glass trophies won at the recent exhibitions. Treasurer Ernst J. Brown read his annual report, which showed that the society is in a splendid condition financially.

The balloting and installation of officers was well conducted under the supervision of James Duthie. The following officers were elected: President, James McCarthy; vice-president, James Gladstone; secretary, Ernst Westlake; corresponding secretary, Harry Goodband; treasurer, Ernst J. Brown; executive committee, Robert Jones, Joseph Adler, George Ford, John F. Johnson, Arthur Cook, Archie Trail, Frank Watson; trustee for three years, James Macdonald; trustee for two years, James Holloway.

Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose is made in the same factory and under the same standards of materials and workmanship as Goodyear Tires, the largest selling brand of tires in the world

This Hose Is Made for Florists

Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose is saving florists time, worry and annoyance every day and it is doing it economically, too, when length of service is considered.

This hose meets every requirement of the florist. It will not tie up into kinks. It slips easily and smoothly over rough concrete, cinder walks, and around greenhouse bench posts, without catching or damage.

And it will not burst!

Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose is so strongly constructed that the manufacturers are able to guarantee it against bursting at any time within two years.

It is a serviceable, all-the-year-round hose, made to withstand the workaday use around the greenhouse.

Do not confuse this superior, durable hose with the ordinary kind that gives but a few months' service.

Goodyear Wingfoot is entirely different from all other kinds.

Be sure to ask your dealer for Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose by name. You will find this name on every five-foot length.

Greenhouse Heating.

BRICK-SET OR FIRE-BOX?

Which is the more economical boiler to use, a bricked-in return tubular or a fire-box return tubular?

W. W. M.—Colo.

More depends upon the proper adjustment of the grate and heating areas than upon whether a brick-set or fire-box boiler is used. Ordinarily brick-set boilers are used for anything above twenty-five horsepower and we would have little preference down to fifteen horsepower, below which we would use a fire-box boiler.

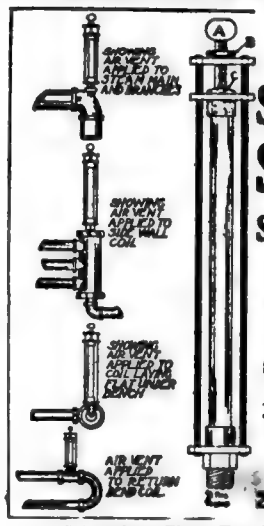
TEMPERATURE IS IN DOUBT.

I have built a new greenhouse and should like to have you advise me about the heating. The house is 20x50 and the rafters have a 32-degree pitch. There are two feet of glass in one side and the gable ends are glass. How much piping will be needed to heat the house to a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees in zero weather? How large a boiler will be required? R. B. R.—Me.

It will make considerable difference in the size of the boiler, as well as in the amount of radiation needed, whether the plants to be grown in the house will require 60 degrees in the coldest nights, or whether it will be safe to allow the temperature to drop to 50 degrees in the coldest weather, maintaining 60 degrees only in average winter weather.

For the former conditions we would suggest the use of three 2½-inch flow pipes and ten 2-inch returns. If 50 degrees will answer in extremely cold weather, we would use three 2-inch flow pipes and either eight 2-inch or ten 1½-inch returns. Two of the flows should be on the plates and the other about two feet below the ridge. With ten returns we would place three on each wall, or under the side benches, and the other four under the middle bench, connecting these four with the flow pipe overhead. If eight returns are used, two may be on the wall which has no glass and the others on the other side wall and under the middle bench.

In case the house has solid beds, we would use a 2½-inch flow upon each wall, with eleven 2-inch returns for 60 degrees and nine for 50 degrees, in two coils, placing the odd return on the side with glass. Run the flow pipes as well as the returns downhill, and connect the highest point of each flow pipe with the expansion tank.



For a temperature of 60 degrees we would use a hot water boiler rated for 600 square feet of radiation, and one with a rating of 500 square feet for 50 degrees.

TROUBLE WITH A STEAM TRAP.

We have installed a steam trap. The water inlet and outlet of the trap are made for 1½-inch pipe connections and the steam inlet of the trap is a 1¼-inch opening. The inlet and outlet of water and the inlet of steam have all been reduced to 1-inch pipe. Is that any reason why the trap does not work? The trap is situated on the side of the boiler, just above the water level in the boiler. A receiver of the condensation is placed on the same side of the boiler at the lowest point in the system, and protected by check valves to keep away boiler pressure. The gravity is sufficient; otherwise the system would not drain so perfectly as it does. There is a fall of at least eighteen inches between the lowest return in the system and the receiver from which the trap is fed. I am enclosing a sketch.

M. B. S.—Ky.

The capacity of the trap has been reduced by the use of the smaller pipes. Yet, if the trap is large enough to handle the water through 1-inch pipes, we do not see why it will not work satisfactorily, provided a steam pressure of five pounds or more is carried. Care should be taken that all parts are properly ad-

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

This city was fully prepared for Christmas. The flower stores were supplied to their utmost capacity to satisfy the demands for what was anticipated, the greatest Christmas on record. Never before did florists take such an interest in trying to teach the public that Christmas is the time to decorate their homes with ornamental wreaths and baskets, to give flowers and plants to their friends and the sick, to mark their remembrances of the dead by placing wreaths on the graves. Advertising in the daily papers and by means of folders and the like, everyone surely was reminded by florists that plants and cut flowers are ideal gifts.

One handicap, and by no means a small one, is the scarcity of azaleas. These plants, always the keystone of the Christmas business, will not be in bloom in time to be of any use. Due to the fact that most of these plants arrived too late to be forced, they are scarce. Poinsettias will be in good supply, however, and they will be sold several days before the holiday. Primroses and primulas will be big factors in the potted line, as also cyclamens. These plants are in excellent condition and many orders for them were placed early. As to the artificial line, baskets artistically arranged with boxwoods, statice, ruscus, etc., are seen in all the stores, and, on account of the scarcity of blooming plants, many of these will be sold. Roses will sell from $2 to $10 per dozen, while carnations will average from $1 to $2.50 per dozen. Narcissi will bring 75 cents per dozen. Violets are in large demand for the Christmas trade and orders are being booked at $3 per bunch. Valley is scarce at present. There will be a few sweet peas on the market. Palms, ferns, araucarias and rubbers are being sold in good numbers.

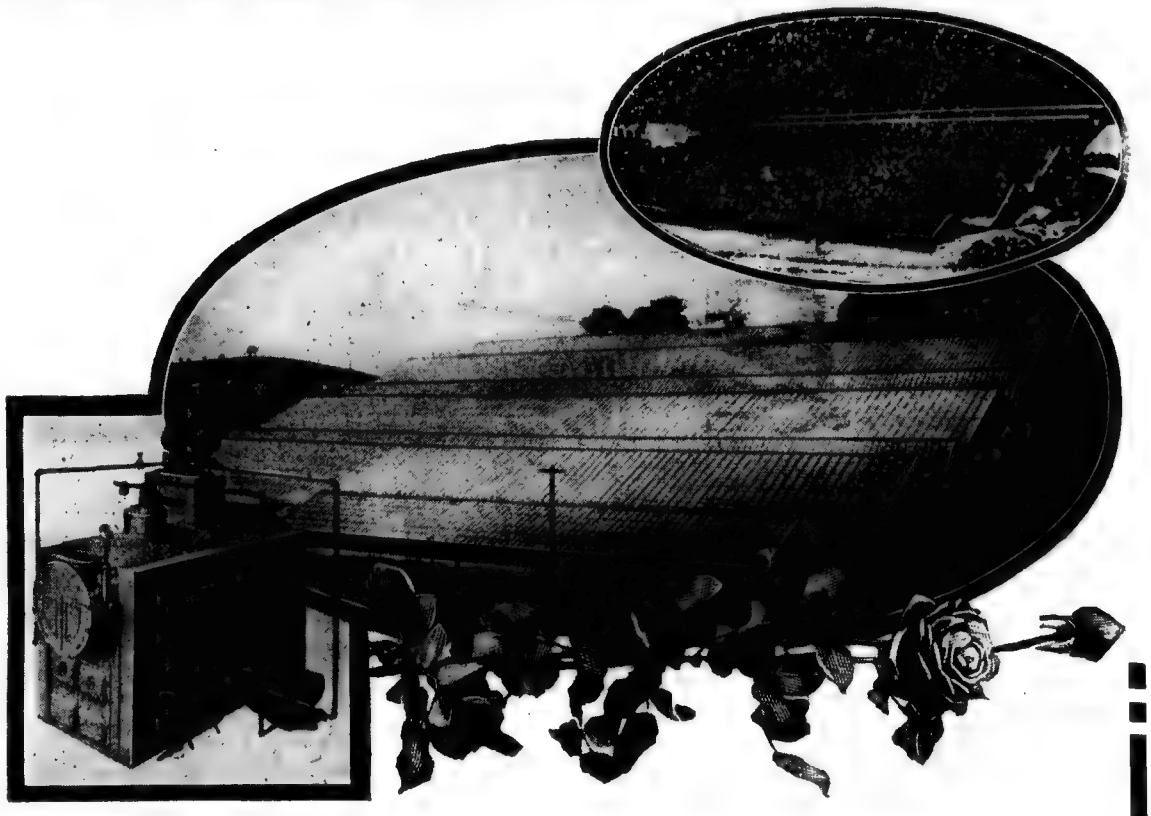
Florists were urging the public to have the purchases delivered December 23 and 24, in order to avert the final rush Monday.

Various Notes.

The Scottwood Greenhouses had on display some excellent specimens of Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, as well as poinsettias, both in pans and cut flowers. The management boasts of having the finest collection of made-up baskets of crotons, ranging in price from $10 to $25 each. Mr. Magee, the genial manager of this thriving concern, will not enjoy his Christmas rush this year, several bad boils necessitating his confinement to his home.

A spontaneous combustion last week in Feniger's Flower Shop, Adams street, caused considerable damage. The quickly arriving fire department confined the blaze to the rear of the store. Luckily, the fire will not interfere with the Christmas business.

J. L. Schiller, Toledo's primula specialist, was out driving in his auto the other day, accompanied by Messrs. Metz and Helmer. Through some mishap, Mr. Schiller tried to throw a passing street car off the track. He did not succeed, however, and, fortunately, no one was hurt. The car was not damaged to any great extent.



Henry Miller's carnation crop hit the mark squarely. Mr. Miller supplies about two-thirds of the carnations used in this city.

The Cushman Gladiolus Farm, of Sylvania, recently was sold to a local real estate firm, and the ground will be platted this spring for suburban residences. The Cushmans specialized in gladioli and dahlias, and many of these flowers were sent by them yearly to all parts of the state.

Mrs. Ernst Clauser, who is in St. Vincent's hospital, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis, is not improving so favorably as might be.

Schramm Bros. have added another Studebaker car to their delivery equipment. Frank Schramm has always advocated rapid and prompt deliveries, and in order to facilitate the delivery service for the special holidays, such as Christmas, he decided that another machine would be the thing.

A big Florists' Club meeting to be held right after New Year's to work out ideas for the new year is being advocated by local florists. Committees will be appointed to work along different lines and to broaden the scope of this live-wire organization. The members want to place the local club in the lead with those of other large cities, as to the work it accomplishes. Interesting news in regard to this meeting will appear in these columns in the near fu-

To say that irregularity of temperature in your houses spoils the perfection of your roses is only another way of saying that the drainage in your steam lines is not what it ought to be. The Market.

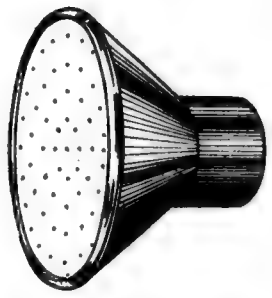
The florists are busily occupied in getting things in shape for the Christmas rush. Flowers and plants in large variety will be in good supply, and it is hoped by all that the weather will be warm enough so that little wrapping will be necessary.

Various Notes.

J. C. Elspermann has a fine stock of plants for Christmas. He has moved into his new home.

Karl Zeidler reports a good business. He will have a large crop of roses and carnations for the holidays.



The Blackman Floral Co. is preparing for a big Christmas business. Its stock of plants and cut flowers is splendidly grown.

The Evansville Florists' Club met at the Julius Niednagel & Sons establishment December 13. Fred Niednagel, W. J. Ritterskamp and John Sandefur made application for membership and were accepted. After the business meeting everybody was shown through the Niednagel houses, which are in fine shape. The begonias, bouvardias, azaleas, Paper Whites, primulas and made-up pans of ferns and coleus were fine. The carnations are in good crop and thousands will be cut for Christmas. The club members later went over to C. L. Niednagel's and inspected the roses and poinsettias. The roses are great, especially Russell. The next meeting will be held at the J. C. Elspermann place, January 10.

E. L. Fenton's father and brother arrived last week for a visit during the holidays. Mr. Fenton's father is 81 years old and resides at Wright, Minn.

Club Banquet.

December 14 the Lancaster County Florists' Club held its annual banquet in Brenneman hall. Heretofore January has been the month selected for this joyous occasion, but this year December was chosen, with a view to having a larger attendance of members, as the rough and cold weather of January often kept the members at home. Nothing was gained this year, however, for the weather was in the zero class, with a foot of snow; and many of the smaller growers stayed by their firesides. Twenty-five sat down to a fine dinner served by Caterer Stegeman.

Rudolph Nagel, in behalf of the club, presented to President Harry A. Schroyer a token of the club's regard for the officer's faithful services during the last year. The Henry F. Michell Co. medals, awarded at the flower show in November, were presented to the winners. M. J. Brinton was called upon for remarks and spoke of the increased Christmas demand for flowers occasioned by those who are not regular buyers throughout the year, but who, if not overcharged at this time, will become permanent buyers of florists' wares. B. F. Barr spoke along the same line.

A short business meeting then was held, at which the following were nominated for officers: For president, Harry A. Schroyer; vice-president, Willis B. Girvin; secretary, Frank L. Kohr; treasurer, Harry K. Rohrer. The flower show account, audited by E. P. Hostetter, Amos N. Rohrer and Willis B. Girvin, was presented and accepted. The report showed that after the Armory fund had been set aside a good balance remained for the club treasury.

J. De Barry Heinitsh was elected an amateur member of the club.

At the club's next meeting, January 18, carnations will be the topic under discussion. We expect to have exhibits of the newer varieties, and a paper will be presented by Elmer J. Weaver, who is an authority on the subject and who has more of the newer varieties under cultivation than any other grower in the county.

Ralph Murphy and Rudolph Nagel were appointed captains in the bowling contest. At first duck pins were used, but later the large ones. Those who won prizes were L. S. Landis, David Rose, Ben. Sterneman and Rudolph Nagel.

Various Notes.

The carnation cut throughout the county will be light for Christmas.

Charles M. Weaver and E. P. Hostetter will have fine crops of sweet peas for the Christmas market.

Paper Whites are grown extensively by M. J. Brinton, E. J. Weaver, W. B. Girvin, Ira Landis and Enos Kohr, who report good prices and a generally satisfactory market.

The flower stores are wearing gala holiday attire; they are artistically decorated with holly, laurel wreathing and Christmas greens.

Among those who contemplate building the coming year are H. B. Weaver, of Bird-in-Hand; B. F. Barr, Enos Lefever and E. F. Campbell, of Marietta, Pa.

Albert M. Herr, in addition to his other duties, finds time to help to arrange for the pure food show and the annual holiday exhibition of "made in Lancaster" products at the Y. M. C. A. hall.

The Market.

Newark's flower stores, as usual, have a festive appearance. Business is good, but not booming. It is probable that florists may miss some trade this Christmas because the holiday falls on Monday. Christmas eve many persons usually drop in to get something to take home for Christmas. As Christmas eve is on Sunday, it is probable that the Saturday night trade will not be so great as if Christmas day were on Sunday. Some who do buy probably will order their purchases delivered, instead of taking them home personally.

Christmas heather is in the market. Roses are arriving in quantities sufficient for the demand and are of good quality. Some nice baby roses are seen. Carnations are in fair supply. Primroses in bloom are plentiful. Paper White narcissi are more prominent. Chrysanthemums have practically disappeared, only a few of the later varieties arriving now.

Various Notes.

The December number of Strobell's Magazine, issued by Henry Strobell, of 931 Broad street, was a most attractive issue, giving many timely flower and decorative hints. It was profusely illustrated.

Fred Wolfinger had an attractive window last week in which Christmas heather, Paper White narcissi, poinsettias and other flowers were arranged with pleasing effect. R. B. M.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The annual meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society last week was one of the most interesting and enthusiastic ever held. During the meeting the proposed schedule for the flower show to be held in June in conjunction with the Newport Garden Association was adopted. The financial reports were satisfactory, as were the annual reports of the officers and committees.

The election of officers resulted in the following choice: President, John B. Urquhart; first vice-president, James Bond; second vice-president, Frederick Carter; financial secretary, William Gray; recording secretary, Frederick P. Webber; treasurer, Andrew K. McMahon; sergeant-at-arms, William F. Smith; executive committee, to act in conjunction with the officers, who are members ex-officio, Andrew Meikle, Bruce Butterton, James Watt, William MacKay, Arthur W. Potter, Jr., Alexander MacLellan, James Robertson and Andrew J. Dorward. W. H. M.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

Charles E. Nelson, of Wellsville, O., is an active member of the Chamber of Commerce, which has a motto, "Welfare of Wellsville." Mr. Nelson is doing his share by making attractive displays of flowers and by showing that flowers play an active part in the welfare of any community.

Joseph Haube, of Charleroi, Pa., still has his perpetual smile, and with a continuance of good business the well known smile is not likely to come off.

W. Grant Kintigh, of Irwin, Pa., said he was looking forward to a most successful holiday trade.

W. W. Bortz, of Greensburg, Pa., had a display of attractive baskets filled with artificial flowers, and these seemed to meet with a ready sale.

T. Malbrane, of Johnstown, Pa., had a showing of poinsettias of more than usual merit.

The shortage of cars made it necessary for Myer Bros., of Altoona, Pa., to purchase a motor truck to haul coal from the mine to their greenhouses.

W. H. Brouse, of Tyrone, Pa., has sold his greenhouses to Frank Luce, of Bellwood, Pa. The houses are being torn down and moved to the Luce place.

Adolph Engelman, of Tyrone, reports a most successful season, with a large, well paying crop of mums.

W. T. U.

SEWICKLEY, PA.

The regular meeting of the Sewickley Horticultural Society was held December 12 in the Odd Fellows' hall, Broad street, Sewickley, Vice-presidnt R. Boxel presiding. The secretary reported attending a meeting of the Ladies' Garden Club committee and gave an account of some new classes added to the schedule for the big June flower show. M. Curran resigned his office of secretary.

The new office-bearers for 1917 were elected as follows: President, John Barnet; vice-president, A. E. Bonsey; treasurer, William Thomson, Jr.; secretary, John Corman; executive committee, Alexander Davidson, William Thomson, Sr., Charles Patton, R. Boxel and William Gillies.

John Barnet and A. E. Bonsey gave an interesting account of their trip to the convention at Washington, D. C., stating that the hospitality and arrangements were all that could be desired, and also that there were prospects of the 1918 convention coming to Pittsburgh.

The secretary gave his annual report, showing our young society to be in a flourishing condition. Probably on account of the winter weather, the exhibits were few and it is to be hoped the members will attend to this important part of the proceedings better in the future. Twenty-one new members were elected and eight applications filed.

The Market.

Except funeral work, there is comparatively little activity in flowers, aside from anything red. All the stores report exceptionally heavy demands for Christmas greens and reds, and already orders for later deliveries are stacked high on the hooks. Azaleas, poinsettias, begonias, Jerusalem cherries, ardisias and other plants are arriving in large quantities and command ready sale at satisfactory prices.

Various Notes.

Otto Hassett reports a heavy run of funeral work.

William Appleton, of Broadway, had a large number of pieces for the funeral of William Haven.

Drabble Bros. are conducting a branch store for the holidays in the Crowell block, Main street, Woonsocket.

T. J. Johnston & Co., Edward Brooke, manager, are preparing to remove from 171 Weybosset street to their new place on Washington street directly after New Year's.

F. Macrae & Sons are cutting 1,000 Easter lilies daily for shipment to the New York market.

Charles Smith, the Florist, reports an unusually heavy run on Christmas greens of all kinds.

Thomas Curley has been bringing in some extra fine poinsettias, both cut and in pots.

Johnston Bros. have been busy with work for weddings and social functions. Their Christmas business has exceeded that of any previous year.

Superintendent of Parks Frederic C. Green, City Forester Alexander H. Johnson, Prof. E. K. NOTICE

To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the

Horticultural Advertiser

Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports on all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of $1.00, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

Your Customers Their Own Salesmen

Put one of these new Pexto Pruning Shears Display Boards in your window or inside your store and watch your sales on this item mount and your selling cost drop.

That's because this handsome fixture not only attracts trade, but enables the customer to be his own salesman.

It displays thirteen of the most popular numbers of the Pexto line, gives the prices of each shear, which range from 60c to $2.00, and leaves nothing for you or your clerks to do but to make change. Prices are printed on the back for use in case you do not want them to appear under the shears.

This brand-new Pexto Display Board is made of metal and finished in four colors. Size 19x27 inches. Will stand or hang.

If your jobber can't supply you, write us. We'll be glad to tell you also about our other Tool Display fixtures

HAPPY GREENHOUSE FACT:

"With CYPRESS You Build but Once"

"With any other material you're 'billed' perpetually"

CYPRESS "THE WOOD ETERNAL"

You save many times over (by avoiding repairs and replacements) what slight premium you pay a high-class contractor for using Cypress at first. It is worth good money to you if you will but profit by the following suggestions:

DON'T buy sash or other woodwork that is painted. Paint covers sap, checks and a multitude of other wood sins. Insist on seeing the raw wood.

DON'T buy excessively kiln-dried wood—air-dried is immeasurably better. Greenhouse lumber that has to travel 3,000 miles may be excused if it is kiln-dried to death to save freight over the mountains, but that excuse doesn't make it any better for you.

DON'T forget that you are wasting valuable time whenever you stop and listen to a whimwham about some "substitute" wood for heart Cypress. There can't be any substitute until nature invents a new species of wood. (Nothing to it but PECKY Cypress for Benches.)

DON'T fuss at the building contractor if he insists on putting a smooth surface on your work—it is to your advantage. Cypress takes that smooth surface. And takes paint perfectly if you want it to. Yet lasts generations without any paint.

DON'T laugh at the statement that Cypress sash has been in uninterrupted use in a greenhouse for 45 years. It can be proved. Can a "substitute" wood equal the record? Isn't that a money-saver?

JUST FIGURE your construction costs by the year and you'd pay twice the slight additional price of "The Wood Eternal" over the short-lived woods.

Send us your name, Mr. Greenhouse Man, for one or more of the valuable booklets in our free Cypress Pocket Library. Vol. 3, "The Greenhouse Wood"; Vol. 16, "Cypress for Porches"; Vol. 30, "Cypress for Pergolas, etc.," and Vol. 28, "Cypress for Trellises and Arbors." Free as grace. WRITE.

PELARGONIUMS.

PELARGONIUMS.

Remember we are the real distributors of Easter Greeting; the first one to advertise it,—now look at 'em. Wide awake florists know a good thing when they see it. Some are a little slow at first, but that isn't to be wondered at when one considers the "new frauds." But listen! Get in the swim for 1917. We have over 25,000 coming for November and December sales and hope to have 50,000 coming a little later, $7.50 per 100. We are making them by special machinery and the war hasn't changed the price. Our guarantee covers everything.
S. C. TEMPLIN,
EASTER GREETING SPECIALIST,
GARRETTSVILLE, OHIO

Pelargoniums. Grow those Easter Greetings and her sports; grow a 35c plant where you now grow a 10c one or a 7c rooted cutting where you now get a 1c one. What Will You Do?

—read your only course of action in these letters!

On November 24th we sent the following letter to all the steel companies in the country:—

"GENTLEMEN:—We require the following list of steel the latter part of 1917 and would like to know what part of this list you could accept for mill shipment, and approximately when you can make delivery (standard sizes totaling 300 tons).

"We are willing to take the steel whenever it is rolled by the mill. If you will kindly name us price as soon as possible we will appreciate it, as we want to place order at once."

Here are sample answers:

"American Greenhouse Mfg. Co.
Chicago, Ill. Nov. 27, 1916.

GENTLEMEN:—Your inquiry of the 24th inst., addressed to our North Works, has been referred to us, and in reply regret to say we are unable to submit quotation on the tonnage involved, inasmuch as we could not offer shipment during any time next year. Thanking you for the inquiry, we are

Yours very truly,
(Signed) —— Steel Co."

"American Greenhouse Mfg. Co.
Chicago, Ill. Nov. 25, 1916.

GENTLEMEN:—Answering your inquiry of November 24th, we regret to advise that we have no material to offer for 1917 per list given us. Thanking you, however, we remain,

Yours very truly,
(Signed) —— Steel Co."

These letters may be seen at our office.

Every firm using steel is up against this.

Just what does this mean to you?

It means that the steel to build your greenhouse during the latter part of 1917 will have to be purchased from the warehouses after our present supply on hand is exhausted. The difference between the cost of steel direct from the mills and from the warehouse is approximately $15.00 a ton. This means that a greenhouse 60x500 feet, the erection of which requires 40 tons of steel, will cost you, next year, $600.00 more for steel alone!

To sell at a good profit is only one side of a successful business. In fact, much of the success of large business is due to some keen, alert business man's buying at the right turn of the market. This is the right turn.

When We Recommend

Built by us for Mr. A. H. Schneider, at Oak Park, Ill.

What would it be worth to you to have a range of houses full of cyclamens like these?

It takes an expert grower to produce stock of this quality, but Mr. Erickson (Mr. Schneider's foreman) says that it would not be possible without good greenhouses.

Mr. Schneider let us build these greenhouses for him exactly as we recommended. To say that he is satisfied is putting it mildly.

Let us figure with you now. Our estimates, sketches and advice are free.

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS—PAGES TWO AND THREE

A Greenhouse Construction of Everlasting Lastingness

First Cost

IT'S not what a thing actually costs at the start that is its real cost. It is what it costs at the start, combined with what it continues to cost you. That's the only safe and sound way to figure comparative costs of our house of Everlasting Lastingness with any other construction.

What a house continues to cost you, is of two kinds.

1. The continued cost of repairs.
2. The continued cost of the cost of less stock produced, and poorer quality of stock grown. A cost loss in both quantity and quality.

To consider only the first cost and ignore the continued cost, is only figuring half way.

Erection Cost

The erection cost of our Iron Frame house is less than for the Semi-iron, so what you save in cost of materials on one you come close to making up on erection saving on the other.

The fact that so much of our Iron Frame is assembled and hot-riveted or bolted together at our factories gives a decided erection speed advantage over other constructions of similar type.

Protection

It makes absolutely no difference what type of construction you put up, the cost of the benches, ventilating apparatus, heating system, glass, putty, paint stock, the glazing and the painting will cost exactly the same in one house as the other.

These things are fixed costs.

This being so, it is only the logical thing to spend a few dollars more and get a frame of Everlasting Lastingness, that will protect these fixed costs and make their expenditure a permanent investment.

That is exactly what the Lord & Burnham Iron Frame construction does.

Productiveness

The telling test of a house is not its productiveness as a plant house, but its yield in roses. That's the actual final test. A house, then, that will produce the greatest quantity and highest quality of roses can be made to produce practically anything.

A prominent grower, who has a half-dozen or so of our wide Iron-framers, says: "If you want to get top-notch prices, build top-notch houses, that will grow top-notch stock. Some houses may produce top-notch some of the time. What the grower wants is a house that will do it most of the time."

The fact that 75% of the prize winnings in the big shows are won with stock grown in our houses tells its own story of their superior productiveness.

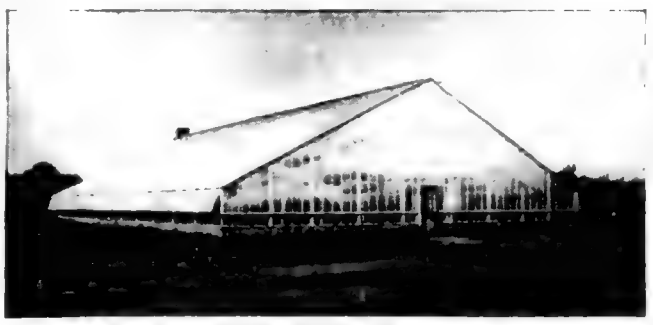
Columns

We can build you an Iron Frame house as wide as 78 feet, and use only two columns. This we accomplish without any elaborately involved system of truss-stiffening of the frame.

For those, however, who prefer more columns we will gladly use them. But our houses up to 78 feet are abundantly strong with but two. For a time we extensively used double angle iron columns, but the pipe column is now a part of our standard construction. It is easy to keep painted, and in most cases is sufficiently strong.

Rigidity

Loosening of glass tells of lack of rigidity. The fact that our houses "stay tight" year after year tells its own story of right glazing methods and entire frame rigidity.



Wide Rafter Spacing

Some time before anyone else had even started to work out a construction with wide rafter spacing, we had erected two big houses, using a spacing of eight sixteen-inch lights of glass between rafters, instead of six. It was a decided success—so much so that we have erected for the same company eight other additional houses.

Not until two years after this radical improvement did we advertise the fact of a wide-spaced construction. In those two years we were systematically making close observations, based on which we worked out a construction that went still a step farther. The present nine-light spacing, or 12 feet 6 inches between rafters, is the result.

It greatly reduces the number of rafters and columns over the old six-light spacing, making one of the lightest, prettiest houses you ever set foot in.

It's the model construction of today.

Expert Advice

Remember that at all times you are welcome to the consulting advice of our construction experts. It is a service we urge you to take advantage of. If you are ready to talk over building possibilities, say when and where and we'll be there.

Selected Finest Mixed	.05	.20	.50

ASTER, Carlson or Invincible

Early-flowering Branching Aster

No Aster has been esteemed more highly by the florist trade than this variety; it has good size and, by reason of excellent habit, long stems and blooms, it comes between our Queen of the Market and Hohenzollern Asters.

	Pkt.	¼-oz.	Oz.
White	$0.15	$0.40	$1.25
Pink	.15	.40	1.25
Lavender	.15	.40	1.25

Aster, S. & W. Co.'s Late Branching

We cannot emphasize too strongly the merits of our strain of this grand Aster. It is much superior to Semple's Branching in vigor, size and profuse blooming qualities. Excellent for late cutting.

	Pkt.	¼-oz.	Oz.
Pure White	$0.10	$0.30	$1.00
Lavender	.10	.30	1.00
Purple	.10	.30	1.00

Carmine	.10	.30	1.00
Mixed	.10	.30	1.00

Aster, Giant Comet

Long, narrow petals which curve at the ends give this flower the appearance of a Japanese chrysanthemum. Long stems.

	Pkt.	¼-oz.	Oz.
Snow-white	$0.10	$0.50	$1.50
Rose	.10	.50	1.50

Choice Mixed	.10	.40	1.25

BEGONIAS

As bedding plants, the florist has come to recognize these as most satisfactory.

	Pkt.
Gracilis, Prima Donna. Pale rose; foliage green, tinted brown	$0.15
Gracilis, Bonfire. Lustrous carmine-scarlet; metallic brown foliage	.15
Gracilis luminosa. Brilliant, fiery dark scarlet	.15
Semperflorens Erfordii. Soft rosy carmine. Trade pkt., $1; 1/64 oz., $2.75	.15
Semperflorens, Rose. Pale rose. ⅛ oz., $2	.10
Semperflorens, Vernon. Bright orange-carmine; deep red foliage. Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., $1	.10
Semperflorens, White. White. ⅛ oz., $2	.10

SALVIAS

Our strains of Salvias have all been grown especially for us and have been selected from specimen blooms.

BONFIRE. Undoubtedly one of the best Salvias for bedding purposes. Long, stiff spikes of brilliant scarlet flowers. Pkt., 10 cts.; ¼ oz., 75 cts., oz., $2.

Splendens. Scarlet Sage. Beautiful, bright scarlet; grows about 3 feet. Pkt., 5 cts.; ¼ oz., 50 cts.; oz., $1.50.

ZURICH. A very early, free-flowering variety of the Splendens type, the plant not exceeding 12 inches in height, of compact habit, and bearing a great profusion of brilliant scarlet flowers. Pkt., 15 cts.; ¼ oz., $1.25; oz., $4.50.

VINCAS

Excellent bedding plants; sow seeds early.

Alba.	Pure white	$0.10	$0.60
Rosea.	Bright rose	.10	.60
Rosea alba.	White, with rosy eye	.10	.60
Mixed		.10	.50

Pink Enchantress

PINK ENCHANTRESS

Upright in habit, as distinguished from the Branching form. The pant is very vigorous, and produces long, strong stems for the support of numerous large exhibition blooms. The flower is always full double; petals are of medium length and very broad; those toward the center fold in very regularly, while gradually, toward the outer edge, the petals stand out more and more until those on the outside recede from the center, thus increasing the diameter of the flower, which compares very favorably in size with the largest-flowering kinds on our farm. Color similar to that of the Enchantress carnation; flowers late. Pkt., 15c; ⅛ oz., 50c; ¼ oz., $1.00; oz., $3.00.

MAGNOLIA FACTS

¶Yes, Mr. Florist, be particular as to what kind of Magnolia Leaves you buy now, under the present conditions.

¶Dye colors have advanced from 1000% to 2000%; preparing chemicals have exactly doubled in prices since the war began, as have also the paper cartons. In spite of this, we are in position to furnish you with first-class Magnolia Leaves through your wholesaler at a small advance in comparison with the above.

¶We guarantee that the quality of our leaves is as good now as they were before the war, and that they are prepared fully, regardless of the above-stated high prices of the materials.

¶You fool yourself if you buy the cheaper grade of leaves, as they will become mildewed and they will dry out shortly after the boxes are opened. Our goods are sold by every leading wholesale florist in the United States and Canada, and they have stood the test for the past six years.

¶A magnolia leaf is only worth using if it has been fully preserved, but NOT by a cheap process, which enables others to sell the leaves cheaper by a few cents. You pay these few cents about ten or fifteen times over, when you consider the poor value of these goods.

Hamburg Late White Chrysanthemum

This picture was taken November 26, 1916, and will give a good idea of what Hamburg Late White looks like when grown to single stems and planted six inches each way.

Hamburg Late White is pure white under all weather conditions, and is a sport of White Maud Dean, but has no trace of pink as has the original.

The average grower of Chrysanthemums must have varieties which are easy to handle, and from which he can cut as near 100% of perfect blooms as possible. Hamburg Late White has been grown for the last four years, and produces a very high proportion of good flowers. It is not an exhibition variety, but for late white, one of the best for commercial purposes. It can be had in bloom the latter part of November, by taking an early bud; but by selecting later buds, most of the flowers are cut during December, and we would advise a selection of late buds, as the later buds come somewhat fuller, and by selecting late buds, flowers can be had as late as the middle of January.

Keeping qualities are excellent, and where a light, graceful white flower is wanted, Hamburg Late White cannot be surpassed.

Hamburg Late White will be disseminated in the spring of 1917. Plants will be ready March 1, 1917, and all orders will be filled in rotation.

CHRISTMAS TRADE MAKES NEW RECORD

The Christmas trade reports are unusually similar this year—it was a big Christmas, the largest ever, and it was profitable to the individual in proportion to the way certain unusual and unfavorable conditions affected or failed to affect the busines s of that individual.

TAKING it by and large, this year's Christmas business went ahead of that of the best previous Christmas just in proportion to the individual's capacity for meeting the conditions—there was no limit to the demand, but the business was seriously limited by the fact that the rush was of short duration. The early days of the week were uncommonly wintry over almost the entire United States, but the temperature moderated as the week drew to a close and, where the weather had operated to check early buying, at the finish it was a favorable factor in a most unholy rush.

It is worth while noting that the same conditions prevailed in almost all parts of the country—weather conditions were similar; demand was uniformly the strongest ever known; the business had to be done in a few short selling hours, practically all in the last three days and as much December 23 as all the rest of the week; plants were a less conspicuous feature than in recent years, for the reason that the supply was not so large as usual and retailers, failing to obtain as many as wanted, were forced to fall back on cut flowers; the supply of cut flowers, checked to an alarming degree by the severe weather of the previous week, almost everywhere proved larger than expected.

Different Groups.

Of course there were exceptions, but they are not sufficiently numerous to more than prove the rule—this was a Christmas of strikingly uniform conditions over the whole country.

The flower business has so broadened in the last few years that it has divided into groups, the interests and experience of each group somewhat different from the others.

Most numerous of these, and probably representing the greater part of the business done at the holiday, is the group composed of those who operate greenhouses and retail therefrom. In most cases these men are located in small towns, or at least in the residence or suburban districts of larger ones. Rarely do such places experience a rush that is beyond their ability to wait on trade, but in the aggregate they dispose of an enormous quantity of stock and form the real backbone of the trade. They never cleaned up closer than they did this Christmas.

These retail growers buy little stock in wholesale markets—with rare exceptions they sell at prices that limit their activities to the stock matured in their own greenhouses, but this year, prompted perhaps by the general inflation of commodity prices, they appear to have asked somewhat better money than heretofore and to have had no difficulty in getting what they asked.

With the Retailers.

The second largest group in the trade is composed of those who conduct retail stores. Their number has increased immensely in the last two or three years. Just by way of statistics, there now are 228 cities of 25,000 population in the United States and it is believed there is not one of these without one or more downtown retail flower stores. It is estimated that in the fifty cities of 100,000 and up there is one retail flower store for each 5,000 inhabitants—it still is far less than the number of saloons in the wet towns, but the flower stores are making steady progress and are merchandising great quantities of stock.

Some of the retail flower stores have greenhouse connections, but the greater number draw their stock exclusively from wholesale growers or commission houses. As a rule they sell at better prices than do the men who retail in the packing shed, but their best holiday is not necessarily one that is best for the growers. This Christmas they had to pay rather more than usual for their stock, both plants and cut flowers. Those who did not raise their retail prices therefore did business on a narrower margin than heretofore at Christmas. But demand was strong enough so that price was not a bar—the limits were imposed by the size of the store, the supply of stock and the question of help.

It is apparent that many retailers would have been better satisfied if stock had been a little more plentiful, and quite a few had something worth while left un-

Wholesalers.

For the growers for the wholesale markets, who constitute the third largest group in the trade, this was the banner Christmas. There are instances, of course, where a grower, or a group of growers, did not have enough plants ready or did not cut enough flowers to profit by the splendid demand. As a rule, however, each grower received a larger sum of money this Christmas than ever before. It is not that top prices were higher, for they were not; it was because the demand was so broad it resulted in better average prices. The principal exceptions were white carnations, Paper White narcissi and white roses, of importance in the order named.

Taking the principal lines of Christmas stock in the order of their importance, cut flowers were not in oversupply at any of the shipping centers, but in most cases the shortage, if any, was less severe than had been expected. The demand, as usual, was strongest for red and lightest for white; while more red and deep pink flowers could have been sold, had these been in larger supply the white flowers would have fared worse. Of the newer varieties, Russell and Hadley were in special demand. There are numerous reports of delayed trains that brought stock to wholesalers after the demand was over, and of serious delays in the delivery of shipments to retailers, the adjustment of which will cut down the profits.

Plants Least Abundant.

In comparison to the demand, the supply of plants was far short. There are growers who had as many plants as ever, and for them it was a wonderful Christmas, but the lateness and loss of azaleas left a big hole and cyclamens and poinsettias were less numerous than usual. It made an extra call for ferns, palms, araucarias, etc., and it helped the cut flower trade immensely, for many stores that usually push plants were compelled to give cut flowers at least an equal show this time.

Greens also were scarce, but there was no lack of accessories. Many retail flower stores now sell great quantities of related merchandise, principally baskets, vases, flower bowls and novelties appropriate to the environment. On these there was no shortage and the sales broke all records.

Monday for Christmas.

The trade is almost unanimously in favor of having Christmas on Monday every year if it can be arranged. Instead of having to plunge into putting up orders and delivery the moment the door closed on the late customers, it was possible for the busiest to close up Saturday night, get some much needed sleep and tackle the orders and deliveries Sunday morning with two comparatively quiet days for the task. It was a great advantage.

TIME TO SOW PRIMULAS.

When is the proper time to start primroses from seed for next year's fall and winter trade? W. V. R.—Minn.

Primula Sinensis and P. obconica for fall and winter flowering should be sown not later than February 15. For blooming in February and March, sowing may be made as late as May, but for early flowers you must sow early. P. malacoides now is quite popular. It is a rapid grower and its seeds need not be sown before July 1. C. W.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

BOUCHER'S IDEAL CLERK.

Speaking on "The Marketing Problems and Methods of Retail Florists" at the December 11 meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association, George T. Boucher declared that increased competition was making the retailing of flowers so difficult that only by strict application of modern business methods could the florists succeed.

One of the difficult problems that the florist faced was the lack of persons competent to sell flowers, said the speaker, since the successful flower store clerk needed more than any other store salesman to be "up to his job."

The desirable and successful clerk is the one, said Mr. Boucher, who likes the work of selling flowers, is neatly dressed, is courteous and always in control of himself, even in the face of rudeness; is willing to learn and to receive suggestions, and is enthusiastic.

"Enthusiasm in a clerk may be acquired, and it makes a clerk really an asset to his employer," Mr. Boucher went on. "Enthusiasm vitalizes the clerk's selling abilities, makes him forcible, optimistic, creates a bond of sympathy between buyer and clerk, and changes apathy into interest. Real enthusiasm, tempered so that it won't carry the clerk beyond the customer's own viewpoint, is one of the big qualities of the really successful clerk."

A LETTER FROM A LADY.

Among professional advertising men there is a belief that an advertisement should be frankly an advertisement and not masquerade as something else, but in working up the Christmas trade a New York firm used a unique letter written to its retail customers in the neat longhand of the young lady of the office. It was on plain stationery of the kind used by ladies and each missive was delivered by messenger. It read as follows:

37 West 28th St.,
New York, Dec. 11, '16.

Dear Friend:—I am a little fairy; I live among the flowers and I carry flowers and happiness with me wherever I go. I love to make people happy, don't you? I will tell you how to do it.

I know six of your dear friends of whom you are very fond and you often wonder how you could convey a kind thought to them in a pretty way. Now, what is prettier than a dainty basket of flowers or an elaborate hamper of plants? Surely, these are at all times welcome and appropriate gifts—and Christmas is so near!

How would you like to see a hundred darling floral arrangements and thousands of handsome flowering plants all at one time and in one grand wilderness? You can, if you come with me just before Christmas to my Fairyland of flowers. It is not far, only 37 West Twenty-eighth street, in the flower land of Woodrow & Marketos. You will come, won't you?

Fayrie.

P. S. Why, in your own library there is an empty corner that is waiting to be cheered up with a plant or two.

Each missive was accompanied by three violets and a spray of asparagus pinned on the envelope.

The results are said to have been excellent.

PALETTE GOOD DISPLAY UNIT.

An artist's palette, three and one-half feet at the longest part, is the feature of an attractive window display at the store of Z. D. Blackistone, Washington, D. C. This palette, which is shown in the accompanying illustration, is covered with dark green velvet, and on it flowers are placed, somewhat after the fashion of daubs of paint. Each day the design on the palette is changed. One day the window-dresser will put on a corsage or two, each one, of course, being different. The next day it may be a colonial bouquet. This is followed up with loose flowers, artistically arranged, and shower bouquets and other designs.

The so-called palette is displayed on an easel made of white-enameled portiere rods, obtainable at any furniture store. These are touched up a bit with gilt, thus adding to the attractiveness of the stand and killing the dead white. The palette and easel form a full window display in themselves, nothing additional being needed to fill in.

In speaking of the display, Mr. Blackistone said: "We have found this one of the best things for exhibition in the window, as it is a display in itself. Put a corsage bouquet in the window and it hardly would be seen, but when it is placed on the palette everybody stops to look at it. The result has been that perhaps a week or ten days after some particular design has appeared, a passer-by will come into the store and ask us to make up a piece 'similar to that displayed in the window the other day, made up of ———.' It gives the people ideas, for a display of this type is apt to remain for some time in one's mind, making, as it does, a strong impression, and we find that it is creating a demand for make-up work that heretofore did not come to us. It enables us to sell a much better grade of stock —the price of the individual articles being much larger than would otherwise be the case. The whole thing is simple to make and does not require the use of so many flowers as other displays."

BEDS OR BENCHES.

I would like to get some information on greenhouse benches. Which is better for commercial use for roses and carnations, raised or solid benches? Is there any difference in time of producing a crop? Would the difference of production on raised benches offset the cost of building them? R. H.—Kan.

In the Atlantic coast states the most expert rose growers use ground beds, but in the middle west roses are grown on raised benches exclusively. Few growers anywhere now use ground beds for carnations. The evidence is that the stock is easier to handle on raised benches and that results for the average man will be enough better to more than repay the cost of building and maintaining the tables. F. R.

TO EXTERMINATE MOLES.

We are growing sweet peas in solid beds and moles are making a tunnel under each row. We have tried corn soaked in arsenic and Paris green with meal, but with no effect. Will carbon bisulphide kill the peas? What can we do to get rid of the moles? They also are in our violets. F. W. & C.—Ind.

One remedy is to mix arsenic with bran, punch a hole with a broomstick through the runs, then pour a little poisoned bran in the hole. Moles are particularly fond of bran. Pieces of fat meat rolled in arsenic, the size of the end of one's small finger, dropped down the holes also prove effective. Another plan of proven success is to open one or two places in the runs ten to twelve inches long, sprinkle these well with powdered lye, lay a narrow board so that it will fit down just below the surface of the ground and cover with soil. The place should then be avoided for some hours. Moles have a keen sense of smell, but lye is odorless, so they walk into it. As the lye sticks to their feet, they naturally lick it off and are killed. Leave ample room between the board and bottom of the run.

Carbon bisulphide will suffocate moles, woodchucks, rabbits and other pests if it is placed in runs where they are and if the exits are closed at once. An old sponge or some cotton waste soaked with the carbon should be pushed well into the run with a stick. There are some good mole traps on the market, of which I have found the Reddick the most effective. C. W.

THEY WILL LET US OUT

MISBRANDING BILL CHANGED?

To Protect This Trade.

The Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House of Representatives, it is expected, immediately following the reconvening of Congress at the conclusion of the Christmas recess, will take action upon the proposal of Representative Barkley, of Kentucky, to amend his so-called misbranding bill so as to exempt seeds, greenhouse and hardy herbaceous plants and nursery stock from its provisions.

The Barkley bill, which, as previously noted in the columns of The Review, was favorably reported in the House of Representatives by the commerce committee, seeks to prohibit the manufacture, sale, or transportation in interstate commerce of misbranded articles and provides a fine of not exceeding $500 for the first offense and a fine of $1,000, imprisonment for not more than one year, or both the fine and imprisonment, for the second and all succeeding offenses, for violations of the proposed law.

Indistinguishable Varieties.

Members of the florist, seed and nursery trades, realizing the impossibility of strict compliance with the provisions of this law, have petitioned Congress to act slowly in the matter and to consider the appropriateness of an amendment to the bill as it now reads so as to exempt these commodities. It was pointed out that the similar appearance of many different kinds of seeds, greenhouse and hardy herbaceous plants and seedling trees would prevent anyone from saying with absolute certainty what varieties they are. Under such circumstances, it is contended, if such merchandise be improperly labeled and so shipped in interstate commerce the violation of the law presumably would be entirely unintentional.

Unreasonable and Unfair.

As the measure now reads, florists, seedsmen and nurserymen declare, if enacted into law, it will work a great hardship upon the trade. It is perfectly satisfactory to the trade so far as its provisions apply to intentional mislabeling or the improper labeling of distinguishable articles. But when it comes to its application to seeds, plants, nursery stock of certain kinds, and other commodities of a nature which would make identification impossible until some time after sale, the law would be both unreasonable and unfair to this trade.

The Proposed Amendment.

A number of florists, seedsmen and nurserymen have conferred with Mr. Barkley, who is the author of the bill, and he has agreed to present an amendment to the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce early in January, which will read substantially as follows: "That seeds, plants, roots, bulbs or nursery stock indistinguishable by their appearance, and unintentionally mislabeled because of such indistinguishability, shall not be deemed misbranded within the meaning of this Act."

In an interview with the Washington correspondent of The Review, Mr. Barkley stated that it was not his desire to work a hardship on any interests and he had gladly assented to the desires of those interested in this particular subject, the merits of their contentions being apparent. He has sent the amendment proposed by him to the Department of Agriculture with a request for an expression of opinion from its officials. C. L. L.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

MUMS COME BLIND.

I grew about 2,000 pompons outdoors last summer and benched them about October 1, when some of the early varieties were showing buds. The plants took root nicely and progressed satisfactorily, but about three-quarters of them came blind and some had mildew. Can you give me any reason why the pompons came blind; also, why my Bonnaffon and White Bonnaffon mums developed the same condition? Would you advise me to save stock from these plants, or discard them and purchase new ones? The pompons I grow sell well in this market, but I do not know the varieties. Please give the names of six or eight double varieties, covering white, pink, yellow and bronze. The singles do not sell well. W. S. J.—N. J.

I am unable to say what caused your plants to come blind. A certain proportion of them always will fail when they are lifted as late as October, but I never before heard of so many as three-fourths of a batch coming blind. Possibly you planted them so closely that they did not get light and air enough to finish their growth properly. As to this, you are the best judge. When plants have been stung by the chinch bug late in the season they not infrequently will come blind. This may be responsible for the trouble with the pompons and the Bonnaffons.

Mildew will appear if the plants are indiscriminately aired, or watered too late in the afternoon, so that they stand wet all night. It would be well, if it is possible to do so, to weed out the plants that run blind, since it is a well known principle that "like begets like." If you continue to propagate from your blind stock of Bonnaffons every year, it is a logical assumption that the quantity of blind shoots will increase rather than decrease, though cuttings taken from plants that flower satisfactorily should prove all right.

A selection of good market varieties in the pompon section would be about as follows: White, White Doty, Queen of the Whites and Myers' Perfection; pink, Lillian Doty, Donald and Western Beauty; yellow, Golden Climax, Quinola and Zenobia; bronze, Inez.

Chas. H. Totty.

INCURVED COMMERCIAL MUMS.

Please give a list of mums that are most suitable for commercial use and not too difficult of culture. I prefer incurved varieties. Mention two or three of each of the colors, white, pink and yellow. This season I have grown Major Bonnaffon, Chieftain, Pacific Supreme, Glory of Pacific and Seidewitz. I did not like Glory of Pacific, but Bonnaffon, Chieftain and Seidewitz did well. As a rule, I want easy growers and of course I want good flowers, but I do not want fancy varieties. It is not necessary that all of them shall be incurved, but the incurved sorts seem to be the best. E. B.—Pa.

As a selection of three incurved, good commercial varieties in each of the three colors mentioned, aside from those that E. B. already is growing, I would suggest the following:

In white, Alice Day, White Chieftain and Wm. Turner are good. To these could be added with profit, perhaps, the variety Alice Salomon. Alice Day has proved itself to be one of the best second-early whites in cultivation. White Chieftain also made a name for itself this year and Wm. Turner is so well known that it would only take up time and space to discuss it further.

In pink, I would suggest Unaka, Nerissa and Patty. Unaka has merit in being the earliest good pink we have. Nerissa is an excellent, long-keeping, midseason sort and Patty is a good late one.

In yellow, my selection would be Chrysolora, Marigold and Yellow Turner. There has been some argument about Chrysolora not keeping well this fall. I think in many cases it was the grower's fault, in not soaking it well enough before shipping. Marigold is not so easy a doer as Chrysolora, but when it makes a flower such as it did with us this year, it is marvelous and a variety that must be considered. Yellow Turner is a shade pale in color, but that did not prevent its bringing a splendid price this year. Yellow Chadwick also is grown as a late commercial variety with good success, and could be recommended if E. B. has call for varieties coming later than Yellow Turner. Chas. H. Totty.

BLACK FLY ON MUMS.

This season I have been troubled a great deal with black aphis on my chrysanthemums. I used No. 40 Black Leaf and burned some of my Seidewitz plants, which seemed to be easily injured. Can they be sprayed with this preparation when in bud or flower? I am anxious to discover the best way of ridding the mums of this pest.

E. B.—Pa.

We have for years been convinced that the best means of exterminating black aphis is fumigation with tobacco dust, burned in the house. A little experimenting by E. B. will show him the right quantity to use. We are never troubled with burning of the foliage, as is so often the case when the nicotine solutions are used for spraying. It is occasionally necessary to spray with nicotine solutions when red spider is present and is injuring the flowers, but aside from that I would always suggest fumigating with tobacco dust in preference to any other method of cleaning out the black fly. Chas. H. Totty.

EVOLUTION OF FLORISTS' MUMS.

In referring to the modern development of the florists' favorite type of chrysanthemums — development from the tiny wild flowers to the big William Turners—"evolution" is a sufficiently applicable word, is it not? Of course, the hand of man has aided greatly in the development of the flowers, and the process of evolution has therefore been much swifter than in cases where Nature has been allowed to do the work without any human intervention. Nature and man together have done for the chrysanthemum in a few decades what Nature alone might not have done in centuries or ages. Nevertheless, the improvement of the flowers has been a genuine process of evolving or unfolding—unfolding the latent possibilities that resided in the wild plants. The speed of evolution, and of any other good undertaking, is always accelerated when man learns to coöperate with the forces of Nature, instead of opposing them.

In the florists' business especially, if we antagonize Nature, she will run her steam roller straight over us. If we approach her in a friendly and appreciative manner, she will invite us to climb up and ride on the roller with her.

As to that fundamental principle of evolution, the survival of the fittest, the big William Turner mums in the front part of the accompanying picture appear to be the fittest in some respects at least, for they have survived for several years, in spite of strong competition. But man's preferences are even more fickle than Nature's, and Turner may be dethroned at any time. And the little Chrysanthemum Indicum, shown in the illustration as "the original plant," evidently possesses some fitness too, since it also survives, has survived for ages and may still survive when Turner has vanished like a ghost.

Chrysanthemum Indicum and the Later Day Members of its Family.

The immense bush chrysanthemums exhibited by John Canning, of Ardsley, N. Y., at the fall show of the Horticultural Society of New York, were acknowledged to be the chief attraction. But it is reasonably certain that the group of mums which is shown in the illustration, and which also was staged by Mr. Canning, received a large share of attention, especially from the most intelligent and thoughtful of the spectators. Such an exhibit is an object lesson that can scarcely be ignored or entirely misunderstood by the passing throngs.

In labeling Chrysanthemum Indicum as "the original plant" in the evolution of the big greenhouse mums, the exhibitor probably was accurate enough for all practical purposes. Botanists assert that the florists' mums are descended from two sources, Chrysanthemum Indicum and C. morifolium, also known as C. Sinense, both of which species of plants grow wild in China and Japan. The two species, however, are much alike, and C. Indicum is sometimes supposed to include C. morifolium. The word "Indicum," by the way, seems to be a misnomer, as the plant did not come from India.

After being cultivated in their native climates for hundreds, perhaps thousands, of years, the "original plants" were introduced to England in the second half of the eighteenth century. The first seedlings were raised in France and England about 1830 and some of the plants were brought to America about the same time. Forty or fifty years later began the great work of hybridization, carried on by H. P. Walcott, Wm. K. Harris, John Thorpe and their successors. In 1863 the late Peter Henderson imported the first improved varieties brought directly from Japan.

PANSIES FOR MEMORIAL.

When should pansy seeds be sown to have plants in bloom Memorial day?

W. V. R.—Minn.

July and August would have been the best time to sow pansies for May flowering. If you sow at once, however, you can get some flowers at the time named.

C. W.

BEGONIA LEAVES BROWN.

I am enclosing some leaves of a Cincinnati begonia. Can you advise me what the trouble is? The flowers are perfect, the plants well grown, but some of the leaves are imperfect.

A. C. S.—Wis.

The brown foliage may be due either to too much water at the roots, excessive feeding or too much water on the foliage. Such plants occasionally will appear in the best growers' establishments. Give the plants an airy, sunny house and a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees at night. Do not spray the plants and discontinue feeding once the flowers start to open. C. W.

Decatur, Ill.—Henry Gerstenkorn comments on the rapid increase in the landscape business in this section, the footings in that department of his establishment showing fifty per cent gain as compared with last year.

CANNAS

TESTING CANNAS IN TENNESSEE.

[This is the third of four articles containing an account of canna tests on trial grounds near Nashville, Tenn. The first and second articles were published in The Review of November 9 and December 7. The fourth installment will appear in an early issue of the paper.]

Previous articles in this series have treated of white, variegated and pink cannas. The red varieties are here discussed.

Among the red cannas there are so many really good ones that it seems almost impossible to decide how to omit enough varieties to make this report reasonably short, and how to avoid including some that are no better than others that are not mentioned. We are getting better red cannas every year, and it is not difficult to see the progress of a decade. Even in the bronze-leaved reds some of the newer ones are easily superior to the old favorite, King Humbert, at least for the south, where a canna must produce a large number of flowers for a long season.

As a means of shortening the list and at the same time giving information that may be of value to our readers, we shall confine ourselves to those varieties that are not yet known by all.

Is This the Best Red?

Lafayette is a novelty of 1916, originated by Antoine Wintzer. We have given it a pretty thorough test, not in both our trial blocks, but only in the less favorable location, without rich soil and with a limited supply of water. Where we cannot test a variety both ways we prefer this method, since it corresponds better with the treatment that cannas commonly receive. Practically all who have seen our bed of this variety this summer—and it was located where dozens saw it every day—agree that it is the best red canna to date. The foliage is green, luxuriant and healthy. The flower is large, but not an orchid, and in color and freedom of bloom it is similar to Meteor. Under exactly the same conditions it had a more dazzling color than Meteor and produced fully a fourth more flowers. If it does as well elsewhere as it does with us, better stock up with it even if it is high.

Of Meteor, we said last season that it was much overrated and we still think so, though it has done much better this year than in the past. We think it will soon be superseded by Lafayette.

We grew enough of Wintzer's Colossal this season to be able really to take its number. We had individual blossoms that actually reached the enormous size of twelve inches in diameter. Perhaps it may not ever become generally popular, for with us the flowers are somewhat deficient in substance and the petals droop. It is healthy, however, and is a great show canna.

Firebird and Its Progeny.

Again we have been disappointed with Firebird, though it is a great canna in some respects. It does not seem to have enough vitality of leaf to sustain it through the hot season. In the cool springtime it leads us to believe it is a wonder; then it languishes all summer. In the fall it revives just enough to get us to dig it and try again. We have not decided this time whether to try again or not. But here and there is a plant that seems to be adjusting itself to its environment, and another year or two may develop an acclimated strain that will be good. If it does, there is no other canna its equal.

Even if Firebird should prove to be a failure, it will not be wholly a loss. It seeds fairly easily, and is the one foreign canna we know of that is a good breeder. Growing by my window, as I write this, are two clumps of Mr. Wintzer's Firebird Seedling No. 10. Here is something that we predict has a great future. The flower is as large as the parent, and has practically as fine a color, though not the exact shade of Firebird. These plants have withstood the terrific reflected heat of the south side of my house, with no water, and the foliage has been perfect all of the time. Only once did the flowers

GERANIUM CUTTINGS DAMPING.

Every year about the first of September I have to take large quantities of geranium cuttings. Last year quite a number of them rotted off and the same thing is beginning to happen this year. I generally prepare them, let them lie on the bench a few hours, then insert them in boxes containing about 200 cuttings each. The compost is one-third sand and two-thirds turfy loam. Of course, I am aware that cuttings should not be taken too early, as there is more danger of their rotting off, but in this latitude we sometimes have a killing frost in early September, so that if I waited I would lose the season's cuttings. Any information on this matter will be greatly appreciated.

J. M.—Can.

There always is more probability of outdoor geranium cuttings damping than those taken from under glass, as they are so much more succulent. In making cuttings take the leaves off closely and rub off all the side scales. Allow the cuttings to lie on a bench over night before inserting them. You will have much better success if, instead of using a compost of loam and sand, you use sand only, and it should be fairly coarse, so that water will pass quickly through it. Give your flats good drainage. There is nothing better than a layer of screened coal cinders for this purpose. Cover the cinders with some sphagnum moss, then pack in your sand firmly and water. A mason's trowel or any piece of sharp steel will cut out the lines for the cuttings. Give the cuttings a watering after they are in; after that run them somewhat on the dry side until they are rooted.

If you keep the flats in the open air, standing them on boards, the cuttings will root better than in a greenhouse, providing you can give them some protection from frost or heavy rains. Give the cuttings full sun at all times; they must never be shaded. When you take them indoors place them on a shelf well up to the glass. In hot weather there always is more likelihood of the cuttings damping than when it is cool. For this reason it is better to keep your cuttings in the open air as long as you can.

VIOLETS FAIL TO BLOOM.

Can you tell me what to do to make outdoor violets bloom here, in northwestern Oregon? I have had some of the plants for two years, but they have borne no flowers. I tried cutting some of them back in various ways, while I allowed others to grow naturally, but none of them would bloom.

F. W.—Ore.

Violets would not do well if put in soil that is poorly drained and deficient in fertilizer. Having been pruned and cut back without results, the plants should be discarded. If the location is much shaded, change to a sunny spot with warm, rich soil and good drainage. Use young plants and good results ought to be obtained. S. W. W.

SPOT ON VIOLETS.

Our violets are drooping and the foliage is becoming more spotted every day. They have been in the house for nearly three weeks. I cultivated them and sprinkled them a week ago. Until recently they were nice plants. Any advice will be appreciated. D. & F.—Mich.

Your foliage is badly attacked with what is commonly called violet spot. This is a serious disease, especially on double violets; on these it often ruins the entire crop. On singles, which possess greater vigor, there is less danger. I would advise that you pick off the affected foliage as far as possible and give the plants a thorough spraying with either Fungine or Bordeaux mixture. Repeat this for three weeks at intervals of a week. Keep the house well ventilated night and day. Never close it tightly until really cold weather compels you to do so. A dry, buoyant atmosphere, with a temperature on cold nights of 40 to 42 degrees and a rise of 10 to 15 degrees in the daytime, suits violets. In watering, avoid wetting the foliage any more than is necessary. Keep the floors clean, both in the aisles and below the benches, if you use benches, as dirt or decayed foliage tends to encourage fungoid diseases. C. W.

A FAST-SETTING CONCRETE.

Greenhouse owners who have trouble with concrete will be interested in trials undertaken by the United States Bureau of Standards showing that calcium chloride is a good accelerator for hardening concrete. By its use the increase in strength at forty-eight hours varies from 14 to 275 per cent for the 1-2-4 mix and from 11 to 110 per cent for the 1-1½-3 mix. In all but one case the concretes mixed with four per cent of calcium chloride show greater strength for both mixes than for plain concrete, these results being consistent for all the ages tested, up to thirty days. This acceleration in strength is believed to be due to the more complete hydration of the silicates and aluminates in the setting of the cement. The use of calcium chloride increases the cost of concrete by 50 cents to 75 cents per cubic yard. For best results it is important that the concrete be mixed to a quaking, but not fluid, consistency.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

PERLE B. FULMER.

NEW YEAR'S day Miss Fulmer will become president of the Ladies' S. A. F., so the publication of her portrait here is in the nature of a greeting to those who elected her at Houston last August, and to those who were not there. Miss Fulmer is well known as the daughter of J. D. Fulmer, city gardener at Des Moines. The family seldom miss a convention and Miss Fulmer has been an active worker in the ladies' society ever since she joined it, at Philadelphia in 1907. Music and pedagogy are her life work, but the Ladies' S. A. F. is her hobby.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

HYDRANGEAS IN THE SOUTH.

Easter is two weeks earlier this year than last, so it is none too soon to place the hydrangeas intended for blooming at that time into a little heat. First shift the plants into larger-sized pots, using a good, rich compost to which has been added a good sprinkling of bone meal. I have never found anything like bone meal for bringing out the color of the flowers. A night temperature of 56 to 60 degrees will be right for the first two weeks, after which the plants probably will need as much as 65 to 70 degrees to get them ready for Easter.

The French varieties will flower two weeks earlier than the old Otaksa, which generally needs hard pushing to have it on time. Try to have the plants well ahead of time, so that they can have the benefit of a cool temperature for two weeks before they are needed for sale. They require considerable water when growing freely, and weekly waterings with manure water should be made from the time the flowers show buds until they show color. L.

GETTING READY FOR SPRING.

In the south it is none too soon to sow seeds of all kinds of bedding plants, such as verbenas, phloxes, petunias, vincas, marigolds, etc. Sow the seeds in flats, in soil made light with leaf-mold, and give the flats a temperature of 56 to 60 degrees at night. When the growths are well up the temperature may be reduced to 50 to 52 degrees. The vincas, rosea and alba, will require a higher temperature, say 65 degrees at night, to germinate, and until spring is at hand the plants must be kept going at the same temperature, if good-sized plants are wanted at planting-out time.

Early rooted geraniums now may want a shift to 3-inch pots, and many of them probably will yield cuttings. These plants do not want over 52 degrees at night. In many sections of the south they only require a coldframe, with sash protection during extremely cool weather.

Sow quite a few seeds of Maurandia Barclaiana for vines. If these are introduced once, they will prove great sellers next season. Feverfew seeds may be sown now and produce good little plants to set out in spring. When handled this way, these plants will bloom practically all summer. They are excellent flowers for designs. Snapdragons, similarly handled, give equally good results planted out in the open. Great quantities of the plants are used for bedding in private gardens. L.

ANOTHER MERRY CHRISTMAS.

The accompanying illustration was prepared from a photograph made December 15 at the establishment of Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis. "When we came to selecting a name for this seedling," says A. F. J. Baur, "it occurred to us that any grower who possessed a house of this variety would in all probability be able to spend a right Merry Christmas and so why not name it just that? Red being the Christmas color, too, the name seems doubly appropriate." The illustration would indicate that Baur & Steinkamp probably enjoyed the holiday.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Rambler Roses.

A batch of well ripened rambler roses can be started now, preferably such as were pot-grown through the summer or were potted in early fall. It will be better to start the more recently potted ones at a later date. Cut out any dead and weak wood and bend over the long canes to make them break more evenly. Do not give the plants much heat at the start; a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees will suffice until the plants have made breaks; then advance the temperature 5 degrees. Spray the plants freely until shoots have started, then discontinue it, except to keep the plants clear of red spider. Tausendschon and Baby Tausendschon, with others of the baby rambler class, are the best for early forcing.

Bouvardias.

Except the beautiful, pure white Bouvardia Humboldtii, the bouvardias are best when propagated from root cuttings. Use the thickest roots, cut these in short pieces and place them in a warm cutting bench where they can be just covered with sand. B. Humboldtii can be propagated from either cuttings or roots. The best plan is to rest a few plants for a few weeks, then place them in heat, previously having headed them back. By this method a fine crop of succulent cuttings can be had that will root with the greatest ease.

Gloxinias.

If you want an early batch of gloxinias, start some of the tubers in flats containing a little clean sand. Damp the tubers only moderately. When growths have started nicely and before the roots become too matted, pot them, using a compost of one-half well rotted pasture loam and one-fourth each of well decayed manure and leaf-mold, with a good dash of sand added. Give the plants a temperature of 58 to 60 degrees at night and avoid all overhead syringing.

The Propagating Bench.

Now that we have steadily cold weather, we can depend on a uniform temperature in the cutting benches, and advantage should be taken of this to get in good supplies of cuttings of all kinds needed. If you have not yet put in begonias, do so at once. Leaf cuttings are by far the best for Gloire de Lorraine, Glory of Cincinnati, Florence Davenport, Melior, Mrs. J. A. Peterson and others of this class. Cut off a good piece of leaf stalk; the young plants start from the base of the stalks. They make better plants than those propagated from cuttings, which are not obtainable until much later in the season. Plants of the English winter-blooming section also propagate readily from leaves. This includes B. Mrs. Heal, optima, aureana, Winter Cheer, etc. Gloire de Chatelaine, like all of the Vernon and Erfordii section, comes most readily from cuttings, but can also be grown from seeds.

In the warm propagating bench such subjects as crotons, dracænas, pandanus, acalyphas, ficus, coleus, alternantheras, heliotropes, etc., can be rooted, while in the cooler bench, where a temperature of 60 degrees in the sand is maintained, such plants as carnations, chrysanthemums, ericas, genistas, English ivies, vincas and many others can be rooted. Be sure to use clean, sharp sand and see that there is proper drainage below, so that water will pass away quickly.

Spiræas.

Spiræas were a little later than usual in arriving this season. We always lay our plants in a coldframe and subject them to one or two freezings before potting. This makes them start more evenly and more rapidly. A batch can be placed in heat now. It is best to use such varieties as Gladstone, astilboides and the old Japonica for the earliest forcing, leaving the pink and lavender varieties until a later date. Some concerns now carry cold storage spiræas, and by using these it is easily possible to get plants in fine bloom for Christmas, or, in fact, at any time during the year.

Canterbury Bells.

Canterbury bells will not stand any hard forcing. A night temperature of 50 degrees should not be exceeded at any time. Start a batch now in a cold house. If the clumps are large, be careful not to spray them overhead, and when watering them be sure not to pour water over the crowns of the plants, or rotting will start. If you are carrying any plants in pots in either coldframes or pits, do not leave them covered too long with ice and snow, or they will become moldy. Plan to give them sun and ventilation at least once in three or four days.

Primulas.

If you want some early primulas, especially of P. obconica and Sinensis, procure and sow the seeds now. These plants will come in for Thanksgiving and Christmas and, as bright colors have first call at these seasons, it would be wise to sow a preponderance of the red and deep pink varieties. Buy the best seeds—they are cheapest in the end—cover them tightly and protect the pans with sheets of glass as well as paper until the seedlings germinate. P. Kewensis need not be sown until February, while P. malacoides should not be started until early July.

Gardenias.

We now are liable to have a good deal of dark, cold weather, when it is not possible to ventilate much, and it is under such conditions that, unless great care is taken, there will be a heavy loss of gardenia buds. Keep the temperature at 62 to 65 degrees at night, allowing it to run down to 58 to 60 degrees on severe nights. Be careful not to overwater the plants; it is best to let them dry out quite well between the waterings and to water them so that the atmosphere will be moderately dry before nightfall. It will be necessary to hose the plants to keep mealy bug in check, but care should be taken to select bright days for this work. Avoid the use of any liquid food at this season. If you want to feed them, use a light surfacing of well rotted cow manure or a dressing of pulverized sheep manure.

Schizanthus.

Keep the schizanthus cool and do not allow the plants to become potbound until they receive their final shift. If they are leggy and straggly, pinch them back into shape. Keep the plants well up to the light, so that they will be stocky, with a night temperature not in excess of 45 degrees.

TREATMENT FOR BUD-ROT.

Under separate cover we are sending you a few carnations that have some sort of disease. The buds rot in the center. This decay seems to begin about the time the buds show color. It is worse on Matchless than on any of the others. Aside from this condition of the buds, the plants are healthy and are doing well. We have watered them properly, we think, and we give them a temperature of 54 degrees at night.

F. G. W.—Ky.

Your carnations are affected by what is commonly known as bud-rot. This is supposed to be due to the work of a tiny insect which operates inside the buds, causing the petals to stick together and rot. Lady Bountiful, in its day, seemed to be the most susceptible to this disease and I have seen more of it on Matchless than on most other modern varieties. Spray regularly with tobacco extract, but reduce your syringing to a minimum. Pick off and burn every decayed bud you see, in order to destroy all the eggs. That is about all you can do until the end of the season, when you can clean out the house and fumigate heavily with sulphur.

SEVEN YEARS OF SUCCESS.

Though it is only seven years since W. R. Maxwell began his career as a florist and truck gardener at Alva, Okla., and though he began in a most unpretentious way, the business has developed until it now ranks as a notable success. Including a branch establishment at Tulsa, Okla., the Maxwell greenhouses are among the most extensive in the state. Of course the size of a florist's business in Oklahoma must not be judged or measured by the same standards as in some of the older states. The trade in Oklahoma is young and has only entered upon its real advancement, like the state itself.

A correspondent at Alva remarks that the Maxwell success is not due to luck, but to pluck, energy and good management. That statement is so evidently true that scarcely anyone would venture to contradict it. In these times of intense competition and general strenuosity, luck is even less of a factor than formerly in the attainment of one's object in life.

When W. R. Maxwell founded his business at Alva seven years ago, "the wise ones predicted failure," says the local correspondent again, for Alva was a small town, with no great, conspicuous opportunities — only such opportunities as a keen observer could detect. But subsequent events proved the "wise ones" to be false prophets. The Maxwell greenhouse operations are now regarded as constituting one of the principal industries of the town.

Still, Mr. Maxwell was not fully satisfied with what could be accomplished at Alva. A few years ago, therefore, he started the branch business at Tulsa, placing it under the management of his sons, Floyd and John. This undertaking also has prospered, and a new addition to the Tulsa range has just been completed. That the range is a compact and attractive one is proved by a photograph which is here reproduced. Another illustration shows the Alva place.

The Maxwells carry on a considerable shipping trade, supplying a large part of northwest Oklahoma and southwest Kansas with stock. All three proprietors are expert growers and shrewd business men. The Alva business is conducted in the name of W. R. Maxwell. The Tulsa firm name is Maxwell & Co.

Sweet Peas

DISEASES OF SWEET PEAS.

Root Rot and Other Troubles.

"Ninety per cent of the failures with greenhouse sweet peas are due to sick soils; that is, to parasitic fungi present there which make plant growth impossible." Such, in substance, is one of the introductory statements in an article by J. J. Taubenhaus, of College Station, Tex., in a bulletin recently issued by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. After thus emphasizing the importance of his subject, the writer proceeds to describe the principal sweet pea diseases, especially those of a fungoid nature, and to give suggestions for their control. The part of the article which has reference to indoor culture may be summarized as follows:

Root rot, or Corticum vagum, is a source of considerable trouble to greenhousemen. The disease may destroy the entire stand, or cause it to be uneven, thus necessitating several resowings. Severely infected plants have practically no root system. In less infected plants only one or two rootlets may be destroyed. The fungus produces a browning effect in the root before total destruction sets in. In early stages of infection the seedlings are seen to have a wilted appearance; as the disease progresses the infected seedlings fall over and collapse. The fungus is not confined to the roots. It is frequently seen to work its way up the stem and produce a constricted area, marking it off from the healthy part. The fungus, being a soil organism, is usually introduced with manure, infection taking place at any part of the roots or stems. In the latter case reddish sunken spots are observed at the base. Root rot is primarily a seedling disease, although older plants, too, may be affected. Such plants linger for some time, but are valueless. Overwatering and a sour condition of the soil favors the disease.

Fusarium Wilt.

The ravages of fusarium wilt, or Fusarium lathyri, are of much more serious consequence to greenhousemen than are those of root rot. The writer has known of instances where the disease has ruined the entire crop of indoor sweet peas. After several resowings, the owners gave up in despair. Florists should do everything to prevent its introduction into the house. In places where this disease has made its appearance the growing of greenhouse sweet peas had to be abandoned within less than two years. The disease produces a sudden flagging of the leaves, which is accompanied by a wilting and collapse of the seedlings. Usually, upon sowing the seed, a fair percentage germinate and reach the height of eight to ten inches, when they are attacked by the fungus. If the collapsed seedlings are allowed to remain on the ground, the dead stems will soon be covered with the sickle-shaped spores of the fusarium fungus. Eventually the dead tissue rots, attracting small fruit flies, which now begin to distribute the spores to different places in the same house. The trouble usually manifests itself in widely separated spots on the bench. These spots, however, quickly spread, involving the entire bed, which may suddenly assume a wilted appearance. Here and there, however, and in the same bench, a few plants remain alive and keep on growing in spite of the disease.

Stem or Collar Rot.

Stem or collar rot is usually a seedling disease, although it may attack plants of all ages. Like the rhizoctonia rot, it attacks many different kinds of seedlings. The trouble is most severe in houses poorly ventilated and in beds overwatered or lacking proper drainage, and in damp places outdoors. The disease spreads quickly and is soon fatal. Affected plants first show a wilting of the tip and flagging of the leaves, and then the seedlings fall over and collapse. The cause of this disease is a fungus, Sclerotinia libertiana, which also causes a drop disease of lettuce and of other plants. The fungus does not seem to attack the roots, but penetrates the collar of the stem and completely invades the vessels, thus clogging the upward flow of the water from the roots to the stem. Freshly collapsed plants usually have a water-soaked appearance, and are later overrun by a white weft, which is merely the mycelium of the fungus; this is followed by sclerotia (resting bodies), which are found scattered here and there on or within the affected stems. The fungus is a soil organism which occasionally causes trouble in clover fields. It is introduced with animal manure.

Thielavia Root Rot.

Plants severely infected with thielavia have practically little or no root system, since the latter is destroyed by the fungus as rapidly as the roots appear. Whatever root system is present is of a stubby nature, charred in appearance. The fungus sometimes works up on the stem to a distance of two to three inches above ground, but never to the extent of invading the entire stem. It is probably due to this black-

Houston, Tex.—At the December meeting of the Houston Florists' Club, which was held at the Washington avenue greenhouse, with Park Superintendent C. L. Brock as host, the following were elected officers for 1917: President, Henry Kuhlmann, Jr.; vice-president, Paul M. Carroll; secretary, Clarence L. Brock; treasurer, W. W. Westgate. The club adopted a resolution recommending that an arboretum be established on the new permanent exposition grounds. The Texas florists believe that this arboretum should contain specimens of every plant that is and can be grown in the southland. Another contest will be held in 1917 for the prettiest yards in Houston by the club.

Roseland, Fla.—W. Huger Turner states that the company of which he is president has, during December, begun the establishment of a floral garden, growing not only fruit and vegetable plants, but palms, decoratives, etc. Preparations are being made to grow large contract orders of various plants that are particularly adaptable to Florida culture. The establishment, to be known as Ercildoune Gardens, is located at the confluence of the Sebastian and Indian rivers, having a frontage of one-and one-quarter miles. The Dixie highway traverses it for over half a mile. It is particularly notable as having the highest coastal elevation in all Florida and on it is located the world-famous frost-proof grove, the oldest citrus grove in the state, furnishing millions of buds for budding, being, therefore, largely the parent, directly and indirectly, of the major part of Florida groves. "We have three flowing wells," says Mr. Turner, "irrigating system, variety of soils, barns, outbuildings, cottages, packing house, etc.; in fact, ideally situated and arranged for plant growing. At present we have thousands of palms and various plants and bulbs in a state of growth and will soon be ready for the market."

OBITUARY

James S. Chase.

James S. Chase, for many years a gardener in the Bliss road district at Newport, R. I., died at his home December 15, after an illness of two weeks' duration. He had not been in the best of health during the last two years, but only recently did his illness, heart trouble, develop seriously. He was in his sixty-seventh year. He leaves, besides his wife, one daughter and two sons. The deceased was a member of the I. O. O. F. and the Aquidneck Encampment. W. H. M.

A. C. L. Brown.

A. C. L. Brown, of Kearney, N. J., died December 19, of heart failure. He was 68 years old and leaves a wife and son, who will carry on the business. Mr. Brown was an expert plant grower and had been in the business over thirty-five years, largely disposing of his stock in the Canal street market in New York. He was highly respected. J. A. S.

Samuel Snyder.

Samuel Snyder, of Second avenue and Fifty-eighth street, New York, died suddenly at the Flower hospital December 17, of erysipelas, following an operation. He was 40 years old and leaves a widow, who will continue the business. Mr. Snyder was highly esteemed in the trade. J. A. S.

Charles Bleeckert.

Charles J. Bleeckert, of St. Louis, once among the better known of florists there, has succumbed to heart disease. He was 72 years of age and had been in the business almost from the time he came from Sweden, in 1851. He did retailing from his greenhouses, the business recently having been in charge of his son, C. B. Bleeckert, who will continue it.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

Christmas is over again, thank goodness, for it proved a most exacting and exasperating period this year, with more orders than ever and less labor to handle the stock. Fortunately, however, the quality of everything was good and the prices occasioned no disagreeable comment, retailers everywhere being favored with the best trade they have ever experienced. Valley at $5, orchids at $60 and Beauties at $75 per hundred were eagerly sought after, but there was not enough stock in any of the grades to supply the demand. W. G. P.

SEEDS OF SPRING STOCK.

When do you advise me to sow pansy, verbena, petunia and salvia seeds to have good stock for the spring trade?
W. D. T.—O.

August-sown pansies are the best for the spring trade, but seeds sown early in January will give nice plants for successional blooms. They are not equal in pulling power, however, to the early fall-sown stock. Petunia and verbena seeds can be sown from February 1 to 15 and will be in ample time. Salvias can be sown as late as March 1, as they are rapid growers, but if they are wanted in flower, sow them in February. C. W.

FINAL NOTICE!

Sunday is the Last Day

EVERY florist knows through his own purchases what has happened in the paper market the last few months—prices have doubled all along the line.

And it takes more than four tons of paper each week to print The Review!

Many readers have been so kind as to write that The Review is worth considerably more to them than its subscription price. Well, the tremendous rise in the price of paper makes it no longer expedient to sell The Review at $1.00 a year.

The subscription price, therefore, will be advanced January 1, 1917, to $1.50 a year.

Until December 31, 1916, any member of the Trade may subscribe for one or more years at the old rate of $1.00 a year.

Readers whose present subscriptions do not expire until after January 1, 1917, may renew for as many years as they like at $1.00 per year, providing that such renewals are sent during 1916.

Send $1.00 and your subscription will be extended one year from the present date of expiration, whenever that may be.

Send $2.00 and the subscription will be extended two years from the present date of expiration.

Send $3.00 for three years, $5.00 for five years.

No renewals for a full year will be accepted at less than $1.50 unless they are mailed by December 31, 1916.

The Canadian subscription price will be $2.50 a year beginning January 1, 1917. Canadian renewals mailed on or before December 31, 1916, will be accepted at $2.00 a year.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Charles A. Moss, of Spartanburg, S. C., inaugurated the season with a steady advance in prices—carnations at $1.25 to $1.50 per dozen, other stock in proportion. Chrysanthemums sold freely. Roses were in excellent crop for Christmas. We were discussing the wisdom, or otherwise, of selling to the 5 and 10-cent stores, and Mr. Moss mentioned the fact that a grower who sold 1,000 scrub mums in paper pots, for $80, has a contract to grow 100,000 bulbs for a chain of stores in the south, which has guaranteed to take the blooms, in every case a cash transaction.

The Scholtz Floral Co., of Charlotte, N. C., took advantage of the spaciousness of its new store to make the finest chrysanthemum display ever seen here. In mantel and table decorations, Samuel R. Aiken, recently engaged from Philadelphia, spread himself. Secretary McCullum says the show certainly boosted business. Robert Lockerbie, in charge of the greenhouses, is sending in fine cuts of red and pink bouvardias, calendulas, myosotis and snapdragons. He probably will grow bouvardias in pots, believing that the taste can be cultivated; he recalls the time when bouvardias sold freely as pot plants. "It is agreeably surprising to us how our business has broadened in these few years. Really nothing goes to waste," commented W. W. Scholtz.

Adolphus Gude, of the Gude Bros Co., at Anacostia, D. C., is justly proud of the stock being gotten into shape for the Washington store. New houses, built by their own men during a shortage of help, caused some anxiety. The season has been ideal for carnations and roses, which looked tip-top and were well timed for holiday cropping. Chrysanthemums have been good, some grand blooms of William Turner being cut November 22. As space is made, single violets are planted. One of the new houses planted to sweet peas has violets between the rows. Azaleas have come through in fair shape, a lot of Mme. Petrick having been ready for Christmas. Poinsettias, cyclamens and begonias were right in line, with a batch of pelargoniums prepared as an emergency crop. "We are late in getting at our lilies for Easter," observed Mr. Gude, "but feel sure that they will come in on time. The bulbs are plump, potted into 4-inch pots and then placed on the bench where they will remain, covered with cheesecloth or similar covering. We seldom have failed to hit the mark and look for another strike."

The Ghent Floral Co. is located in the residence section of Norfolk and is able to make a more elaborate display, with the returns in proportion. W. M.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THERE are reports that Ophelia rose in many places has been making enormous plants but that the growths came blind, thereby disappointing the growers who counted on it for Christmas.

OUR good friend, A. Jablonsky, of Olivette, Mo., conducts a page of interesting chat on all manner of subjects in the St. Louis County Herald. The Christmas issue was decorated with Mr. Jablonsky's portrait.

THIS trade is like a rubber water bottle, with an elastic body capable of great expansion on special occasions, but with a narrow neck through which the contents can be discharged in only a limited amount within a given time.

THERE is absolutely no reason for similar prices for articles of dissimilar value. Everybody knows some carnations would be dear at 3 cents where certain others might be moderately priced at 4 cents; why, then, not insist on getting each grade at what it is worth? The reasoning might well be applied to the purchase of everything florists use in the business.

SOME persons consider that it is a joke to report, year after year, the "best Christmas ever"; that such reports are a strain on credulity. Not at all! The production of flowers in this country increases every year; the new glass to be erected this spring will necessitate a still wider distribution of flowers at Christmas, 1917. Only the cash returns to the individual can decrease; on the whole the business done must increase.

THE ULTIMATE NOTICE.

Otherwise, the Last Chance.

Because of the tremendous rise in the cost of paper The Review was forced to announce that after December 31, 1916, the subscription price will be $1.50 per year, instead of $1, as in the past:

Enclosed is my renewal; The Review is worth double the price.—W. F. Richter, Cullman, Ala., December 15, 1916.

But it was announced, also, that any member of the trade could extend his subscription at the old rate for as many years as he pleased by acting before January 1:

Enclosed is a check for $7 for extension of subscription seven years from date of expiration (June 7, 1917), as we find The Review indispensable.—Lyle E. Severance, Lansing, Mich., December 7, 1916.

So this is the last chance; no subscription post-marked later than December 31, 1916, will be accepted for a full year unless accompanied by a remittance of $1.50:

I am sending $3 for three years, to get in ahead of the rise.—E. B. Washburn, Pasadena, Cal., December 16, 1916.

The assurance of even larger circulation than ever, thus given for 1917, insures the continuation of prompt returns to advertisers:

For $2.25 The Review sold for me 32,000 bulbs and I received many inquiries for other stock and for special prices on larger quantities than I could supply. I have received orders from almost all parts of the United States. This is the first time I have advertised in The Review, but you can see for yourself that you will be sure to hear from me whenever I have stock to offer.—Earl Edgerton, Lansing, Mich., December 16, 1916.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

"WATCH YOUR WORDS."

There is something particularly irritating in the guard's admonition to "Watch your step," but it is a wise thing to heed. Also, if everyone who writes a little could have printed on his blotter, "Watch your words," it might do a lot of good. For he is a rare man who can put his thoughts on paper as he would have them understood by the person to whom they are addressed.

There are, of course, the men who do not care—their case is hopeless. Of the man who does not care how he sounds, any more than how he looks or acts, nothing further need be said. This is of and for the man who cares but has not thought.

Among florists, probably as among others, the most common fault of correspondents is ambiguity or incompleteness, the lack of definiteness which leaves the recipient to guess at what the writer meant. It is the cause of many misunderstandings.

But the most aggravating correspondent is the one who, particularly in making a complaint, employs unwarranted language. In a recent instance which came to the attention of The Review a buyer wrote a first-class wholesale grower, upon the arrival of a first shipment, that he evidently had "fallen among thieves and robbers"; that he demanded his money back, although he had no reason to expect he could get it out of "a bunch of crooks."

Does any reader marvel that the man who got that letter was too angry for several days to trust himself to answer? It was an extreme case, but there are many complaints put in such intemperate language that they bar adjustment and make further business relations impossible.

But it is not all one-sided. In another instance an inquiry, as to why goods had not arrived or letters been answered, brought a buyer a reply to this effect: "The goods have gone forward or would return your money; don't annoy yourself by sending us any more orders." And that same letter contained the good, practical information that "You can catch more flies with molasses than with vinegar!"

Still another case, but of a different nature: A retailer of the highest standing sent a telegraph order for a funeral spray to cost $6. In the course of time came a letter, "I hope you did not rob that order, because these were millionaires and the spray was quite insignificant beside others there." Did he "rob" it? What a way of calling attention to a possible error! Do you wonder the first retailer could see nothing in it but an insult?

A business house boasting a careful, concise, considerate correspondent should treasure him as one of its priceless possessions.

STANDARDIZING TRADE TERMS.

A committee of the Ornamental Growers' Association is preparing a report in the endeavor to standardize trade terms and trade practice in the nursery business. This report would apply also to all horticultural trades and professions, covering particularly florists', seeds men's and fruit growers' activities. In compiling a list of trade terms both as to description of plants in catalogues, grading of plants in the field, and for sale, shipping tags and marks, foreign trade terms, import and export custom and usage, the committee desires to make a report as comprehensive as possible.

Harlan P. Kelsey, chairman committee on standardization, whose address is Salem, Mass., says that so far he has "failed to locate any published list of such trade terms other than those given in the current catalogues of the day. If anyone knows of any such lists and will kindly give me the references it will aid the committee in its work. A list of trade terms in any line of business would help us out considerably."

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The Christmas business was the largest and, on the whole, the most satisfactory the Chicago wholesale cut flower market has ever seen. Everything seemed to combine to foster a good business. The weather for the greater part of the week was bright and not too cold, helping the growers to get their crops in on time and making for a good local demand. The marked shortage of azaleas and other blooming plants made buyers look to cut flowers to fill their needs. Orders booked in advance were unusually numerous, and from out-of-town they kept coming steadily, so that it was midnight December 23 before the shipping came to an end. December 22 was the big day.

There is some trouble now on hand, however, because of the unprecedented express congestion, which caused delay on nearly all shipments. It brought some stock in too late to be sold, and many shipments to customers were so delayed that refusals were numerous. Just how large a factor this will be, and to what extent the express companies can be held responsible, is not yet known.

The market was well cleaned up December 23, but after the shipping orders were out stock began to accumulate. City trade was a little disappointing, for there was little buying done December 24 and 25, on which days a brisk local demand had been looked for. It appears that retailers had estimated the amount of stock which they would require with unusual accuracy, and therefore found it unnecessary to do last minute buying.

Contrary to general expectations, there was plenty of stock in the market, with the possible exception of American Beauty, Russell and red roses, red carnations and violets. This stock was short, as usual, but had there been more red it simply would have meant that greater quantities of light colored flowers would have been left. Except for special colors, orders were filled in full. Stock as a rule was of good quality, and this was well, as at no time of the year are the buyers so critical as at Christmas; they are willing to pay the price, but they must have the right quality. Most wholesalers estimate an increase in their business over last year of at least twenty per cent. This was largely due to the fact that they had enough stock to fill all orders and still, in practically every case, stock sold right up to quotations. No slump took place December 24 or 25, for the reason it was clear cutting prices would not clear the market, as buyers were not inquiring. The accumulations of Sunday and Monday therefore were carried to December 26.

American Beauties were decidedly short up to December 24 and cleared out quickly at quotation prices. Russell was hit a hard blow by the zero weather and was far short of the demand. Red roses also cleared easily and there were hardly any left on the market December 25. White roses were not in large supply.

Red carnations sold quickly at good prices. Enchantress moved a little slow, while there was practically no demand for the white varieties.

Valley sold easily and was completely cleaned out at the quoted price. Easter lilies also sold well. Violets were in short supply, many shipments being frozen. What stock there was cleared well, however, at quoted prices. Sweet peas were in short supply and sold easily. Mignonette moved fairly well. Quantities of Paper Whites were on hand at closing time December 25. Poinsettias sold well at good prices. There was something of a shortage of the longer lengths.

There was enough holly, such as it was, but good stock was scarce and many complaints came from out-of-town buyers who did not understand. Bouquet green was scarcer than ever known before. Red berries were unobtainable in quantity. Boxwood also was scarce, some large shipments arriving too late to be used on orders taken in advance.

The retailers as a rule say it was their largest Christmas, but a good many of them had enough stock left so that they did not appear in the market December

December 26 J. E. Pollworth joined the Kennicott Bros. Co., becoming secretary and general manager. Mr. Pollworth is well known among the retail florists of the north and southwest, as well as among the growers in the vicinity of Chicago. His new connection gives him the opportunity he has long desired, of establishing himself in the wholesale cut flower business. As Kennicott Bros. Saturday afternoon, December 23. He said that what impressed him most was the jaded appearance of nearly everyone he saw; business going on almost silently, workers too tired for unnecessary speech. Inflamed noses and cold-sore lips indicated an epidemic of uncared for colds and even the growers, in to see how things were going, showed the marks of unusual hours of labor. It spoke of big business, all right, but to this observer it seemed to indicate that, aside from satisfaction in a task well done, the principal joy of Christmas would lie in the fact that it was over.

In recognition of faithful service and the unusual character of the times, the Lord & Burnham Co. made each of its employees a Christmas present of one week's pay.

Edward H. Goldenstein, who last week severed his connection with Vaughan's Seed Store to become a partner in the Holland firm of Langhout & Co., is preparing to go on the road early in the new year. He will have charge of the permanent American headquarters the firm is establishing and considers that being an American member of a Holland firm will put him in a peculiarly advantageous position to meet competition.

In view of the large number of Ophelia benched last spring, the Christmas supply of that popular rose was surprisingly small. Wietor Bros. probably are entitled to the blue ribbon, having cut nearly 30,000 flowers from 10,000 plants. N. J. Wietor says he never before sold so many roses at 18 cents each as he did of this cut of Ophelia.

The notable retail advertisement of the Christmas season was the full page of the Fleischman Floral Co. in the Tribune of December 22. A Tribune page is 2,400 agate lines and the cost, varying somewhat with the nature of the contract, is about $800.

In spite of the Christmas rush last week, many members of the trade stopped in front of the window of the American Bulb Co., attracted by a vase of a new pink rose of striking size and color. A. Miller brought the flowers from Mt. Clemens, Mich., where Fred Breitmeyer has 3,000 plants of it. It is a sport of Ophelia and is said to have the easy-to-do qualities of the original, combined with the clear rose-pink color. The variety is to be disseminated in 1918 and the American Bulb Co. will have a hand in the proceedings, although it is said several eastern novelty distributors have made good offers for exclusive rights.

Three nights last week, Thursday to Saturday inclusive, John Michelsen and five of his assistants obtained a couple of extra hours of sleep by bunking at the Sherman House instead of going home. It is stated December 22 was the biggest day in the history of the E. C. Amling Co., tickets written between 7 a. m. and midnight footing over $11,000.

A steady success has come to R. Scheffler, who some years ago bought out his employer, E. T. Wanzer, at Wheaton. Mr. Scheffler's specialty is carnations, but he keeps every foot of space continuously busy and considers it the principal cause of profit. He considers this an excellent season, although the mid-season mums did not do so well as usual.

Several interesting facts may be deduced from the statement of W. J. Keimel that the cut of Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, from December 16 to 23, both inclusive, turned out to be 90,000 roses, where 60,000 had been the estimate. It shows how the general supply must have exceeded expectations, since other growers also were able to cut more than they predicted, but most of all it shows how strong the demand must have been to absorb the greater quantity without breaking the market.

Considerable quantities of California asparagus have been coming to this market for some little time, but it does not give as good satisfaction as does the Florida stock. The California asparagus seems to dry out and scatter quicker.

There were unusually small quantities of white roses on the market this Christmas, the attitude of the growers being indicated by Weiss & Meyer Co., Elmhurst; the company cut down the number benched this year, planned that they shall be in crop later rather than at Christmas and is thinking of dropping them altogether at next replanting of the houses.

C. Pfund Co., in Oak Park, is planning to bench some lily bulbs for cut flowers for its retail trade.

The eastern Beauties cut less figure this Christmas than usual. The receipts were not especially heavy, as eastern markets were stronger than last year, but there were enough of them in the market to hold down the price of the locally-grown stock; the buyers would go only so far before turning to the eastern Beauties.

G. M. Reburn came home for the holidays. He reports the trade as more ready than ever before to place orders for 1917 importations.

The A. L. Randall Co. recently has produced a new rainbow aquarium. An electric lighting device beneath the tank is so constructed as to throw changing colored lights up through the aquarium, producing a beautiful blend of colors. The glass tank is suitably decorated. The best effect is obtained in a dark or semi-dark room. The aquarium is covered by patents.

vestment is turning out a good one. In addition to the apartment building erected by the two brothers as a personal investment, the Geo. It is the Michigan, at the corner of Michigan avenue and Garfield boulevard, not only the newest but one of the finest in the city. With eight big houses, Lubliner & Trinz will rest content for a while and busy themselves counting the dimes.

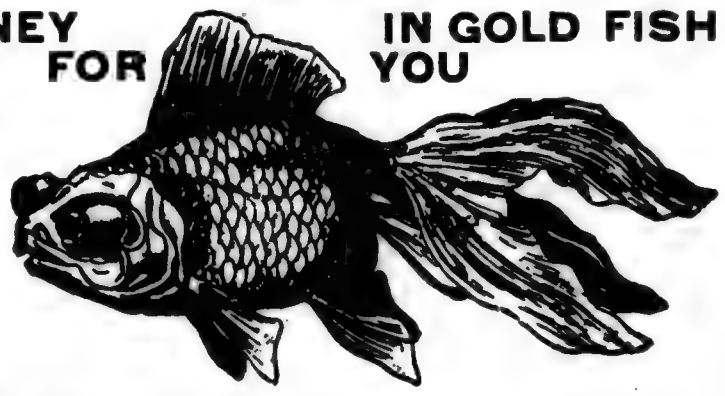
ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

From what I could learn, St. Louis florists were satisfied with the volume of business done for Christmas. While many as yet have not their figures handy, they say that this Christmas will equal any previous one and, in many cases, will be better than any previous one. Christmas day on a Monday made it easy for the trade, giving them Sunday to get things in shape for early Monday delivery. This condition helped the wholesaler also. The weather was favorable, as it was not cold enough to require much wrapping of plants and cut flowers.

After talking with some of the leading west end retailers, we learn that the best selling flowering plants were azaleas; but these were scarce this year, and poinsettias sold better than ever and seemed as popular as ever. Cincinnati begonias and cyclamens had a great call. Oranges with well colored fruit had a heavy demand. All kinds of ferns sold well this year. It seems that the plant trade was as large as usual this Christmas.

Cut flowers sold better this Christmas than at that of many previous years. Roses were among the leaders. Select Beauties sold as high as $12 per dozen and from that down to $3 per dozen. More Beauties could have been disposed of, but shipments from out-of-town went astray. The same may be said of orchids. Fancy cattleyas were up to $1 each. Many expected shipments as yet have not arrived. Extra select Russells were in heavy demand, going as high as $50 per hundred. Milady and Ophelia went strongly, but other stock, Killarney, Ward and Killarney Brilliant, had but little call.



Carnations fell far below those of other years in price and popularity.

Only small numbers made $8 per hundred; $6 was the average price. December 23 and 24 the market went wrong and prices fell as low as $4 for selects; even good reds sold at that price. Christmas day many whites and Enchantress sold as low as $1 per hundred, as the market was crowded with good stock.

Violets sold well during the week. During the first part of the week prices ranged from $1 to $1.50 per hundred and later in the week extra selects went to $2 per hundred. Valley did not seem to sell so well this year; the price was up to $6 per hundred and the trade bought sparingly. Extra select cut poinsettias sold better this year. The demand was large and the flowers brought $5 per dozen. Sweet peas were limited in supply. For select butterflies the top price was $1.50 per hundred. The best Paper Whites made $4 per hundred this year and sold well. No freesias or Romans were seen. There were a few chrysanthemums, but there was not much demand for these. Stevias sold well this year and all greens had a big demand.

It is hard to tell what the New Year's trade will be this year. Usually it is not heavy locally, but many of our retailers report a number of advance orders placed for watch parties, etc., and should the fine weather keep up the local trade may experience a heavy demand, for which preparations now are being made.

Various Notes.

The downtown florists who say Christmas business was never better include Grimm & Gorly, the Mullanphy Florists, Fred Foster, the Riessen Floral Co. and John Berner. They surely had their hands full, even with plenty of extra help. Plants and cut flowers sold equally well. Some of them fared badly on shipping trade, as the express company would accept the shipments only subject to delay. This was their only complaint this Christmas.

The Sanders Nursery Co., the Young Bros. Floral Co., John Borne, the Kalisch Bros. Floral Co., F. C. Weber, the Young & Sons Co., Fred H. Weber, Joseph Witek and Miss M. S. Newman had about all they could handle the last three days of the week.

Telegraph orders again featured this Christmas. The Review advertisers report large orders coming in from all parts for both plant and cut flower deliveries.

Therefore, in justice to yourself, you should recognize the values offered in our advertisements and follow them up closely and constantly.

Lilac

Our grower makes daily shipments, and on short notice we can furnish you almost any quantity. It should be worth something for you to know that we can always supply you with Lilac.

BEAUTIES

There is no better supply in this market than you will find here, and where the supply is the largest and the quality the best, should be the place for you to order from.

ROSES

The better grades of roses will be plentiful with us for some time. This stock shows unusual quality. Russell, Prima Donna, Hadley, Ophelia you will find better than the average stock. In Brilliant we offer you splendid flowers, also plenty of good White and Pink Killarney. Prices are moderate, and you will find the best value in the best and medium grades.

Henry Ostertag, head of Ostertag Bros., reports that his firm will furnish the decorations incidental to the inauguration of Governor-elect Gardner, at Jefferson City, Mo. A carload of plants and cut stock will be used for this occasion.

The Robinson Floral Co., of North Taylor avenue, opened a branch store at the corner of Vandeventer avenue and Olive street, just in time to receive a good share of Christmas business.

The wholesalers experienced much trouble this Christmas on account of retarded shipments. Many shipments had not yet arrived at noon Christmas day. The shipping orders, too, were taken only subject to delay. Many retailers who had shipments coming in and going out also have complaints. Never before were the express companies' houses so badly congested, with no cars to handle the packages. J. J. B.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Christmas Market.

No soldier ever sees a battle. It is well-nigh equally difficult to describe the Christmas market immediately after its close, before all the reports are recorded. The effort recalls the announcements made of the election on the eighth day of last month.

The conditions surrounding the opening of the Christmas cut flower market December 20 were unusual. The weather was extremely unfavorable, dark, cold, and a forecast of storm indicated a reduced supply and shipping difficulties to overcome. The unusually early date at which good blooming plants had been cleared up gave promise of a heavy demand for all cut flowers. The weather moderated with the approach of the holiday, so that the plantsmen were obliged to contend with its greatest severity on their heaviest shipping days.

December 21, the heaviest cut flower shipping day, cleared so much good stock that the commencement of local buying December 22 found no surplus of good flowers on hand. December 22 also was a good shipping day to near-by parts. Locally December 23 was the big day. The buying was heavy throughout the day and the night that followed. The effect of December 24 coming on Sunday seemed to rather prolong matters, enabling the stores to catch up with their orders and secure what stock they needed to complete their purchases. Christmas day, December 25, was the quietest of the six days in the wholesale market. The retailers devoted all their tired energies to getting the last of their orders delivered and then went to bed.

It is probable that the volume of business in plants and flowers was the largest ever known in this market. Cyclamens were the most popular blooming plants, then poinsettias. Begonias hardly held their own. Azaleas were prominent by reason of their scarcity. Ferns held the lead among plants without blooms.

As was anticipated, roses were the popular cut flowers. Their popularity exceeded anything known here in the past. This was due to the fact that roses were plentiful and fine. The feature of the rose market was the surprisingly fine showing made by Hadley, in competition with a heavy crop of fine Beauties. The best Hadley roses sold at $1 each. This was the more remarkable because some Beauties sold at $9 per dozen. Under improving weather conditions Beauties advanced to $12 per dozen. Of course there were far more Beauties than Hadleys, and ever so many more of the dollar grade, but the fact that some Hadleys were worth so much is strong proof of the merit of the variety. So many red roses were cropped for Christmas that there was an oversupply despite the heavy demand. Pink roses, on the other hand, were short of the demand. They did not bring the fancy prices of red roses, but sold quickly at good prices. The finer grades were quite scarce at times. Yellow roses were active in a more limited way, at good prices. There was no great quantity of white roses offered. The demand was best for the cheaper grades.

Carnations suffered terribly from the absence of sunshine. Every grower had buds; few had flowers. Red and bright pink were most wanted, but anything fresh and nice was taken.

Disappointment was linked with many of the other flowers. The weather reduced the supply and the market was too critical to take stock that would once have been good enough.

Beauties were undoubtedly the leading roses. They were in heavy crop, with a better supply of medium and short stems at the last moment than was anticipated. The bulk of the long Beauties were sold at $75 per hundred; just a few brought $1 each. The medium and short grades brought from $50 to $20 per hundred, according to quality. A good many Beauties were used by the fashionable shops; the plain, every-day florist took few or none.

Hadley, apart from the memorable instance of blue-ribboners at $1 given above, brought from 50 cents down. The supply was fair. Richmond was in crop with several growers and brought 8 to 25 cents; those held higher did not sell. Ophelia was in great demand at about the same figures as Richmond; there were not nearly enough Ophelia. Mrs. Russell brought from 50 cents down; the supply was only moderate. There were a good many Prima Donna; a few of the best brought 35 cents. September Morn brought from 40 cents down, with offerings limited. The most surprisingly high prices were really found in the short roses; 6 cents, 8 cents and 10 cents were realized for extremely short-stemmed and medium-sized Killarney, White Killarney and Maryland, while little Mrs. Ward was worst of all in this respect; people love the color of this little orange-tinted bud, and from 6 cents for short stems to 20 cents for long stems was the price.

It seemed as though Killarney was losing in popularity. While the best brought 20 cents and 25 cents, 6 cents to 15 cents was the common price, with the buyers looking for Maryland and Shawyer and merely taking Killarney to get a pink rose. Of course there still are many loyal friends of Killarney, but it looks as though their number is decreasing.

Carnations were good, plentiful with some growers and shy with others. The general feeling in the stores is that carnations are not thoroughly satisfactory at the holidays. The best red brought 10 cents, 12 cents and occasionally 15 cents.

The price for other colors was 6 cents to 8 cents, now and then 10 cents. Mrs. C. W. Ward continued a prime favorite when well grown. Stores that wish to avoid trouble do not accept orders for red carnations at Christmas. There was an oversupply of white carnations, an almost invariable rule at this season.

Sweet peas were in heavier supply than usual at Christmas. They came in pink, white, a few lavender and some other colors. The orchid-flowered peas were so fine that they brought $2.50, $3 and even $4 per hundred. The grandiflora peas brought $1 to $2; these were mostly Christmas Pink.

Violets brought from $1 to $1.50 per hundred, the fancy singles bringing as much as the New York doubles. There was trouble with delayed shipments from the Hudson river; some of these did not arrive in time to go out on orders. Valley was in fairly good supply at from $4, $6 to $8 per hundred. There was not enough of the best, but rather too much of the lower grade.

Poinsettias were in brisk demand at from $2 to $4 per dozen bracts. Easter lilies sold well at 15 cents. Cattleya Trianæ brought $9, $10 and $12 per dozen. Cattleya Percivaliana was $6 per dozen, cypripediums $15 per hundred. Gardenias brought $2 to $4 per dozen; the best sold well. Snapdragons were in fair supply at $1.50 to $2 per dozen, with good support for anything nice. Mignonette brought $4 per hundred, with more for fancy stock. Yellow daisies made $2 per hundred. Paper Whites brought $3 and $4, but were in oversupply. Stevia brought $1 per hundred. There were few chrysanthemums.

Unfortunately, there were a lot of Asparagus plumosus sprays and strings of smilax unloaded on the market at Christmas. Nobody wanted them; nobody ever wants these greens at the holidays. Why throw them away? The holly, lycopodium, boxwood, mistletoe and goodness knows what else are quite enough without them. Greenhouse greens are badly needed later.

It will be a couple of weeks before the plants left after Christmas will be in bloom and ready to appear, so close was the cleanup. The fact that begonias held their own this year is due to the first appearance of Mrs. Peterson. All the plants offered of this variety were quickly taken. Araucarias were just as popular as ever; nice plants were quickly sold. Anything like an Otaheite orange was wanted for combination baskets and boxes. Small crotons and Adiantum Glory of Mordrecht were freely used for this purpose.

To sum up, while nobody has figures ready yet, the general impression is that Christmas has been satisfactory, both in plants and in cut flowers. The general feeling is that the volume of business was equal to or slightly exceeded that of any previous week at the festive season. There have been differences with the express companies because of delay and loss, but these are only clouds in the bright sky.

December 26 found the cut flower market bare of everything except leftover white flowers, Paper Whites, white carnations, white roses, stevia, etc. Fresh roses soon came in; other flowers followed slowly. Business was light, at prices about twenty-five per cent below those of December 23. Poor flowers, always an incident to a holiday, were unloaded for what they were worth just before Christmas, this leaving the market in fairly good shape for the closing of the year. It is a wise policy, for what is the use of shipping poor flowers at any time, least of all at the holidays?

Just One Note.

I hope you will have a prosperous and happy New Year. Phil.

BOSTON.

The Market.

It has become somewhat of a hackneyed phrase to say, "Business again broke all records," but this Christmas unquestionably went well ahead of any of its predecessors in volume of business and as regards satisfactory prices. Buying was good several days before the holiday and December 22 seemed to have more real snap to it than December 23. Christmas morning arrivals were not heavy, as many growers have a large and lucrative home retail trade. Weather conditions, except on December 22, when it was dark, wet and foggy, were satisfactory, it being cold but not unseasonably so.

Roses cleaned up well. American Beauties, select, made $75 to $100 per hundred; other grades $8 to $50 per hundred. Hadley and Russell sold from $6 to $32, some select flowers going higher. Cardinal, Francis Scott Key, Hoosier Beauty, D'Arenberg and Crimson Queen sold from $6 to $24. Ophelia was a great favorite at from $6 to $32. Dark Pink Killarney, Killarney Queen, Sunburst and Ward made $4 to $20, while White Killarney lagged a little at $4 to $16. Carnations were decidedly aggressive. Beacon, Champion and fancy crimsons made $12 to $15 per hundred. Pink Delight, Alice, Ward and Good Cheer went at $10 to $12. White, as usual, moved more slowly, but cleaned up well at $4 to $8 per hundred.

Violets averaged $1.50 per hundred; some made $1.75, others $1.25. Yellow marguerites were never so abundant here at Christmas; they made $2 to $4 per hundred. Paper White narcissi were somewhat druggy at $3 to $4. Stevia was a little overdone; also lilies at $12 to $15 per hundred, there being considerable left-overs of these. Freesia Purity made $10 to $12.50 per hundred, Golden Spur narcissi $6 to $8, wallflowers 50 to 75 cents per bunch, pansies $1 to $3 per hundred, cut poinsettias $1 to $3 per dozen, with only moderate sales. Sweet peas were good and made $1.50 to $3 per hundred. Some fine mignonette, cornflowers, calendulas, English primroses and Euphorbia jacquiniæflora appeared. Chrysanthemums were in evidence; some looked the worse for wear. All good flowers made $16 to $24 per hundred. There were few gardenias. Valley averaged $8 per hundred, cypripediums $2 per dozen, Cattleya Percivaliana $5 to $6 per dozen and C. Trianæ $12 per dozen. For green stock the call was moderately good.

Pot plants were more largely sold than ever before and seemed to have first call over cut flowers with most of the retail customers. The greatest sellers were azaleas, begonias, cyclamens and poinsettias. There was a considerable surplus of poinsettias, a condition which the cold weather probably was responsible for. They are unsatisfactory subjects when the temperature is low. Ardisias sold well; so did oranges, which were in smaller supply than usual. Solanums seemed to be overdone; also Chinese primroses. Euphorbia jacquiniæflora, when it appeared, sold quickly. It was by far the best plant Christmas Boston ever had. Dealers in greenery state that their volume of business was the biggest ever.

Since Christmas there has not been a large supply of carnations, which are making $4 to $6 per hundred. Roses are somewhat easier, as well as violets. Lilies, stevias, Paper Whites and calendulas are rather slow. With continued cold weather, supplies are being curtailed and a good market for some time ahead seems assured.

Various Notes.

W. R. Nicholson had a grand Christmas pick of carnations. He especially likes Alice, Matchless and Pink Delight. From a large batch of Alice planted as late as September 2 he has already averaged six flowers per plant, showing how profusely this variety blooms. Mr. Nicholson has a specially fine strain of winter-flowering wallflowers and of these he had many for the holidays; also freesias, Godfrey callas and marguerites.

Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, says that Carnation Nancy improves with him as the season advances. Particularly good are Matchless, Alice, Pink Delight, Champion and Beacon. For Christmas he also had wallflowers, calendulas, heliotropes, stevias and marguerites.

The New England Florists' Supply Co. reports a record-breaking Christmas trade in greenery, baskets and other Christmas supplies. The establishment of this concern has been an extremely busy place of late.

William Sim, of Cliftondale, had a heavy pick of high-grade carnations for the holidays; also a fine lot of polyanthus, roses, sweet peas and asparagus.

The officers and employees of H. M. Robinson & Co. presented the senior member of the firm, Henry M. Robinson, with a handsome leather easy chair December 20, on the twentieth anniversary of his marriage. The gift came as a complete surprise to Mr. Robinson and was greatly appreciated.

Patrick Welch says Christmas trade with him was splendid. I noted here some fine English primroses, gardenias, cattleyas, American Beauties and sweet peas.

John Barr is one of our finest growers of carnations. He reduced his number of varieties this season and now grows chiefly Matchless, Pink Delight, Ward, Good Cheer and Champion. He had 12,000 flowers for the holidays.

A terrific northwest gale on the evening of December 22 wrecked the greenhouses of Henry Eaton, of South Sudbury, and caused considerable damage to stock, the temperature being many degrees below freezing at the time.

The Janiten & Wollrath Co., which recently bought the F. R. Mathiesen establishment at Clematis Brook, is making good there. While several houses at present are devoted to roses, pot plants such as begonias, cyclamens, lilies, ferns, etc., are being largely and well grown, and another season the company plans to grow little else than pot plants.

Among H. R. Comley's Christmas plants I noted euphorbias, strelitzias, Primula Kewensis and Daphne Indica odorata.

At Welch's wholesale house, 280 Devonshire street, I found the staff on the jump. Christmas business had come with a rush and in far heavier volume than they had dared to anticipate. They had a splendid lot of stock and practically everything sold out.

The Sutermeister Estate, of Readville, always is early with freesias. December 23 they had 800 that made fancy prices; also a nice lot of Trumpet major narcissi.

N. E. Boyle, of Malden, swears by Ophelia as the one rose always dependable. Hoosier Beauty, Killarney and Sunburst were all good with him for Christmas.

J. A. Nelson, of Framingham, left December 18 for a three months' sojourn in Florida. His carnations are in grand condition now, especially Peerless Pink, Pink Delight, Matchless and Ward. He also has good sweet peas and snapdragons.

The Rawson Conservatories, of Arlington, sent in 20,000 carnations Christmas week. They also had a fine lot of poinsettias in pans, begonias, primulas and azaleas.

Bachelor's buttons have become quite a feature in the Boston market this winter. I have not seen finer flowers than those sent in December 23 by Lewis Smith, of Tewksbury, on 16-inch stems, which created a sensation.

The finest rose-pink carnation coming into the Boston wholesale market this season is the new Albert Roper, from the Roper Estate, Tewksbury. This is destined to displace all others of its color. It is to be sent out the coming season and many thousands have already been ordered.

The Welch Bros. Co. did a tremendous Christmas business. Mr. Reynolds, one of the firm, says all hands had to work until midnight for a number of days before Christmas, and the way orders poured in was an eye-opener.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, had 4,000 Golden Spur narcissi for the holidays out of a batch of 5,000 planted.

Kidder Bros. had a superb lot of single violets for the holidays. Their flowers are always beautifully bunched.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, January 16, will be ladies' night. Officers will be installed and there will be an entertainment and collation, followed by dancing.

The Newtonville Greenhouses, R. C. Bridgham, proprietor, had a grand lot of roses, carnations and other bench crops, in addition to pot plants, for the holiday trade, and did a record business.

S. J. Goddard's mixed bunches of carnations were a feature of the Boston market. Such carnations, of the highest quality, readily made $15 per hundred and included such fine varieties as Laddie, Rosalia, Doris, Nancy and some of the older sorts.

At Penn's the volume of Christmas trade was tremendous, the store being crowded uncomfortably for two or three days prior to the holiday. Sales were a long way ahead of all previous records.

A vase of White Maud Dean chrysanthemums sent by C. T. Guenther, of Hamburg, N. Y., arrived too late for the last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

The T. J. Grey Co. will move into its new quarters at 16 South Market street January 1. The company will occupy the entire building, six floors.

T. F. Galvin, Inc., did a larger Christmas business than ever before at its Back Bay and Park street stores.

Carbone, in spite of the handicap caused by the recent destructive fire at his store, handled a much greater volume of business in flowers, plants and sundries than a year ago. W. N. C.

The Market.

The outlook in cut flowers was encouraging all last week, even up to the evening of December 22. Prices were reasonable all along the line and, could they have been held at this level, there is no doubt everything would have been sold. But the growers had been educated up to unnatural expectations; competition for their product has been keen and an attempt to advance prices December 23 was unfortunate. Coupled with it was the arrival of much pickled stock, under which the market gradually became so top-heavy that a slump became inevitable.

Instead of the moderate shipments of carnations expected, the market was flooded with them. The pickling process employed because of the high prices "guaranteed" by some wholesale houses had produced the usual result. The greatest misfortune was that carnations unsteadied the whole market and carried the values of everything down.

The wholesale price of the best Beauties was $12 per dozen. An occasional sale at higher prices is heard of, but a fair average for the best Beauties and Hadleys would be 75 cents each. All roses held their top quotations up to Saturday afternoon; then the carnation flood was at its height and everything was affected adversely, although roses felt the strain least of all cut flowers. There was no surplus of roses, even if one house received over 100 boxes December 23 and one grower shipped in nearly 50,000 flowers that day. Some grand Hadley brought record figures and the specialties and novelties were all absorbed.

There was no shortage of orchids, but a good many of the flowers should have been cut and shipped a week earlier. Gardenias were low in price, breaking Sunday night to $3 a dozen for quality that brought $4 and $5 earlier in the week. One could buy good lilies for 10 cents December 24. Valley did not recognize the holiday season. There were few mums left, but more than enough for the demand.

Violets once more demonstrated the result of pickling. Good flowers brought $1 to $1.50 all the week, but for the salted stuff there was no sale at all. Cut poinsettias sold at from $2 per dozen up, but there were too many small plants and hundreds of these remain unsold. Callas were scarce, and easily brought $2 per dozen. Narcissi were abundant; few brought 40 cents a bunch. There was far too much stevia. Sweet peas moved sluggishly and even $1.50 per hundred was realized with difficulty.

The weather was ideal for plant delivery; only one severe day made wrapping necessary. At noon on Christmas day few retailers had any plants left. Plant growers had booked orders for everything they had in flower and were on Easy street long before the holidays. Never before were so many combination baskets and boxes of plants sold and prices were the best ever received for them.

Various Notes.

The bowling club opens its season at Thumm's alleys December 28 with a membership of ten.

Roman J. Irwin's office now is decorated with three moose heads, the last trophy the largest of the trio. But Mr. Irwin does not let hunting interfere with business. He has everything cut and dried for a happy and prosperous new year.

Mr. Russin, Sr., of Russin & Hanfling, is reported seriously ill with appendicitis.

Charles Lenker, of Freeport, L. I., is critically ill with pneumonia.

J. H. Small & Sons had a large decoration last week at the Hotel Somerset, Boston. Twelve of the Small staff were kept busy there for several days.

Among the visitors last week were A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, and Robert Craig, of Philadelphia.

M. Aronowitz, of the Barclay Nursery, escaped death miraculously last week, falling twenty-five feet down an elevator shaft and rescued by a human chain. Mr. Aronowitz was severely injured and was confined to his room through the busy Christmas season.

Jack Trepel's new store in Brooklyn is one of the beauty spots there.

The Stumpp & Walter Co. made a Christmas gift of ten per cent of the salaries of all its employees and announced its intention of granting this encouragement twice yearly, in January and July.

Oscar Hauschild is manager of the florists' department at the Hotel McAlpin.

The death of Samuel Snyder is reported in this week's obituary column.

J. Austin Shaw.

Medina, O.—As an outlet for their greater production, Hammerschmidt & Clark have purchased the store of the Gilbo Floral Co., at Akron.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Under the name of the Kodak Florist a handsomely equipped flower store was opened December 22 in the Nickels Arcade. The store is owned by the Amateur Finishing Syndicate, Inc., R. D. MacNett, treasurer. The equipment and stock for the store were drawn from the Chicago market.

Danville, Ind.—Four and a half years ago Mrs. B. Howell disposed of her greenhouses and residence to an Illinoisan, who was to pay for the business in installments. The purchaser, however, failed to settle the notes and now Mrs. Howell has been compelled to take back her establishment and become a florist again. She says she hopes to find another buyer before spring, as the work and responsibility are too great for one of her years.

DISEASES OF SWEET PEAS.

ened appearance of the roots and of the stem nearest the ground that some workers have mistaken this disease for the well-known streak disease. Streak, however, is a stem disease. The thielavia disease, as already stated, is not a stem but a root disease.

The fungus Thielavia basicola is a common source of seed-bed trouble in tobacco and trucking districts in the United States. Plants infected with Thielavia basicola do not quickly die; they may linger for a long time, or indeed sometimes throughout the entire growing season. However, such infected plants remain dwarfed and are practically useless for flower production.

Root Knot or Nematode.

The disease called root knot or nematode, Heterodera radicicola, is characterized by swellings on the roots. These are either small swellings formed singly, in pairs, or in strings, thus giving the affected root a beaded condition, or the swellings may be so large as to be mistaken for root nodules. However, these galls should not be mistaken for the normal root nodules, because the latter are lobed and are attached at one end, whereas the root gall produces a swelling of the entire surface of the part affected. Infected plants usually linger for a long time, but they can be distinguished by a thin growth and yellow, sickly looking leaves and stems. The disease is introduced with infected manure or with compost.

Mosaic Disease.

Of all the greenhouse diseases, none challenges so much the skill and attention of the grower as mosaic. The great difficulty with mosaic is that we do not yet know the cause, although every indication points to its being a disease which is being induced by a specific parasite. Serious as this disease is, it may be kept in check, provided, of course, the grower recognizes certain fundamental facts. Mosaic is carried from diseased to healthy plants by the bites of insects. Aphids, especially, are great carriers of mosaic. Ordinarily winter-flowering sweet peas are not sown directly in the benches in the house. The seeds, as a rule, are at first sown in pots, which are kept in a coldframe outdoors. The seedlings, as they grow up, are open to attacks of the green aphid and several other insects, which carry the germ from neighboring older sweet pea plants. As the young seedlings are taken into the house to be planted permanently on the benches, the disease is introduced with them. In most instances some of the aphids are also brought in. These soon begin to reproduce and to establish themselves in the greenhouse. In the meantime, too, the transplanted seedlings are beginning to show definite symptoms of mosaic, and the trouble is now spread about by the new broods of these plant lice.

Protecting Plants from Mosaic.

It is obvious, therefore, that if instead of allowing the potted plants to remain outdoors until they are ready to be taken indoors, they be kept from the beginning in a protected cold house, they will remain free and non-infected. In bringing in clean plants there will be no mosaic to bother us. This is indeed simple and is the only way, as far as is known, to control mosaic on indoor sweet peas.

Mosaic is readily distinguished by a yellow mottling on the leaves, presenting in some instances a beautiful mosaic structure; hence the name of the disease. This, however, is not the only symptom. Diseased plants exhibit a curling of the leaves, resembling the curling induced by the green aphids, but in this case the plant lice do not curl the sweet pea leaves. Mosaic makes its appearance when the seedlings are from three to four weeks old. Often the trouble is so bad and the curling so pronounced that the plants thus affected cannot make any headway, but remain dwarfed and wrinkled and twisted. Occasionally, however, diseased plants continue to grow, with the disease keeping pace, but even in this case the affected host is useless, as far as commercial purposes are concerned, since the blossoms, too, are twisted and are borne on short, crooked peduncles.

England. In this country the disease is common on greenhouse sweet peas, and outdoors during wet seasons. Ordinarily, however, in small garden lots, and especially where the plants do not receive any water, the disease is practically unimportant, since the attack is usually mild during the active season, but becomes somewhat more extensive when the plants have passed all usefulness.

To control mildew, spray with a solution of potassium sulphide, also known as liver of sulphur, one ounce in three gallons of water. Some growers merely coat the pipes with a paste made of flowers of sulphur, which seems equally effective in controlling mildew. Where fumigation is done it should be attended to carefully. On cool nights or early in the morning is the time to fumigate.

Root Burn and Bud Drop.

Root burn may be induced by the excessive use of wood ashes applied with the manure. It is not uncommon for growers to use wood ashes at the rate of 1,500 pounds to 4,500 square feet of bed space. This would be equivalent to nearly seven and one-half tons per acre. Under such conditions the roots actually burn up because of the strong alkalinity of the soil. Moreover, hardwood ashes contain about thirty per cent of caustic lime and from five to twelve per cent of potash. Both of these elements in excess in soil render it too alkaline for plant growth. To remedy this trouble, use acid phosphate followed by a good drenching of water. This will help to neutralize the alkalinity and restore the balanced food ration.

As the name bud drop implies, flower buds affected by this disease turn yellow at an early age and drop off. This drop should not be confused with the drop produced by the anthracnose disease. In the latter case the flower develops into a normal spike, but is attacked soon by the fungus Glomerella rufomaculans, which girdles it at a point of attachment between the flower and the peduncle. Here the flower often drops off, leaving behind the beheaded peduncle. In the latter case, however, the minute young flower bud never develops; instead, it turns yellow and drops off. There seems to be no doubt that the drop is induced by an unbalanced condition of food elements in the soil. This may occur in a soil that has been excessively fed or in a soil that is lacking in plant food. The disease may be readily remedied by the application to the soil of small quantities of muriate of potash and acid phosphate.

Sterilizing the Soil.

Steam sterilization in the greenhouse is the best means of making a soil safe for sweet peas. Much has already been said and written on how to steam-sterilize soil and on the advantages derived from the operation. Prospective growers will do well to install a heating plant with facilities to generate steam. The establishment of such a plant will more than pay for itself, as it will put on a sound basis the safe and profitable growing of all greenhouse crops.

Where steam facilities are lacking, the formaldehyde treatment is the next best means of soil sterilization. Dissolve one pint of pure formaldehyde, sold as forty per cent pure in all drug stores, in twenty gallons of water. With a watering can apply one gallon of the solution to every square foot of bed space. This soil treatment is usually employed a week to ten days before planting.

burn, and that was when anything would have burned.

My own lone seedling of Firebird is also a good grower and multiplier. It has the Firebird shape, but is a little smaller. Its foliage is exceptionally good, and the color is unique, a pure cochineal.

Ottawa Improved has delighted us all summer. We had never grown it before. There are few reds that can equal it, and we doubt if any really excel it as all-round bedding cannas.

Where Choice Is Difficult.

red. The one is about as good as the other. If there is any difference, Dragon has the preference.

Wawa, though usually classed with the pinks, is really almost a pure coral red. It is dwarf, distinct in color, free in bloom, a good doer, and one of the real top-notchers. We know of no other canna of its color.

Crimson Giant is all that its name implies. It would give satisfaction anywhere, except for its one weakness, that it fades too easily in our hottest, driest weather.

Triumph is much on the order of Meteor and does as well in every way with us. In color it has more of a yellowish tinge than Meteor, making it a shade lighter scarlet.

Olympic is a rich oriental red. It is not so dazzling as the scarlets and crimsons, but it has such large flowers, produced in such large heads and so constantly, that it would be hard to imagine a better canna. It is different from the others and never fails to attract attention. It is sure to become one of the really popular cannas.

Pennsylvania, Uncle Sam and Louisiana are old varieties that have never been superseded. They are as good as anything we have today. Their weakness is that they carry their flowers too high above the foliage.

Bronze-Leaved Reds.

We still believe that New York is the best of the bronze-leaved reds for this locality. It has a better color and better foliage than King Humbert. It does not crop as does King Humbert, and this means much in a canna.

William Saunders is another canna that is better in every respect than King Humbert, which it much resembles. It blooms much more freely and has better foliage, and the flower is fully as good.

Conowingo resembles David Harum, but has a larger flower and is an improvement in other respects. It is a great bedding canna, especially for parks where a constant sheet of bloom is desired.

Hon. Benjamin F. Howell is similar to King Humbert, for which it is often sold. The flowers are smaller, however, and it will produce three times as many of them. It is also a much better multiplier.

Remarkable is taller than the other reds with bronze leaves. It is a carmine-scarlet, decidedly different in shade from the others and not so pleasing to us. Yet it is attractive and a good doer.

Eastern Beauty may be described as a pinkish salmon-red. It has good red-bronze foliage and is a free bloomer. It is not one that we would recommend where only two or three kinds are grown, but for variety it is excellent.

LAW ON POISONOUS PLANTS.

To charge a person with legal liability for injury to another arising from the presence of a poisonous plant growing on the former's premises, it must appear that he was guilty of carelessness in permitting it to grow under such circumstances that it was apt to cause injury to others rightfully on the premises. This is the substance of the holding of the New York Supreme court in a recent case. In this case the plaintiff, while placing flowers on her husband's grave in the cemetery grounds of the defendant, was poisoned by poison ivy growing on the grave, and was denied recovery because it did not appear that the cemetery association was chargeable with notice of the existence of the ivy on the grave, although a florist testified that, judging from the growth, it had been on the grave about two months. The court said:

"The defendant is not shown to have violated the rule of reasonable care, which I think is all that the law imposed upon it. The courts should be extremely cautious, it seems to me, not to lay down any new rule, or enlarge any old one, so as to extend the liability of those who own or control land, for the presence of poisonous plants upon their property. So far as I know, poison ivy and poison sumach are the only common plants which are poisonous to the touch. Poison sumach grows chiefly in swampy places, where its inaccessibility prevents persons from approaching it with anything like the frequency with which they may encounter poison ivy. * * * Poison ivy may be found along the roadside in nearly all the rural parts of New York. If the traveler on the highway is to have a right of action against the municipality because it leaves this shrub there to poison his legs, or an action against the farmer for allowing poison ivy to grow on a wall which the wayfarer leans against, a novel and interesting, not to say onerous, class of negligence suits will speedily be developed.''

The Supreme court dissented from the decision, however, on the ground that plaintiff being upon the grounds of the cemetery association by its invitation, for a lawful purpose, she had the right to assume that, in the care of the graves, the association had removed all poisonous growths.

The judge cited an English case where the owner of a yew tree was held responsible for the death of a horse, which had browsed the limbs of the tree overhanging the premises of the owner of the horse. S.

Westerly, R. I.—Conrad Schultz has been making a number of improvements at his range on Beach street. He is contemplating building at least one new house in the spring.

Seed Trade News

President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

In spite of the restrictions, considerable quantities of seeds of various kinds are coming in via Rotterdam.

The cold weather stopped shipments of onion sets, but prices hold firm and a heavy demand is looked for from southern states after the first of the year.

Beans and peas are now practically out of the market. Larger seed houses are reported as paying as high as $10 and $12 for green pod and wax beans.

The misbranding bill, to which The Review has called attention, now before Congress, is to be amended so that seeds and plants indistinguishable by their appearance will be exempted from its provisions.

Most of the larger seed houses are quoting prices on corn, beans and peas on a pound basis by the cental system this year, instead of by the old method of making quotations on a basis of pecks and bushels.

There is but little change in the spinach seed situation. The only shipments which arrive in this country come from France and England, Holland not yet having raised the ban on exportation. Seed is now selling at $1 per pound.

A. H. Goodwin, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is spending the holidays at West Baden, Ind. Arnold Ringier is at Excelsior Springs, Mo., and Fred Lemke is visiting relatives at Milwaukee. As a result W. W. Barnard himself is working overtime.

J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, have announced their intention of sharing profits with those employees who have been associated with them for a number of years. Last week checks were handed to those who were entitled to them under the plan for the year ending September 1, 1916, which is said to have been one of the best in the ninety-nine years of this firm's existence. At the same time many salary increases were announced.

THE Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, reports a heavy demand for Leonard's Narrow Grain Evergreen corn from both the canners and the seed trade.

THE consensus of the Western Canners' meeting in Chicago, December 19 and 20, was that all canned goods will advance in price because of the higher growing cost and the advance in the cost of labor and cans. Among the seed firms represented at the meeting were the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago; the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn., and S. D. Woodruff & Co., New York city.

THE bulb trade was specially interested in the report in The Review last week that the Holland firm of Langhout & Co. had taken into partnership Edward H. Goldenstein, formerly in charge of the bulb department of Vaughan's Seed Store. For a dozen years the Dutch exporters have been steadily increasing their efforts to monopolize the trade in this country, several having recently established permanent branch offices in New York, but this is the first time a Holland house has admitted an American bulb man as a resident partner.

BRITISH EMBARGO ON SEEDS.

The British government has put an embargo on the exportation of root crop seeds except to British possessions. Included in the list are carrot, kohl-rabi, mangold, onion and turnip seeds. The exportation of grass and clover seeds also has been restricted to British possessions where heretofore exportation was permitted to the countries allied with Great Britain in the war.

BREACH OF CONTRACT.

Provisions of the Contract.

The Texas Court of Civil Appeals has handed down a decision affecting the liability of a corporation for claimed breach of a contract relating to a sale of onion sets (Chicago Set & Seed Co. versus Texas Seed & Floral Co. and Robinson Seed & Plant Co., 187 Southwestern Reporter, 747).

The Robinson company, in 1911, agreed to buy 2,000 bushels of onion sets from the Chicago company, under a written contract, whereby the latter agreed to grow and to hold for shipment to the former the stated quantity of dark red, yellow and white onion sets, at $1.30, $1.20 and $1.60 per bushel, respectively. Payment was to be made taken previously to receipt of new crop. It was also provided that the Chicago company should not be liable for damage to, or loss of, the sets grown to fill the contract, unless due to the company's negligence, and that delivery might be withheld if the buyer should be overdue on any amount due the seller.

Buyer Breaks; Seller Sues.

The order covered by the contract was approved by the Chicago company, and the Robinson company later specified an apportionment of the 2,000 bushels among the three varieties of onion sets mentioned in the contract. While the Chicago company was harvesting the sets, in August, the buyer notified it that it had gone out of business, returning the buyer's copy of the contract. The Chicago company replied with a refusal to cancel, and notified the defaulting company that the sets would be stored for its account, and afterwards notified the Texas Seed & Floral Co., which in the meantime had absorbed the Robinson company, that the Chicago company would attempt to hold it, the Texas company. The sets were disposed of to outsiders at the best advantage and suit was brought against the Robinson and the Texas companies, to recover damages for refusing to accept delivery of the subject of the contract. The trial court rendered judgment against the Texas company, which appealed to the Court of Civil Appeals, where the judgment was affirmed, that court deciding the following points of law, which should prove of special interest to seedsmen:

Plaintiff Wins; Points of Law.

The buyer was not entitled to repudiate the contract on the ground that it was not mutually binding—an essential element of every business contract—merely because it was provided that the sale was "subject to crop." The court holds that this provision did not relieve the seller of duty to use reasonable effort to grow a crop sufficient to fill the contract, merely guarding against a crop failure due to natural causes and beyond the seller's control. "It is a well recognized rule that contracts should provide against difficulties and hardships, and the hardship should be anticipated; if not, the party will not be excused from performance, but held to his contract."

For similar reasons, the contract was not invalid because it provided for release of the seller from liability for loss or damage not due to its negligence.

But even if it could be said that the contract was originally invalid for want of mutuality, this was cured when the Chicago company had grown the crop and held it for delivery under the contract.

Damages Recoverable.

When the Texas company absorbed the Robinson company it became bound to discharge the accrued obligations of that company, it appearing that all the assets of the old company were taken over by the consolidated company and that it paid most of the debts of the absorbed corporation, although there was no specific agreement at the time of the consolidation that the debts would be assumed.

As to the measure of damages recoverable by the seller in this case, the court says: "At the time of the repudiation the contract was not wholly completed. The crop had been grown and nearly all gathered. Substantially all that was required to be done was the delivery. The seller could have accepted the repudiation at the time and sued for the damages on the breach, or it could elect to consider the contract as still in force. One party cannot by himself rescind a contract. The renunciation itself does not amount to a rescission. We regard the contract in question as being more than a mere order for goods. However this may be, the Chicago company had the right to treat the onion sets ordered as property belonging to the buyer and sell them on the buyer's account and recover of it the sum representing the difference between the price brought and the contract price. While the seller did not have a right, after the order was countermanded, to do anything which would enhance the damages, it was not bound to treat the buyer's repudiation

LILY BULBS

OUR MOTTO: "Your dollar's value."

Those who know will grow Reburn & Co. lily bulbs, for they are fertilized (the truth without fear or favor), and feeding the bulbs at growing stage positively produces the best results, maturing a healthy, sound bulb; three times rogued and cultivated by the oldest and best experienced growers in Japan. GIGANTEUM of superb quality.

taken previously to receipt of new crop. It was also provided that the Chicago company should not be liable for damage to, or loss of, the sets grown to fill the contract, unless due to the company's negligence, and that delivery might be withheld if the buyer should be overdue on any amount due the seller.

Buyer Breaks; Seller Sues.

The order covered by the contract was approved by the Chicago company, and the Robinson company later specified an apportionment of the 2,000 bushels among the three varieties of onion sets mentioned in the contract. While the Chicago company was harvesting the sets, in August, the buyer notified it that it had gone out of business, returning the buyer's copy of the contract. The Chicago company replied with a refusal to cancel, and notified the defaulting company that the sets would be stored for its account, and afterwards notified the Texas Seed & Floral Co., which in the meantime had absorbed the Robinson company, that the Chicago company would attempt to hold it, the Texas company. The sets were disposed of to outsiders at the best advantage and suit was brought against the Robinson and the Texas companies, to recover damages for refusing to accept delivery of the subject of the contract. The trial court rendered judgment against the Texas company, which appealed to the Court of Civil Appeals, where the judgment was affirmed, that court deciding the following points of law, which should prove of special interest to seedsmen:

Plaintiff Wins; Points of Law.

The buyer was not entitled to repudiate the contract on the ground that it was not mutually binding—an essential element of every business contract—merely because it was provided that the sale was "subject to crop." The court holds that this provision did not relieve the seller of duty to use reasonable effort to grow a crop sufficient to fill the contract, merely guarding against a crop failure due to natural causes and beyond the seller's control. "It is a well recognized rule that contracts should provide against difficulties and hardships, and the hardship should be anticipated; if not, the party will not be excused from performance, but held to his contract."

For similar reasons, the contract was not invalid because it provided for release of the seller from liability for loss or damage not due to its negligence.

But even if it could be said that the contract was originally invalid for want of mutuality, this was cured when the Chicago company had grown the crop and held it for delivery under the contract.

Damages Recoverable.

When the Texas company absorbed the Robinson company it became bound

DUTCH VALLEY?

The quantities of valley pips arriving at New York on the steamers of the Holland-America line, while ostensibly of Dutch production, lead to the suspicion that the British restrictions are not so close as interested persons in the United States had been led to believe. For several weeks each boat has brought valley pips, the consignments on the Noordam, which filed its manifest at the New York customhouse December 18, being as follows:

Consignee	Cases
Hempstead, O. G., & Son	20
Thorburn, J. M., & Co	33
Van Waveren, M., & Sons	101
Marshall, W. E., & Co	21
Maltus & Ware	435
Kuyper, P. C., & Co	106
Total	716

MORE DUTCH BULBS.

The following consignments of bulbs were on the Noordam, which reached New York last week from Rotterdam:

Consignee	Cases
Henderson, P., & Co	2
Berger, H. H., & Co	1
Ringk, A. H., & Co	25
Vaughan's Seed Store	2
Van Waveren, M., & Sons	11
Hampton, J. W., Jr., & Co	3
Lang, R. F	61
Maltus & Ware	114
Hempstead, O. G., & Son	4
Kuyper, P. C., & Co	67
Total	290
Previously reported	47,704
Total to date	47,994

The recent shipments no doubt consist principally of gladioli, although the greater part of the gladiolus bulbs come in the spring.

SEED IMPORTATIONS.

''During the fiscal year 1916,'' says the report of W. A. Taylor, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, ''there was a gradual increase in the number of samples of seed submitted for test to the Washington seed laboratory, as well as to the coöperative branch laboratories. Owing to the unusual conditions in Europe, the normal supply of winter rape seed was unavailable, and much other seed was imported under the name of rape. Seed purchased in the open market as winter rape showed that seeds of seven other types of plants, all unsuitable for forage purposes, were being sold under this name. Tests of imported seeds have shown that large quantities of red and crimson clover seed brought into the United States germinated so poorly as to be of little or no agricultural value, and that much of the orchard grass seed contained but a small proportion of good seed, the balance being mostly chaff. The seed importation act has now been amended, prohibiting the entry of such low grade seed. Through the enforcement of the seed importation act a large amount of low grade red clover seed offered for import into the United States has been recleaned and the screenings destroyed under customs supervision.

''The amount of important crop seeds imported in the last year varied greatly from that imported in previous years. Only about one-half as much alfalfa seed was imported as in either of the three previous years, and the imports of crimson clover seed were less than half of those of the two previous years. Of hairy vetch seed less than 70,000 pounds were imported, as compared with 2,500,000 pounds in 1914 and 500,000 pounds in 1915. The imports of both winter rape and red clover seed exceeded those of any previous year, enough red clover seed being brought in to seed over 4,000,000 acres at a normal rate of seeding.''

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Watkins & Simpson, Ltd., Covent Garden, London, England.—Foreign and colonial wholesale catalogue of flower, vegetable and farm seeds and sundries; 114 large pages, printed and illustrated in this company's usual first-class style. The book starts with twenty-four pages of novelties in both flowers and vegetables. Among the illustrations are two full-page colored pictures, showing the company's new premises. Enclosed is a 4-page folder offering "colored pictorial seed pockets."

H. G. Hastings Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Illustrated catalogue of seeds, bulbs and plants; ninety-six pages and colored cover. Among the specialties are cotton, feterita, sorghum, millet, buckwheat, rape, upland rice, tobacco, etc. In speaking of the development of the Hastings business to its present proportions, the catalogue says: "Twenty-seven years ago last October the Hastings seed business was established. That first season the present head of the business, H. G. Hastings, then only 20 years old, and one young boy, H. W. Brown, the present vice-president, were fully able to take care of all the business, with plenty of time to spare."

Richard Diener Co., Inc., Kentfield, Calif.—A clearly printed, well illustrated catalogue of gladiolus bulbs and seeds, carnation plants; also pansy, geranium, petunia, delphinium, dahlia and cucumber seeds; sixteen pages and cover. Chief prominence is given to the new Diener gladioli, exhibited at the San Francisco S. A. F. convention and "now put on the market for the first time."

Sluis & Groot, Enkhuizen, Holland.—General catalogue of vegetable, flower and agricultural seeds, with "prices indicated in Dutch value, guilders and cents"; 130 well printed pages, with no illustrations. The prices of beans and of many varieties of other stock are omitted, on account of the uncertain conditions produced by the war, but "will be submitted on application."

Aggeler & Musser Seed Co., Los Angeles, Cal.—Twenty-fourth annual catalogue; 112 pages, illustrated. "Instead of publishing a garden manual separately, as heretofore," says the company, "we have included in this book all the cultural information formerly contained in the manual." Besides extensive lists of flower, vegetable and field seeds, the book offers fruit-bearing plants and trees, fertilizers, insecticides, implements and sundries.

Ravenna, O.—The business in Ravenna now will have to be split into one more portion, for R. M. Curliss has launched a flower business at 545 East Highland avenue.

Sioux City, Ia.—A. R. Toothaker and Stephen Van Benthuysen, proprietors of the florists' business conducted under the name of Morningside Nurseries, have incorporated and recapitalized at $50,000.

SNAPDRAGON

For spring blooms and a bumper crop Memorial Day grow Snapdragon. The flowers sell themselves and are easy to handle, requiring no "green" or making-up. Sow at once seed of the following varieties:

My original Silver Pink at $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Seed of Nelrose, Garnet, Yellow, Light Pink, Phelps' White and Fancy Mixed at 35c per pkt.; 3 for $1.00. All orders cash. Free cultural directions.

Remember, you can grow no plant that will equal Snapdragon for cut flowers.

Flint, Mich.—Coal here seems about as plentiful as diamonds and about as valuable as gold nuggets; in fact, the chap who corners a supply at any price is counted among the lucky. Business, however, has been good enough to be a balm on the outraged pocketbook, and D. P. Smith gleaned the wherewithal for a new palm and show house 20x107 feet and a propagating house 7½x100 feet.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Baker, Ore.—W. A. Sisson now is manager of the City Greenhouses, W. A. Weeks, the proprietor, having decided to take a vacation.

Seattle, Wash.—The Aabling-Boyce Seed Co., in connection with its seed store, has opened a retail flower store at 89 Pike street under the name of the Market Flower Shop. It is the intention to do a general florists' business.

Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.—Adolph Donart, who has been located here about seven years, has built up an establishment of good size and is branching out. Recently he purchased, with H. E. Stapleton, the House of Flowers, of A. J. Burt, of Spokane, Wash. Mr. Stapleton has been employed as manager by Mr. Burt for about a year. He has been in the business upwards of twenty-five years. He will have active charge of the store, while Mr. Donart will remain at Coeur d'Alene growing the stock. He has been supplying this house ever since it started in Spokane.

LAWN TROUBLES IN OREGON.

I made a new lawn last spring, but the first part of the season was so wet and cold that the new grass did not make much growth until late in the summer. Then, toward the end of August, after a nice sod was formed, part of the lawn started to turn brown. This was not caused by lack of moisture, for I had an abundant supply of water and used all that was needed. I also fed the grass with lawn fertilizer, but still there were black spots on the leaves, somewhat similar to the black spot on roses. The grass now seems to be killed to the ground and some of the roots also are gone.

The part of the lawn referred to was seeded with blue grass. One cause of the trouble, no doubt, is the poorness of the soil, but adjacent parts of the lawn, seeded with other kinds of grass, look fairly well. Only the blue grass is in really bad condition. Also, there are a great many unusually large angleworms in the soil and they appear to be a serious pest, working up numerous little humps in the soil and putting the lawn in poor shape. Can you tell me how to get rid of them? Lime seems to kill them when it hits them, but if I use too much of the lime it may harm the lawn, as the soil is somewhat sandy.

F. W.—Ore.

The behavior of the blue grass and the presence of angleworms of unusual size would indicate that the soil is sour, and, as it is somewhat sandy, the drainage must be poor. If not well drained and well fertilized, the soil will not grow blue grass satisfactorily. It will be difficult to hurt the grass by applying ground lime rock, at the rate of at least two sacks to the lot, but first be sure of good drainage. Apply the lime dust now. To fertilize, use pulverized sheep manure in the spring, say 400 pounds to the lot. By "lot" is meant the average lawn area on a lot 50x100 feet, with a residence on it.

It will be useless to try to exterminate the angleworms. They are not harmful and bad lawns are not caused by the worms. They appear in great numbers when the soil is sour and their presence is a pretty sure indication of acidity. Try the litmus paper test and then there will be no question about it. Blue grass is sensitive to acidity of the soil and will not do well where other grasses may thrive. Get the soil in good condition and the worms will not cause any trouble.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

There probably never has been a larger quantity of fine stock in the market than at this Christmas, and yet the demand has been so heavy that wholesalers have had to cut their orders in half in many cases; of course, some of them have had to cut out orders altogether. The out-of-town demand has been unprecedented and the same may be said of the local. Among roses, long-stemmed Russells have been fine and in many cases have taken the place of Beauties, which have been exceedingly scarce. There has also been a fine lot of long reds, Milady, Hoosier Beauty and others, which have helped out with the scarcity of good red carnations. "Hothouse reds," as they are locally termed, have been among the hardest of all to get, and even white and light pink have been short. In field carnations the case was hopeless, the frost having checked the flowers' opening. Until the last, telegrams arrived at the wholesale houses and hundreds of dollars of business had to be turned down. Northern shipments fell off at the same time, which made matters worse. The same conditions applied to all other outdoor stock. Cecile Brunner roses from indoors helped a good deal with the smaller flowers.

There was a fair supply of orchids, which sold well. Roman hyacinths were sold in place of valley when they could be obtained, but even these were scarce. There were some gardenias and a few camellias, which sold well. Holly began to run short in the middle of the week, but large shipments came in and eased the situation.

Plants were fairly plentiful, but outside of cyclamens and poinsettias the quality was not so good as usual. Only a few of the newly imported azaleas made the market, but there were some hold-overs that looked well, though not quite so full of blooms as the new ones.

Various Notes.

Albert Knopf, of the Redondo Floral Co., has been down again with a severe cold and the grip. At last hearing, Mr. Borden was expecting him to call at the store, so he evidently was much better. The early part of the week a great deal of funeral work was handled and the advance orders for Christmas were heavy.

John Morlay, of San Diego, paid a short visit to the city on business connected with the exposition, driving both ways.

H. L. Freeman always has attractive windows and his Christmas display was one of the prettiest ever seen in Los Angeles. He reports business fine.

Howard & Smith made a splendid Christmas display in their large store at Ninth and Olive streets and throughout the holidays had a large force waiting on the trade. Some excellent hold-over azaleas were shown here.

Fred Hills, of Hills' Nursery, reports by far the biggest December business he ever had. By December 19 he had gone beyond his whole month's business for last year, and was still going strongly. His new fern is a beauty for large plants, some of them being shown in the leading retailers' windows. Mrs. Hills has almost recovered her usual good health and is around again.

There is more than a probability that Dr. Houghton, long known here as a clever botanist and patron of horticulture, will go to Europe as an army doctor, though arrangements at date of writing were not quite complete.

The Germain Seed & Plant Co. made an elegant showing with plants from the Whittier road nursery, the cyclamens, begonias and ferns being particularly good, as well as the made-up plants. W. Clark, of the nursery staff here, who had an accident to his eye recently, has about recovered.

The Santa Cruz Evergreen Co. reports excellent business. H. R. Richards.

San Diego, Cal.—The Thanksgiving business of Boyle & Darnaud beat last year's record by thirty-five per cent.

A Happy New Year

Another year has passed and 1916 has gone on record as the best year we ever had. This we attribute to our having satisfied our customers, as the letters we have recently published show. Our aim during 1917 will be as always to deserve success and we trust that our efforts will command it. To one and all our heartiest thanks and the old, old wish, "A Happy and Prosperous New Year."

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Several establishments took extra space to accommodate their large stocks of potted plants and there were anticipations of a record holiday business. Christmas on a Monday complicated the delivery problem to a considerable extent, but special arrangements were made by the larger firms to facilitate matters as much as possible.

Flowering plants are not so plentiful as the retailers had hoped for, and a close clean-up is practically assured. The growers have been holding back cut stock until the end of the week, and heavy offerings are expected Saturday, December 23. Liberal supplies will be welcomed, as substitutes probably will have to be made for potted plants. Heavy shipments of English holly have arrived from the Pacific northwest and the quality is excellent. California red berries also are plentiful. Much smilax is being offered and great quantities of evergreens find an outlet. There is a good-sized cut of carnations and prices were easier December 21, the date of this report.

Some chrysanthemums are included in the holiday offerings, but they do not constitute an important item, as the large flowers are about off the market and the Chinese mums are getting rather trashy. A limited number of pompons still sell fairly well. Quite a lot of bulbous stock is offered, including several kinds of narcissi, a large cut of freesias, a few anemones and some early daffodils. The latter will be plentiful in about two weeks. Poinsettias naturally are the principal feature of the holiday displays. Of these large shipments of cut stock have arrived from southern California, and more local stock is offered than in former years. The potted plants were mostly grown locally. In the temporary holiday stores potted cyclamens, cinerarias, primulas, begonias, poinsettias, ferns and other plants of that nature are handled exclusively.

Beauty roses are rather scarce and the shortage is made more acute by a heavy outside demand from Los Angeles. Fine Russell roses are shown, and they are selling in place of Beauties to a considerable extent.

Various Notes.

N. Peterson, one of the leading carnation growers in the San Francisco bay district, has about 50,000 carnation cuttings in the sand at his place at San Mateo. He reports more advance orders than ever before.

The E. W. McLellan Co. has a large cut of Russell roses, which are about the finest ever seen here. They have exceptionally large blooms and stems up to four feet in length. These are appreciated by the trade as substitutes for American Beauties, as well as for their own sake. The McLellan Co. also has a fine cut of freesias.

F. C. Burns, of San Rafael, reports good business in that city, there being much funeral work in addition to the Christmas rush.

C. Kooyman has his new store on Bush street nicely arranged and is making good use of the opportunity for improved display work which it affords. He reports business in excess of that of the corresponding period of last year.

Among the potted plants brought in by E. James was a nice lot of heather. Mr. James was a large contributor of cyclamens, begonias, primulas, etc., his stock showing good average quality.

To facilitate the handling of Christmas business, the Art Floral Co. rented a temporary store on Mason street, near Post street, in addition to its Powell street establishment and store in the St. Francis hotel.

To provide the necessary space to handle the large stock of plants, MacRorie & McLaren took the store adjoining their retail shop on Powell street for the week preceding Christmas and placed a large sign across the front of the two places.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. found it necessary to secure more space to accommodate their Christmas stock. This was accomplished by taking a vacant store at 78 Post street. It contained more floor space than the main store on Kearny street and afforded an opportunity for showing the stock to excellent advantage. Business at both establishments was reported brisk.

The Misses Hannon were well prepared for the Christmas trade. They had their shop on Sutter street nicely fitted up to attract holiday shoppers and though it was their first season in the present location, they expected to close a banner December business.

The week before Christmas the G. Rossi & Co. stock of evergreens, Christmas trees, etc., overflowed their warerooms at 670 Geary street and spread over a vacant lot adjoining, where a framework had been constructed to protect the stock. They report an unusually heavy demand for redwood and holly wreaths, garlands and other holiday decorations.

Charles F. Shellgrain, manager of J. B. Boland's shop, 60 Kearny street, says the holiday trade is the best in the history of the business.

A large consignment of flowering plants was received at the Emporium flower stand for the holiday trade, much of the stock being grown by Charles C. Navlet himself, who operates the department. Manager Picetti looks for a close clean-up, with the holiday business showing a nice increase over last December's.

At Joseph's store a specialty was made of fancy holiday baskets, for which the demand was gratifying, according to Manager F. J. Bertrand.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee reports a satisfactory Christmas shipping business.

Podesta & Baldocchi's store was one of the show places in the downtown retail district a few days before Christmas. An elaborate display of seasonable stock caused many a busy shopper to halt.

This is the first Christmas of Avansino Bros. in the business and they say that sales to date have exceeded their expectations and made a record which will set a high standard for next year.

It has developed that one of the principal objects of C. W. Ward's recent visit to San Francisco was to consult with the traffic officials of the railroads in an effort to get through the Interstate Commerce Commission a reduced rate on bulbs that will enable him to compete in all the eastern states with the imported bulbs and plants from Holland. Mr. Ward stated that he expected before long to have 25,000,000 bulbs growing on his Humboldt county nursery. He has imported from Holland to Eureka, or has arranged to ship from there, about 5,170,000 pounds of bulbs and plants, or 139 carloads. In discussing his plans with the local trade, he expressed the opinion that he could make the California bulb industry an important one if he could enter the east with satisfactory distributing rates.

No lien, either on the real estate or plants, is possible, and once planted they cannot be removed if not paid for. A committee consisting of J. G. Bacher, Julius Dossche and Guy M. Pilkington will have charge of preparing a suitable law and getting it passed by the legislature, which meets early in January.

Various Notes.

The Sellwood Greenhouses, located at 649 Nehalem avenue, were damaged by fire early on the morning of December 14. The boiler house and some of the glass was destroyed. The damage to the buildings was covered by insurance and the owner, William Grundig, will not lose anything. The chief loss was to the stock of plants by fire and subsequent chill, which was owned by C. J. Larson and Henry Pfeifer, lessees of the range. They estimate their loss at $500.

R. Keil, a well known grower, was a recent visitor. He now is located at Los Angeles, being connected with a firm that has greenhouses twenty miles out and a store in the city. He said he was well pleased with the outlook in his present location. S. W. W.

The Market.

The flower stores are bright with heavy stocks of flowers, plants, etc., for the Christmas trade. The storekeepers have pleased, hopeful faces, and everyone is busy in expectation of the best Christmas known in the trade here for years. Let us hope that their expectations may be realized. And there is every prospect that they will, for most people have more money to spend than has been the case for several years, and the florists will surely get their share.

Business has been good during the last week, although the weather has been none too favorable for shoppers. There is a good supply of the usual flowers, with the exception of orchids and valley. At this writing chrysanthemums still are fairly plentiful. Roses are in excellent quality; carnations are not so abundant as in some years. Of pot plants there is a good supply, but not too many for the Christmas requirements. Few novelties have been seen, but skimmias, which are not often seen here, are lending an attraction to one of the leading stores. There seems to be an abundance of poinsettias, cut and potted, good, bad and indifferent. A few local violets are offered at some of the enterprising stores.

Various Notes.

Carl Melby rented a store a few doors from his place on Pike street, to handle his Christmas trade.

From the number of Christmas trees on sale in every corner and vacant lot downtown, one would say that the supply is easily adequate. T. W.

SPANISH IRISES.

I have 5,000 Spanish iris bulbs and have heard that they are hard to flower in this part of the country. I should like to have your advice on their treatment. J. D. W.—Mass.

If for outdoor culture, cover the iris bulbs three or four inches deep. They are perfectly hardy and every bulb will flower unless you have wet, poorly drained land. Outdoor flowering time with you will be June 10 to 25. For indoor culture, plant the bulbs in beds or benches in a cool house, or in flats containing five inches of soil. Flats 12x24 inches will hold seventy-five to eighty bulbs. Keep the flats in a cellar or pit. Do not cover them with coal ashes, etc., as you would other bulbs, as they soon start to grow. Do not give them warm treatment at any stage of growth or many will come blind; 48 to 50 degrees at night should be the absolute maximum. There is no difficulty in growing these irises, either outdoors or indoors, but they will not stand coddling and forcing. C. W.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and General Manager, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

THE misbranding bill now before Congress, to which The Review has called attention, is to be amended so as to exempt from its provisions nursery stock of such character as is indistinguishable by its appearance.

E. S. WELCH INCORPORATES.

The Mount Arbor Nurseries, Shenandoah, Ia., has been incorporated with an authorized capital stock of $300,000, of which $200,000 was paid up and issued at the time of organization. The officers of the corporation are: President, E. S. Welch; vice-president and treasurer, E. E. May; secretary, R. M. Gwynn; superintendent, F. W. Welch; assistant superintendent, R. N. Adair.

The purpose of incorporating the Mount Arbor Nurseries is to perpetuate the business.

The business was established in 1875 and came into the hands of E. S. Welch in the spring of 1891. It has grown into one of the largest wholesale nurseries in the United States.

The rapid growth of the business has been possible partly because of the favorable conditions and soil for the growth of nursery stock, but especially because of the efficient management of the business. Since 1891 the business has been owned and managed by E. S. Welch. E. E. May, who becomes vice-president and treasurer, is a Nebraskan by birth, graduated from the State University of Nebraska, and was employed for four seasons in the sales department of D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit, previous to locating at Shenandoah. R. M. Gwynn, secretary, has been actively connected with the management of the business for the last seven years. He was formerly cashier of the Shenandoah National Bank. F. W. Welch, superin-

WILL NOT SHIP FOR AUCTIONS.

Resolution of Holland Nurserymen.

The Protective Association of Holland Nurserymen, in its meeting at Boskoop, September 12, 1916, resolved to submit for the signatures of its members a mutual agreement, in which they bind themselves not to ship any nursery stock to the United States or Canada to be sold at public auction. Anyone found breaking this agreement to pay a fine of 500 guilders.

In the meeting of October 6, 1916, the agreement was read and signed by all members present except one. The association resolved that members who will not sign this contract shall be expelled from the association.

After being presented to all members, the agreement shows the signatures of thirty-seven exporters, five members being unwilling to sign.

The contract reads, as translated:

MUTUAL AGREEMENT.

1. The undersigned (here follow the names of the thirty-seven parties), all being professional nurserymen or exporters of nursery stock, bind themselves mutually not to ship any plants, of whatsoever nature, either directly or indirectly, to the United States of America or Canada, with the intention of having the same sold at public auction. They declare that they will have broken this agreement and will be considered as having sent plants directly for sale at public auction if they should have any interest whatsoever, or should participate either directly or indirectly, in the shipment of plants to the United States of America or Canada for sale at public auction.

2. They bind themselves to forfeit the sum of 500 guilders as a fine, whenever they break this agreement, and to pay this fine to H. L. Maarschalk, notary public, at Boskoop, the said H. L. Maarschalk being hereby authorized to claim this fine in or out of court.

3. They authorize P. M. Koster and C. Grootendorst, nurserymen residing at Boskoop, or any other persons to be appointed by the parties to this contract, to publish the contents of this agreement, translated into the English language, with the names of the persons who signed it or the names of the firms under which they do business, in the trade papers of the United States and Canada, in such manner as Messrs. Koster and Grootendorst, aforementioned, shall deem to be in the interest of those concerned.

4. The fine, after being collected by H. L. Maarschalk, following a breach of contract, shall be divided by this party as follows:

One hundred guilders to be paid to the person producing evidence of the breach of this agreement (whether this person is a party to this contract or not), and 400 guilders to be divided equally among those who signed the agreement, with the exception of the one who did not live up to it.

6. This agreement takes effect on the first day of October, 1916.

Declared as agreed upon and signed this sixth day of October, nineteen hundred and sixteen, by the following members, all located at Boskoop, except where otherwise stated:

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

We are now booking orders for our new seedling Superb, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

Superb is a seedling of Gloriosa and Enchantress. It has the good stem of Gloriosa and the fine growing habit of Enchantress. The color is a flesh pink and it keeps its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches, are very full and generally receive full score on substance. The flowers are all perfect and do not split. In the four years we have grown it, it has proved the best commercial variety, barring none.

AVIATOR

If you want scarlet carnations for Christmas, grow Aviator, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

is the result of a long series of seedling crosses, beginning with Beacon and Victory. It comes with long and always strong stems early, and the bloom never appears sleepy. It is an all-season scarlet and always high-grade, never splitting the calyx and never off color. Come and see it growing.

December and early January delivery all sold.

Booking orders now for Jan. 15th and later.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

There never before was so much Christmas green sold as this year. The demand was greater than the supply and prices ruled considerably higher than ever before. Poinsettias, ardisias, begonias and other bright-berried and blooming plants found ready sale at good prices, while cut flowers were almost a luxury, because of the difficulty in securing sufficient quantities and the usual qualities. Roses, carnations and bouvardias formed the principal items; then came Easter lilies, stevias, Paper Whites, orchids and violets. Funeral work has continued heavy and the social calendar contains numerous functions that augur well for a busy period of decorative work.

Various Notes.

Samuel Resnick, with Joseph E. Koppelman & Co., is still in the Homeopathic hospital suffering from complications following a severe cold.

Mrs. M. Max has returned from a two months' business trip to San Francisco.

Lewis H. Meader, Jr., is manager of the L. H. Meader Co. establishment at 75 Westminster street.

T. J. Johnston & Co. are preparing to move in the next few days to their new store on Washington street.

Some of the finest and largest poinsettias seen in this market were produced by Thomas Curley, of Harkness street.

W. H. M.

Columbia City, Ind.—The City Gardens and the Wagoner Floral Co. have joined in establishing a flower store in the Linvill building. The two parties interested evidently decided to club together and split fifty-fifty.

Paulding, O.—Fred. Hawkins said: "Business has been the best ever here; sold out of everything, and the best of it was my carnations were fine, with the plants hanging full of flowers—the best crop I ever had for Christmas. I had no trouble getting $1.50 to $2 for carnations and $2.50 to $10 for roses. Pot plants sold on sight. All I had to do was to wash the pots clean and if the plants had a flower on them, they sold."

New Varieties

Cottage Maid: Clear shell pink, sport of Mrs. C. W. Ward, possessing the same wonderful keeping and shipping qualities.

Merry Christmas: Color, intense deep scarlet; large flower, well formed, splendid stem and calyx, splendid keeper.

Doris: Color, brilliant maroon; vigorous grower, producing a succession of high-grade blooms on long, stiff stems; good calyx.

Rosalia: A true cerise pink; splendid grower and producer; a good commercial variety in every respect.

Old Gold: Deep yellow with faint pink stripes; the earliest and freest flowering of all yellow varieties; a decided improvement over Yellow Prince.

Superb: Seedling of Gloriosa x Enchantress; good stem of Gloriosa and free habit of Enchantress. Flesh pink, holds its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches. During the past four years it has proved to be one of the best commercial varieties.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Christmas Trade.

From all indications, the business of this Christmas broke all records. The volume of business done was immense. All kinds of plants and cut flowers sold like hot cakes, from the moderate-priced to the highest-priced stock. American Beauties brought up to $14 per dozen, Russell $12, and other roses up to $5 per dozen. Red carnations made $2 per dozen and pink and white $1.50 per dozen. Some extra large azaleas sold for $10 each; Cincinnati begonias went at $3, and with baskets $5. Poinsettias, bouvardias, ferns, Paper Whites, Roman hyacinths, cherries and a large number of other plants were the more moderate-priced plants and sold out clean. The weather was severe until December 23, when it moderated. Sunday was warm, with bright sunshine, and little wrapping was needed.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons had the biggest business they ever experienced. They had a large force at work for several days before Christmas getting the plants in shape to send out. They had a good supply of all kind of plants. There were fine azaleas, some of which sold for $10, begonias, poinsettias, Paper Whites, bouvardias, cyclamens, cherries, ferns and mixed made-up pans, at all prices. The rose and carnation cuts were large—about 10,000 of each. Some orders had to be turned down. This concern pressed into service two moving vans, in addition to their delivery cars, in order to get out the orders on time.

C. L. Niednagel cut about 10,000 roses during the week. He had fine Russell roses, some with 4-foot stems. Killarney and White Killarney and other roses were good, too.

The William Blackman Floral Co. force was busy throughout the week getting ready for the rush, and December 23 George Blackman said they had too much business. The large store force handled the business well, considering the great quantity of work done. This company had large cuts of roses and carnations, but nevertheless had to buy heavily. American Beauties brought up to $14 per dozen, Russell $5 per dozen, red carnations $2 per dozen, pink and white $1.50 per dozen.

J. C. Elspermann reports the best Christmas he ever had. He had a fine cut of carnations, but even at that had to buy a large quantity to fill the orders. He had an extra fine lot of begonias, hundreds of them, and all were sold at good prices. A large assortment of other plants, including ferns, Paper Whites and cyclamens, was good and sold well.

Karl Zeidler had good cuts of roses and carnations and sold the blooms at good prices. He had a large assortment of plants, including azaleas, poinsettias, ferns, cyclamens and bulbous stock. Business was the best he ever had.

The Expanded Wood Co. reports a heavy demand for its "Crepe-Wood" products. It is about thirty days behind on orders. E. L. F.

Christmas Business Best Ever.

Despite the extremely cold weather that prevailed all of last week, the flower and plant business did not seem to suffer in the least; in fact, from what I can learn, most of the retailers think it the best Christmas ever experienced by them. Stock was never more plentiful, nor the quality better. Poinsettias and cyclamens were the leaders in pot plants, while well filled and tastefully arranged baskets sold nicely. Roses were fine and the demand for them good, with Russell and Killarney taking the lead. Carnations were good and brought good prices. Paper Whites, sweet peas, violets and stevias were in abundance. Holly, however, was scarce, and the quality poor.

Various Notes.

"In anticipation of an unusual Christmas rush, I loaded up extra heavily with stock of every description, and I am mighty glad that I did, as the quantity of stock sold far exceeded my expectations," stated Lee Larman, the Fontenelle hotel florist. He has one of the neatest stores to be found in Omaha.

Miss Reba McNamara states that she firmly believes the volume of business done at Christmas was fifty to seventy-five per cent ahead of last year's.

Hess & Swoboda had their share of big business at Christmas. Their three delivery cars were running night and day, and at that it was almost impossible to take care of their trade. L. S. H.

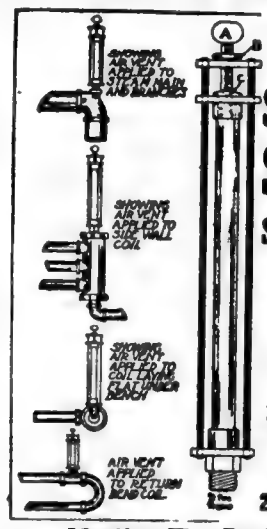
Greenhouse Heating.



SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

FOR LOW-PRESSURE STEAM.

Will you kindly tell me how my two greenhouses should be piped for low-pressure steam? The larger house, 28x125, runs north and south. The side walls are six feet high and contain three feet of concrete and three feet of glass. The North end is boarded; the south end adjoins the boiler shed. In this house I wish to maintain a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees.

Fifteen feet from the north end of the house described, and on ground about three feet higher, is the other house, which is 22x60, running east and west. It is nine feet high to the ridge. The south wall is four feet high and is all glass. The north wall is three feet high and consists of one foot of boarding above two feet of concrete. The west end is boarded; the east end is all glass. I want a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees in this house, in zero weather. I have nearly enough 2-inch pipe for the returns. I also have some 2½-inch pipe and valves which I wish to use in the flows. E. F. C.—Pa.

For heating a greenhouse 28x125, with three feet of glass in the side walls, to 55 degrees in zero weather, we would run a 2½-inch flow about three feet below the ridge and connect it at the farther end of the house with eight 2-inch returns. All of these may be on the walls, or four of the returns may be distributed under the benches. We would prefer, however, to use twelve 1¼-inch pipes as returns.

For the house 22x60, with four feet of glass in one wall, to be heated to 65 degrees, we would also use eight 2-inch or twelve 1¼-inch returns, and either a 2½-inch or a 2-inch flow pipe. Since there is no glass in the north wall, we would use one less return on that side. The main returns in each house should be 2-inch.

Automatic air valves will be required near the lower end of each coil, and there should be gate valves at both ends of one-half of the returns, as well as on the main flow and return pipes.

CANNOT GET ENOUGH HEAT.

I am writing you for information concerning the heating of my greenhouses, which are already piped for hot water. The boiler is a Williamson underfeed, 34 O. W. We are trying to heat two houses, 32x90 and 21x60. They are piped for 1,800 feet of radiation. The pipe in the coils is 1½-inch. There are two 3-inch outlet pipes for the larger house; these are reduced to 2½-inch and 2-inch where they empty into the coils. The coils consist of eight pipes on each side of the house, made up in two sections, and eight pipes under the center bench. Two 2-inch main returns run to the basement and enter a 3-inch pipe just outside the boiler. The outlet and inlet of the boiler are made for 5-inch pipes, but the steamfitter reduced the size to 3-inch. The highest point of the feed pipes is about ten feet above the floor of the basement.

The draft is good. The chimney, which is of brick and twenty-five feet high, gets so hot that it was necessary to wrap it with asbestos to protect the floor and roof at the outlet. Yet we cannot get sufficient heat for the two houses. The greatest heat indicated by the thermometer on the boiler is 160 degrees, with full draft, and as soon as the draft is closed the heat falls rapidly. What is the trouble? Is the boiler too small, or is the piping improperly arranged? Should the feed and return pipes be larger? We have 5,700 square feet of glass. The walls are of concrete and are nine inches by two and one-half feet. I am enclosing a rough sketch of the heating system. W. H.—Utah.

As we understand the inquiry, the total amount of glass in both houses is 5,700 square feet and the combined radiation in the two houses is 1,800 square feet. This, if properly installed, should furnish a temperature of approximately 60 degrees in zero weather.

We infer that the description of the heating pipes relates to the larger house only, and, as we understand it, there are two 3-inch flow pipes, with a coil of eight 1½-inch returns on each wall and a third coil of eight pipes under the center bench. It would appear from the description, and also from the sketch, that the wall coils are in two sections, each about forty-two feet in length, and each of these sections is fed by a 2-inch pipe taken off from the main flow pipe. The middle coil of eight pipes appears to run the entire length of the house, and the connecting flow and return pipes are 2-inch, as are also the returns which connect the two coils upon each wall with the boiler. A 2-inch pipe will answer for the flow or the return of a coil of eight pipes forty-five feet long, but when the coils are ninety feet long, and in fact whenever they contain over 200 square feet of radiation, the connecting flow and return pipes should be 2½-inch, unless the coils are fifteen feet or more above the boiler.

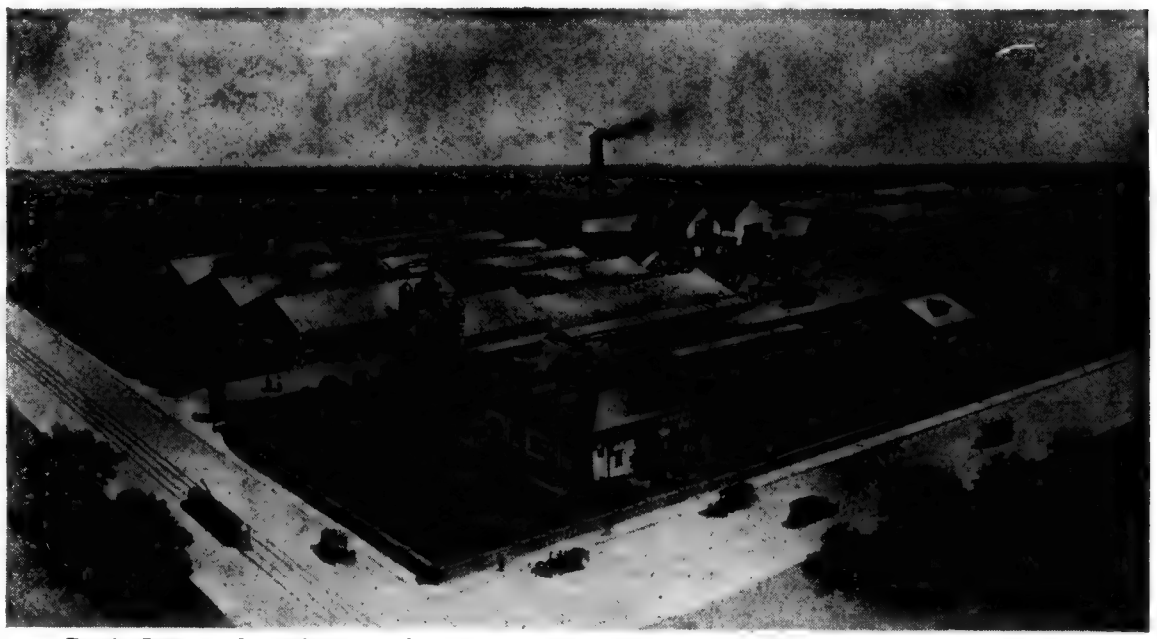
Instead of using 1½-inch pipes for the coils, we would prefer to run a coil of six 2-inch pipes on each wall and a similar coil under the middle bench, supplying each coil by means of a 2½-inch flow pipe. One flow should be upon each plate and the other three feet below the ridge.

If there are two 3-inch main flows in the house 32x90, we would think the only change needed so far as the piping is concerned is to use 2½-inch connecting flows and returns wherever there are over 200 square feet of radiation in the coils.

We are not familiar with the ratings of the Williamson boilers, but if it is not possible to heat the water in the boiler above 160 degrees, and if this temperature drops quickly when the drafts are closed, it would seem that the boiler is too small for the radiation. Whenever there is a poor circulation in the coils, the water in the heater will boil and often partly empty the system.



If we have the correct idea of the arrangement of the coils, the amount of radiation is ample for 60 degrees, and, while larger connecting pipes for the flows and returns would be desirable, we are of the opinion that the main trouble is in the boiler, and from the statements made it appears to be too small to heat the two houses. While a good deal depends upon the area and arrangement of the fire surface, we would consider that to handle 1,800 square feet of radiation the boiler should have a grate thirty inches in diameter.

COAL-TAR PAINT ON PIPING.

I am applying to you for help in trouble. I bought some paint for the hot water pipes in my greenhouse. In buying it I stated plainly the purpose for which I wanted it. I used a part of it, but when I fired up I found that it contained creosote. The fumes from the paint ruined almost everything in the house. The lettuce was killed and all the leaves fell from the begonias. I opened all the ventilators and fired the boiler till it was as hot as possible. I also scraped and sandpapered the pipes, but still, when I fire heavily, the odor is strong. The paint almost put me out of business. Is there any remedy? Could I paint the pipes with something that would counteract the effect of the creosote, or must I just keep on firing?

M. E.—Ind.

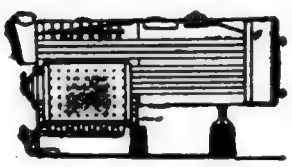
I have had no experience with "creosote" upon heating pipes, but from what I have seen of the use of coal tar in various forms I know that when applied to the pipes or to wall or bench lumber, it will practically prevent the growing of plants in a greenhouse.

Rock Garden Greenhouses, August von Boeselager, Proprietor, Mt. Clemens, Mich.

"All four are working fine"

Mr. von Boeselager has had a lot of experience with the "Detroit" Systems. He writes as follows:

"At the present time I have four of your traps in use. For a while I had some trouble with two of the traps, but since you sent your man around, who advised me to change the piping to and from the traps, as they were not put in right, I have had no trouble. All four are working fine now. I like the way you came up to adjust my trouble and I wish to thank you."



Very likely a "Detroit" System would solve your condensation difficulties. It's worth while investigating. Let us send you "Watch Your Condensation"—Book No. 5A.

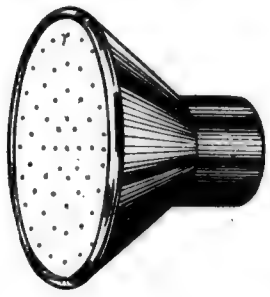
When applied to the woodwork, neither time nor the use of surface applications is likely to correct the difficulty.

The only way of which I am aware, for correcting the trouble from the use of coal-tar preparations on the pipes, is to burn off the paint. Heating the pipes with steam under pressure will help in removing the creosote, but a long time will be required and then the process will not be complete. If the entire surface of the pipes can be reached with a gasoline torch, the paint can be removed cheaply and effectually. Otherwise the pipes should be taken out and passed through the flames of a bonfire.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

John and Robert Espy, of Brookville, Pa., were out in the big woods to get a shot at a deer.



When I called at the Red Rock Rosery, Bradford, Pa., there was a good display of Christmas plants. The season had been so successful that a banner holiday trade was expected.

Good azaleas were to be seen at the store of G. Lawrence Graham, at Bradford. There was a great scarcity of these plants, especially the ones in a salable condition.

The advertising merits of the electric fountain were expounded by M. M. Dye, of Salamanca, N. Y. There is hardly a person, he says, who does not stop to watch it. There seems to be an irresistible attraction in anything that moves.

A. H. Sharman, of Warren, Pa., had his baskets of artificial goods ready early, so that when the early shopper went forth she found Mr. Sharman ready for her with a good display of goods.

A PROMINENT CARNATION GROWER SAYS THIS ABOUT THE STANDARD RECORDING THERMOMETER

$25.00

Lancaster, Pa.
Standard Thermometer Co., Boston, Mass.
Gentlemen: Please send me 25 record plates like the enclosed sample, and I want to say that the machine, bought a good many years back, is keeping up its good work right along. I think it a very useful adjunct to good plant growing, and it should be in every greenhouse, as reference to it may often tell what is wrong with a batch of plants. Very truly yours,
ALBERT M. HERR.

The actuating element of the Standard Recording Thermometer is of lamina metal, which, besides being extremely sensitive to temperature changes, is practically indestructible. Record charts are furnished either daily or weekly, and the whole mechanism is contained in an attractive metal case fitted with lock and key, which insures the record from being tampered with.

The clock movement is of extremely high grade; everything about the instrument is up to the highest possible standard of manufacture.

S. Offerle, of Warren, reports a good business since his beginning some months ago. A good crop of carnations was coming on and the plants were fine.

Victor Offerle, also of Warren, has let contracts for a new greenhouse, which is to go up in the spring, and is to be devoted to roses. W. T. U.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Holiday Market.

The florists of Washington have completed the most successful holiday business in trade history—Christmas, 1916, has proved to be a record-breaker. Everything sold well, with red flowers in all varieties leading. Prices generally were good and roses ranged from $8 to $30 per hundred, and twice the latter price was paid for a few exceptionally fine Mock and Radiance roses.

The notable feature of the business was the marked scarcity of holly. The market has always been flooded with holly and Christmas greens, but this year proved an exception. Crowfoot wreathing was much in demand at from 5 to 8 cents. Christmas trees were high-priced and not overplentiful.

Carnations cleaned up well at from $8 to $15 per hundred, and there were just about enough sweet peas to go around at $3 per hundred. Violets were plentiful at $1.50 per hundred, but the demand was slow. Mignonette now is quite good and there is a fair sale for this flower for table decorations. Narcissi are more plentiful and in fair demand. Easter lilies have been selling better since the passing of chrysanthemums.

There was an exceptionally heavy demand for potted plants. The sale of poinsettias was good. Other ready sellers were the potted yellow daisies of the New England type, which brought from 50 cents to $3 each. Azaleas were scarce, although one house managed to bring in about 1,000 plants at the last moment. It is said that the cyclamens and begonias were as fine as have ever been seen here.

Various Notes.

Adolph Gude, of the Gude Bros. Co., who looks after the greenhouse end of the business, struck the holidays just right by bringing in something like 12,000 Richmond roses, of as good a quality as one could desire. This enabled his firm, when other roses were running short, to supply these on all orders for mixed roses when the orders were for from $3 to $10.

The Washington Floral Co. is trying out Anemone coronaria and Ranunculus Turban. Mr. Loose states that apparently these are not good for forcing, as fully seventy-five per cent rotted before bearing. The remainder are fair and he has commenced cutting. The Washington public does not go strong on novelties.

John H. Small, Jr., and William F. Gude have been selected by Chairman Robert Harper for several places on the various inaugural committees. These two florists will play a prominent part in the ceremonies incident to inducting the President into office March 4.

The Holiday Business.

Christmas business in general was good. A snow storm early Sunday put a damper on business for a while, but, withal, the day was good. The conditions this year were peculiar. As Christmas came on Monday, it was hard to figure out the working probabilities.

Roses were scarce, especially Russell and red roses. The quality was fine and some exceptionally fancy stock was sold. Violets were scarce and order after order was turned down; consequently the price remained firm. The stock was good and the sales were satisfactory. Orchids sold well and brought $12 per dozen straight. The supply was large enough to meet the demand, but there was a clean-up on this stock.

There were practically no sweet peas in the market and the demand was not satisfied to any appreciable degree.

The carnation situation was quite different from that of last year. The supply was larger and prices were not so high. Last year was an exceptional one and the clean-up was much better. However, there was not much stock held over this year and the sales were satisfactory, although prices were somewhat lower than last year's. There was a limited quantity of cut poinsettias in the market, and these moved well. Plants were unobtainable during the last week and were scarce even the previous week. There was a large quantity of shipments sent out, but the extremely cold weather froze so many shipments that the out-of-town retailers were sadly put to it to fill their orders on stock they had ordered and had every reason to expect. Taken as a whole, the Christmas season was good, despite the fact that the weather was so cold that it was exceedingly hard to make satisfactory deliveries.

Various Notes.

The retailers report a fine Christmas trade and to enumerate each case would be a repetition all along the line.

William Leverenz, of the Eleventh Avenue Flower Store, was unfortunate in that he was not able to participate in Christmas festivities. He was taken ill suddenly and Sunday, December 17, was taken to the Milwaukee hospital, where he underwent an operation below his ear. On the following Wednesday, while delirious, Mr. Leverenz eluded his nurse and escaped from the hospital. Clad only in his night clothes, he ran about four blocks in the snow before he was returned to the hospital. His condition at the present time is serious. His friends in the trade wish him a complete recovery in the shortest possible time.

We learn, unofficially, that Roy Currie, of the Currie Bros. Co., and Miss Irina Jens, formerly with the Holton & Hunkel Co., are going to be married January 11. H. J. S.

Great Bend, Kan.—Mrs. E. L. Seller, a newcomer to the business, says she intends to establish a greenhouse here.

The Christmas Business.

As far as can be seen, the Christmas trade was in every way up to its usual high standard. Commencing December 19, business began to be unusually brisk, and a good, steady business continued until the great rush of December 22 and 23. The worst snow storm of the winter came December 22 and made deliveries almost impossible. Train service was greatly retarded and the heavy consignments from eastern points did not arrive until a late hour December 23. However, things straightened out by the next morning and a good, brisk business continued throughout Saturday. A large display of potted plants was seen in each flower store and the supply of cut flowers was large. Christmas baskets were offered in large numbers. The demand for the smaller baskets of boxwoods, with artificial flowers, was heavy.

Some Beauties in the better grades were in the market and a varied supply of other red roses cleared easily. Red carnations were of good quality and sold well. Sunburst, Ophelia, Ward and My Maryland also were in good supply and sold at greatly advanced prices. Pink Delight and White Wonder carnations were especially fine and sold readily. Violets moved well at $1.50 per hundred; fancy cypripediums cleared easily. Valley was plentiful, but the demand was not large. Sweet peas of the Spencer varieties were fine and sold well, but the supply was not large. Paper Whites and yellow narcissi were plentiful and sold satisfactorily. Lilies were plentiful and helped out considerably in a large quantity of funeral work. Nearly all Christmas greens were sold out by the night of December 22.

Greenhouse Building.

Although the cost of building materials has been exceptionally high, a report of the year's business by the local office of the Lord & Burnham Co. shows that building operations have been considerably better than average.

Among recent orders from commercial growers for new houses were those of David J. Scott, of Corfu, N. Y.; James J. Kelsey, of Rome, N. Y.; E. H. Bentley, of Wellsville, N. Y.; Hudson & Co., of Holley, N. Y., and W. T. Shields & Son, of Altoona, Pa. Edward Brockmann and Charles W. Curtis, of Irondequoit, N. Y., installed new boilers. The city of Rochester and Cornell University have ordered new houses, the contracts calling for complete erection, in the spring.

The present outlook for 1917 business is bright, notwithstanding the advance in the cost of greenhouse materials during the last year and the anticipated further advance.

Various Notes.

W. A. Elder, of the Lord & Burnham Co., is spending the holidays with his parents at their home at Irvington-on-Hudson.

An elaborate decoration was made at the Genesee Valley Club Friday, December 22, for a debutante affair. A large number of orders were received by florists from other cities.

George Cramer has been helping out at the East Main street store of Salter Bros. for the holidays.

Harry Merritt, of Irondequoit, made large cuttings of Pink Delight and Alice for the holidays. His stock is fine and the plants are in fine condition, with stems over three feet long.

H. E. Wilson just about cleared his poinsettias, which were exceptionally fine this season. He has a fine batch of Dutch bulbous plants almost in bloom.

Purcell's are cutting some fine Ophelia roses and the demand for them is good. The flowers have good, strong stems.

PLANT TUBS

EVERLASTING VIRGINIA WHITE CEDAR

EVERYBODY agrees that Plant Tubs made of everlasting Virginia White Cedar will best resist rot or decay. The "Keystone" brand of White Cedar Plant Tubs are made of this celebrated wood, and these goods are painted inside and out with best oil paints, a rich green.

They are bound with heavy steel hoops for the large size, and electric-welded wire hoops (galvanized) on the small size. The large sizes are trimmed with handsome drop handles and metal feet, and have perforated, removable bottoms.

These Cedar Tubs are made in all sizes, from 24¼ inches top diameter down to 6 inches, amply large for a Bay Tree and small enough for a Hyacinth. Every one guaranteed. Booklet in colors, with prices, furnished upon request.

The Market.

Stock for Christmas was not overplentiful. Carnations were of good quality, but rather scarce, and brought from $6 to $8 per hundred; and the indications are that they will remain at these prices through the holiday week. Cut poinsettias were not abundant, but experienced a ready sale at high prices. Roses were more plentiful, the red ones, of course, leading in popularity. Shorts sold as low as $5, but large, fine stock brought up to $35. Bulbous stock was extremely scarce, limited to Roman hyacinths and narcissi.

The smaller flowers met with a big demand. Sweet peas were especially popular and brought $1 and $1.50 per hundred, with the supply limited. Violets also were in high favor.

An unusually fine and large supply of pot plants enjoyed a ready sale, poinsettias and cyclamens being the leaders in popularity. Fancy, mixed pots, filled baskets and hampers were sought as gifts.

From first appearances, it seemed that the evergreen supply would be short, but later shipments glutted the market, leaving a great surplus on the retailers' hands. The prices on holly and greens, however, held up well.

Various Notes.

The florists were well satisfied with their Christmas business. The quantity of sales was satisfactory, the only disturbance being the tie-up of shipments. On account of the heavy Christmas express, out-of-town shipments were from eight to twenty-four hours late, and caused much anxiety to the local tradesmen. Smith & Young lost a large shipment of ferns, its non-appearance placing them in a predicament.

Walter Berkhoff, recently with E. A. Nelson, now is with the A. Wiegand's Sons Co.

The store belonging to R. D. Oilar, which has been known as the Benson-Oilar Flower Store, now is called Oilar's Flower Shop. Miss Melford, recently with the Circle Flower Store, is again with Oilar's.

The Tomlinson Hall Flower Market had an unusually good Christmas business December 23. A great number of plants as well as cut flowers were moved.

The next meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association will be held at the Claypool hotel January 9. The meeting in the morning, 10 o'clock, is for those interested in the coming carnation show. The regular meeting will begin at 2 o'clock. E. E. T.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Most of the local florists did a good Christmas business, notwithstanding the fact that the holiday followed a Sunday. Flowers and plants came in plentifully for Christmas trade and, as a general thing, the prices were about normal. About the only flowers that were really scarce and unduly high were ardisias, the prices for which averaged nearly twice what they were a year ago.

Azaleas were a little late in coming to the local market, but there was a good supply for several days before Christmas. The plants looked pretty, but were not up to the usual grade as far as lasting qualities were concerned. The stock was late in arriving in this country and therefore had to be forced; consequently there was a tendency for the buds to fall off. Poinsettias were of good quality and sold for about 50 cents per bloom. There was a plentiful supply of potted begonias, Cincinnati and the new Peterson Velvetina being the favorite varieties. Cyclamens of many varieties and of excellent quality were in the market. Primroses are beginning to arrive in good quantities. A number of potted orange plants were seen. Scotch heather semed more plentiful than in some other years and was used a great deal in window displays. Ferns have sold well of late. There has also been some demand for palms. There continues to be a considerable amount of funeral work and there are occasional weddings.

Various Notes.

Philips Bros. report that counter trade in cut flowers is a little slow, most of the demand at present being for seasonable plants.

Painted Japanese flower boxes and miniature Japanese gardens were featured in the window display of A. Begerow last week.

John W. Blakeley, of Elizabeth, hired an extra store for the Christmas trade.

Johnson's annual Christmas store was located this year at 50 Broad street, Elizabeth. R. B. M.

Now, however, Mr. McDonald says he may as well add "Dahlias, Gladioli and Peonies," for each year he has had success in growing these three items for the local trade.

PELARGONIUMS.

PELARGONIUMS.

Remember we are the real distributors of Easter Greeting; the first one to advertise it,—now look at 'em. Wide awake florists know a good thing when they see it. Some are a little slow at first, but that isn't to be wondered at when one considers the "new frauds." But listen! Get in the swim for 1917. We have over 25,000 coming for November and December sales and hope to have 50,000 coming a little later, $7.50 per 100. We are making them by special machinery and the war hasn't changed the price. Our guarantee covers everything.
S. C. TEMPLIN,
GARRETTSVILLE, OHIO

Pelargoniums. Grow those Easter Greetings and her sports; grow a 35c plant where you now grow a 10c one or a 7c rooted cutting where you now get a 1c one. By sending me $1.00 I will send you my recipe for white fly that will keep your plants clean. It is a very cheap spray for white fly, red spider and cyclamen mite.
Chas. A. Bower, 724 Haynes St., Dayton, O.

WOOD LABELS.

LABELS FOR NURSERYMEN AND FLORISTS.
Benjamin Chase Co., Derry Village, N. H.

Reading, Pa.—A brief business session of the Reading Florists' Association recently was held at the residence of D. P. Guldin. J. Stanley Giles presided. Reports of the fall flower show were offered and showed that the event was a financial success. Another exhibition, on a larger scale, will be made next year.

Lincoln, Ill.—Gullett & Sons say: "Our Christmas business was extremely large and, barring the serious trouble caused by the poor condition of azaleas, it was entirely satisfactory. We wish something might be said in this week's issue to soften down the feelings of buyers of azaleas, some of whom did not show proper consideration of the wholesalers' efforts to fill orders. It is discouraging."

ADVANCE CO., RICHMOND, IND.

"AND DEPONENT SAITH FURTHER, AS FOLLOWS:"

Out of a great mass of testimonials in support of the excellent character of Cypress for greenhouse construction, we have singled these few for your consideration:

Arthur Cowee, Gladiolus Specialist, proprietor of "Meadowvale Farm," Berlin, N. Y., writes: "My houses are now ten years old and I have not yet been obliged to spend one dollar in repairing any woodwork, with the exception of some of the posts. My only regret has been that I have not used CYPRESS for the benches, which I think would have been cheaper for me in the end than using hemlock, which, of course, with us is very much cheaper per thousand."

That's the point—CYPRESS literally CHEAPER in the end. Mr. Cowee names the proper system—FIGURE THE COST BY THE YEAR.

John C. Moninger Co., Greenhouse Builders, Chicago, say: "We first began using CYPRESS exclusively for greenhouse construction in 1885, using it previous to that time in conjunction with pine. The greenhouses built with clear CYPRESS, free of sap, 21 YEARS AGO, are being used today by their owners, and the wood is found perfectly preserved and free of any decay or rot." Ask this prominent concern about the "cheaper" substitutes, and why they won't use them nor attempt to dump inferior values onto their customers.

The Dingee & Conard Co., Rose Growers, West Grove, Pa., say: "We have used CYPRESS lumber for greenhouse building for many years, and we find that there is no lumber we can secure so satisfactory for that purpose." Nothing in that about a "cheaper substitute," is there?

Bobbink & Atkins, Importers, Nurserymen and Florists, Rutherford, N. J., are not backward in coming forward: "We would say that CYPRESS lasts with us from two to three years longer than any other wood for table purposes, and ITS LIFE SEEMS TO BE ENDLESS WHEN USED IN ORDINARY GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION. We use CYPRESS solely in our plant tub department."

Wagner Park Conservatories, Sidney, Ohio, rise to remark: "We use NOTHING BUT CYPRESS in the construction of our greenhouses, as we find it the most economical, on account of it outlasting other kinds of wood." No comfort there for the "substitute" lumbers.

Bassett & Washburn, Growers and Wholesale Dealers in Cut Flowers, Chicago, testify:

"We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock lasted only about four years, while so far, we have had no 'Pecky' CYPRESS rot out in 10 or 12 years. We use clear CYPRESS for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose." Not bad, is it?

"'PECKY' CYPRESS FOR THE BENCHES—NOTHING BUT!"

Draw freely on our Cypress Pocket Library—they are free. Vol. 3, "The Only Greenhouse Wood"; Vol. 22, "Cypress for Silos and Tanks," and Vol. 28, "Cypress for All Trellises and Arbors." Write for what you need, or hope to need, or ought to need.

It's Your next move—

—YOU can have the most practical and durable benches in the world if you want them

Whether we build with 2x4 stringers and bottom laid crosswise, as in our type No. 101, or with 2x4 stringers and crosspieces with bottom laid lengthwise, as in our type No. 100, we always use common cypress

You wouldn't think of building a house with a wood foundation these days, would you? Of course not. You want the best—you simply must have it. That's the spirit of the age. And that's why you'll insist on concrete bench posts next time. They're better. And the benches, too. You're too shrewd and wide-awake to let anyone sell you a lot of holes sawed to measure for bench lumber. Insist on sound, air-dried common cypress for your benches. You won't use any other kind—we don't sell any other kind. For show houses and palm houses we make pipe frame benches and other styles.

Remember, it's your next move! Make it today!

ALL STEEL SAFE AND SURE

GREENHOUSES

Furnished by us for Stephen Hyde, Carthage, Mo.

THIS greenhouse is one finished this past summer and is 84 feet wide and 500 feet long. There are but two inside supports across the entire house. Lengthwise the posts are set 16 ft. 8¼ in. center to center. This means also that the steel arches are set 16 ft. 8¼ in. apart. You can judge for yourself as to the roominess and lightness of this house.

You will admit that it is easy work to drive around inside with your wagons and plows. Then look closely at the picture; notice the size of the various steel members. Strength and weight where needed, and only where needed, and not a lot of heavy, flat steelwork, strong one way and weak in another. We figure these things out to a hair. No guesswork.

We can prove it. Write for our Proof Book—it's free.

EVERYTHING FOR THE GREENHOUSE

IF A CHALLENGE CAN'T DO IT IT CAN'T BE DONE!

If the EVANS CHALLENGE of today can't satisfactorily solve your ventilating problem, it is absolutely impossible of solution, for the CHALLENGE is constantly doing work that has been called impossible by other manufacturers. Put your problems before the Evans Co., let them study your needs from every angle, and they will tell you which machine you need and the way it should be installed. Ask them today.

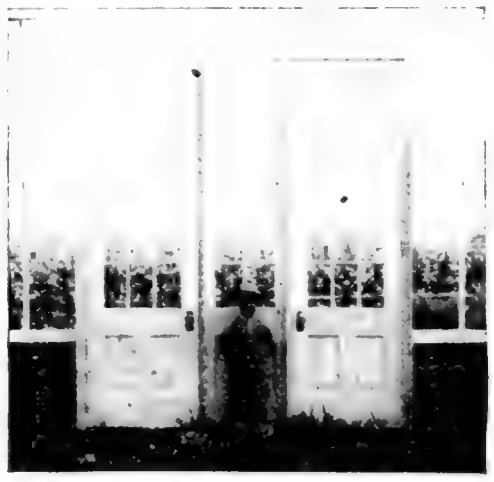
INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS—PAGES TWO AND THREE

The sash closes against a steel angle sill, not on top of a wooden one. It swings up tight to the T-Bar division piece, between ends of the sash.

Note that the galvanized drip gutter is separate from the eave, not part of it. It's been tried both ways, and we have proven that this way is the best way.



Here is the first really successful counterbalanced gear. Runs up as easy as it runs down.

Some Construction Odds and Ends Worth Knowing About

TAKE our handling of the side ventilating sash on the Iron Frame house. Instead of closing it down on top of a wooden sill, that in spite of anything you can do will swell, causing the sash to stick, we close it against the edge of an angle iron. No swelling, no freezing, no sagging makes any difference with its easy working. Always it opens and closes without sticking.

Then another thing, instead of using a cypress piece between the runs of sash, we use a T-Bar against which the sash fit on either side of the metal division.

Now take the post. It is guaranteed Wrought Iron secured to the steel rafters by double gusset plates. The galvanized angle iron eave plate is equipped with a U-shaped drip gutter. Being independent of the eave itself, the clogging objection of a combined eave and drip gutter is overcome. Like the eave plate, the drip gut-you and point out, point by point, the superior points in our construction, you would be surprised to find in how many important ways it differs so differently from other constructions.

The center door lifts out. The doors on both sides are hinged to the side posts, which fit against the gable rafters.

Differences that many times over make up any differences in cost.

When you make up your mind you want a house of Everlasting Lastingness, then let's get together and talk things over.

ASTER PINK ENCHANTRESS

Upright in habit, as distinguished from the Branching form. The plant is very vigorous, and produces long, strong stems for the support of numerous large exhibition blooms. The flower is always full double; petals are of medium length and very broad; those toward the center fold in very regularly, while gradually, toward the outer edge, the petals stand out more and more until those on the outside recede from the center, thus increasing the diameter of the flower, which compares very favorably in size with the largest-flowering kinds on our farm. Color similar to that of the Enchantress carnation; flowers late. Pkt., 15c; ⅛ oz., 50c; ¼ oz., $1.00; oz., $3.00.

BEGONIA

As bedding plants, the florist has come to recognize these as most satisfactory.

JANUARY SUGGESTIONS EVERYTHING FOR THE FLORIST

MAGNOLIA FACTS

¶Yes, Mr. Florist, be particular as to what kind of Magnolia Leaves you buy now, under the present conditions.

¶Dye colors have advanced from 1000% to 2000%; preparing chemicals have exactly doubled in prices since the war began, as have also the paper cartons. In spite of this, we are in position to furnish you with first-class Magnolia Leaves through your wholesaler at a small advance in comparison with the above.

¶We guarantee that the quality of our leaves is as good now as they were before the war, and that they are prepared fully, regardless of the above-stated high prices of the materials.

¶You fool yourself if you buy the cheaper grade of leaves, as they will become mildewed and they will dry out shortly after the boxes are opened. Our goods are sold by every leading wholesale florist in the United States and Canada, and they have stood the test for the past six years.

¶A magnolia leaf is only worth using if it has been fully preserved, but NOT by a cheap process, which enables others to sell the leaves cheaper by a few cents. You pay these few cents about ten or fifteen times over, when you consider the poor value of these goods.

"KEYSTONE QUALITY" FLORISTS' SUPPLIES

1220-22-24 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Our Ribbons the Choice of Metropolitan Florists

The writer of this advertisement took the opportunity to visit the leading New York Florists during the Holiday Season to determine the uses to which our fabrics are put.

He was delighted at the lavish displays made. Enormous quantities of plants were seen trimmed with the latest creations of this house.

The writer also while making his rounds secured two applications from prominents retailers for membership in the "Florists' Telegraph Delivery." We desire at this time to suggest to all manufacturers and wholesalers the advisability, for the best interests of the trade, of urging their customers to join the F. T. D.

As usual, at your service.

SPRING FLOWERS AMID THE SNOWS

The man who makes the most money out of flowers is the man who leads the seasons. The quantity sales come later, but they come as surely to the florist who set the pace as to the one who waited for the bargain offer of an overstocked wholesaler.

AS the days begin to lengthen and the cold begins to strengthen, when his polar breath old Boreas blows and Earth is mantled with January's snows—then the progressive florist makes a feature of the flowers of spring, for they hold a peculiar appeal while the contrast with the outdoors is so strong. Not only do the flower buyers welcome the first flowers of spring, but, buying them with avidity, they pay twice the price we shall consider profitable when the vernal season draws near.

The flowers of spring are, first of all, those that are produced from bulbs, the jonquil, the daffodil, the tulip and the hyacinth, but there are many others. Although it has become an almost all-the-year-around flower, the sweet pea deserves to be classed as one of the leading flowers of spring. Certain it is there is nothing more profitably salable in a first-class flower store. There is a record of long-stemmed Spencer sweet peas at $4 per hundred, wholesale, at Christmas!

Some of Them.

Then there are pansies, Paper Whites, French Romans, valley, daisies, mignonette, bouvardia, violets, calendula, snapdragon, lilac and many other forced flowers sufficiently springlike to afford relief from the lack of variety which has prevailed since the mums passed out — the roses and carnations are fine, but the regular buyers will welcome a change.

And don't forget the pussy-willow; as a "flower" it might be considered as almost emblematic of spring. It goes in every basket of flowers, in every decorated plant.

There is no method more effective, amid January's snows, than boosting business by a display of spring flowers. Put them in the window; show them in the store.

How to Show Spring Flowers.

One of the most successful of Chicago retail stores has two display refrigerators, one on each side of the room. The box at the right is used for Beauties, roses and a few carnations; the one at the left has shelves for the smaller flowers, today the flowers of spring. Watching the trend of trade, the manager noted that with the passing of the holidays customers in steadily increasing number turned from the display of roses to the one of sweet peas, jonquils and the blooms associated with the awakening of Nature after winter.

Right there he conceived an idea, small in itself but which has produced many hundreds of dollars of profits. He banished the storage vases to the stock box downstairs and in the display case installed a variety of baskets of spring flowers arranged in his best style, with two or three corsage bouquets. It increased the sales wonderfully.

It may be that a florist, with his fifty jonquils set as deeply as they will go in an inartistic storage vase, sees instead the flowers as they will look when gracefully arranged with others in a beautiful basket. But the customer does not possess equal powers of vision—he sees only what is before him, not the possibilities that lie in it.

Therein lies the reason for the increase of sales as soon as the florist stored his stock out of sight and used his refrigerator for the display of baskets and bouquets ready for use.

Not that he figured on the sale of the actual articles on display. Frequently a customer would insist on having the basket or bouquet out of the case, not wishing to wait for a fresh one to be made up, but the idea was to show the article as it would be delivered instead of merely showing the materials with which the florist works, as most of us do.

THE FLOWERS THAT BLOOM IN THE SPRING HAVE MUCH TO DO WITH THIS CASE

Accessories.

With the flowers of spring use the accessories of springlike form and coloring. There is an infinite variety of baskets appropriate to the season. Choose those of light and graceful shape and harmonious coloring. Ribbons or ties add greatly to the finish of the arrangement and the addition of natural or silken butterflies, humming-birds and other novelties improves the work more than they increase the cost.

The arrangement shown on this page as a typical basket of spring flowers is one exhibited last season at the flower show at the University of Illinois and represents the work of a student in Prof. Dorner's department.

There is three months of fine business ahead of the man who starts the sale of spring flowers now. It is business which will not interfere with the sales of roses or carnations, but which, instead, will increase them by adding variety to the stock. But it should be borne in mind that there will be a change in the sales of spring flowers as the season progresses. In January, good prices are to be had, for the supply is comparatively small; but as bulbous flowers become abundant, prices will fall —then the money is to be made on quantity sales. Today good prices are obtainable for the asking and they will make for livelier selling later, when a special sale can be put on—a tumbler basket containing a dozen jonquils or a bunch of sweet peas for half a dollar.

There will be more spring flowers than ever this season, especially bulbous stock and sweet peas. A large part of the bench space used for mums has gone into sweet peas and the pick is just beginning, while the imports of bulbs, far exceeding the records of any other year, speak for great quantities of bulbous flowers as spring approaches.

SHARING THE PROFITS

DIVIDING THE INCREASE.

Better Than a Christmas Gift.

Since the adoption of profit-sharing plans by big business all over the country, the idea has been taken up in at least one florist's establishment. By profit sharing is not meant the issuing of coupons to customers, but the division of a percentage of the profits to the people who make profits possible—to the employees who make up the organization.

Alpha Elberfield, proprietor of the Alpha Floral Co., Kansas City, Mo., is the first florist who is known to have employed the idea in his business. Mr. Elberfield declares that the reason for its adoption was the fact that every year at Christmas time the proprietor of nearly every store makes the members of his organization a gift. So Mr. Elberfield set to work to devise some method by which this could be done so that the gift would represent something more than the mere passing of some article or cash from the hand of the owner to those of his salespeople. He was not endeavoring to avoid giving, but he was trying to find some manner in which the gift would be invested with a significance.

Making a Start.

A little more than a year ago Mr. Elberfield called a meeting of his employees and outlined his plans to them. The company would no longer pursue the common practice of other establishments and other businesses. The Christmas present idea would be banished entirely. Henceforth the company would figure the percentage of increase of profits each month and a percentage of this increase would then be divided among the employees according to the station of their employment. The system began with the porter and ended with the manager. The percentage of profits distributed to each was from one and one-half per cent to fifteen per cent of the increase each month.

Mr. Elberfield endeavors to encourage thrift among his employees and he therefore, after the first month, opened an account at a bank for them, in which their percentage was deposited at the end of each month. In speaking of this banking business Mr. Elberfield recently said: "Ninety-five per cent of the accounts that I have started for my employees have never had a withdrawal made on them."

Perfects the Organization.

"The sales help, the designers, errand boys, porters, stenographers and all began to take a great deal more interest in the business," said Mr. Elberfield. "It was to their advantage and to mine that they should increase the profit month after month. Now, here is an interesting feature, for some might conceive the idea that the Christmas gift proposition had been defeated and a saving effected, but it does not work that way. If I had pursued two years ago the old custom of giving Christmas presents to my employees they would of course have been in cash and they would have represented an extremely small percentage of a yearly profit. Therefore, you can easily see that where an employee formerly received a five-dollar goldpiece for a Christmas present he now receives annually several times that amount. But he should receive it; he has a right to it, for he made it possible for me to pay it by earning it for me.

"This profit-sharing business has perfected my organization until now the percentage of increase each month over the same month of the previous year has averaged something like fourteen per cent during 1916. Although the year perhaps would have brought an increase in profit without the salespeople and organization displaying an increased interest, it is a question worthy of note whether or not the increase would have been as high as it was.

"Naturally, the prosperous condition of the country during the year would have brought us an increase, as it did to nearly every florist's establishment. Newspaper advertising helped the business much more than ever before, but I have traced the greater part of the increase to the stronger organization and the greater interest that organization has taken in the business. Beginning in September, the greatest impulse for increased profits was felt and it has continued to rise ever since.

Some of the Handicaps.

"Some conditions of the business have erected obstacles against increasing profits, such as, for example, the coal situation in this city and territory. There has been a great deal of suffering on the part of the greenhouse men in this regard. Those who wished to renew contracts for a year's supply of coal found the price greatly increased and in many cases operators and wholesalers positively refused to undertake new contract obligations to furnish the supply. The only course left for the greenhouse men was to resort to the open market, where the same shortage of fuel was the feature as well as increased prices. Thus the price of production of flowers and plants increased tremendously and, therefore, the price had to be increased to the retailer and the retailer in turn was forced to increase the price to the customer. Another important drain on the profits of the retail florist has been found in the rise in the cost of boxes and wrapping paper, but almost all supplies have advanced.

"Even though such difficulties did exist, my business increased twenty per cent during the year, over that of the previous year. It seems that the demand is daily becoming not only larger, but for a higher grade of merchandise, and to meet this demand the retailer must keep well stocked with the best in the market, not only in flowers and plants, but in novelties, baskets, ribbons and chiffons."

A FAMINE IN PHOENIX

ROEBELENII SEEDS SCARCE.

A Popular Variety.

There are any number of famines growing out of the great war, but the latest to develop is a famine of Phœnix Roebelenii.

During the last half dozen years this phœnix has gained an immense popularity in the United States. It is known as the pygmy phœnix. Specimens 20 to 30 years old have stems not over two feet high. Watson, the Kew authority, says of it: "By far the smallest of all the many kinds of phœnix known and it also is exceptional in the form of its stem and in the elegance and soft texture of its bright green leaves." He adds that it deserves to rank with Cocos Weddelliana.

All these facts have been recognized by the trade and there has developed a large demand for the plants, principally for indoor use, but in Florida and some of the other southern states Roebelenii now is reported in many gardens, though it grows well only when in rich, moist soil and in half shaded spots.

Seeds From Afar.

But the world's supply of seeds of Phœnix Roebelenii has come from an inaccessible district in the northern part of Siam and the western part of north French Indo-China. Before the war the supply of seeds was extremely uncertain and during the last two years it has almost ceased. Added to the difficulties of gathering have been the dangers of the ocean and it is reported that the last shipment from Bangkok was submarined in the Mediterranean.

The variety obtained its name from its discoverer, Charles Roebelen, whose business was collecting orchids. He found it native in the Laos region of Indo-China and he it was who first sent seeds to Europe. The district is a long way north of Bangkok, but so far as known all the seeds have found their way out of the country through that port. The American supply has come from London or Ghent. There have been scarcely any seeds of this palm in the market for the last two years and there seems to be no regular source of supply anywhere in the world, although it is said this palm suckers freely and in a wild state grows in clumps, which may afford propagators an idea.

With a diminishing supply of seeds and an increasing demand for the plants, it is natural that stocks now should have become decidedly small and it seems almost a certainty that a famine will develop. None of the American palm growers has been able to start any considerable number of young plants during the last two years.

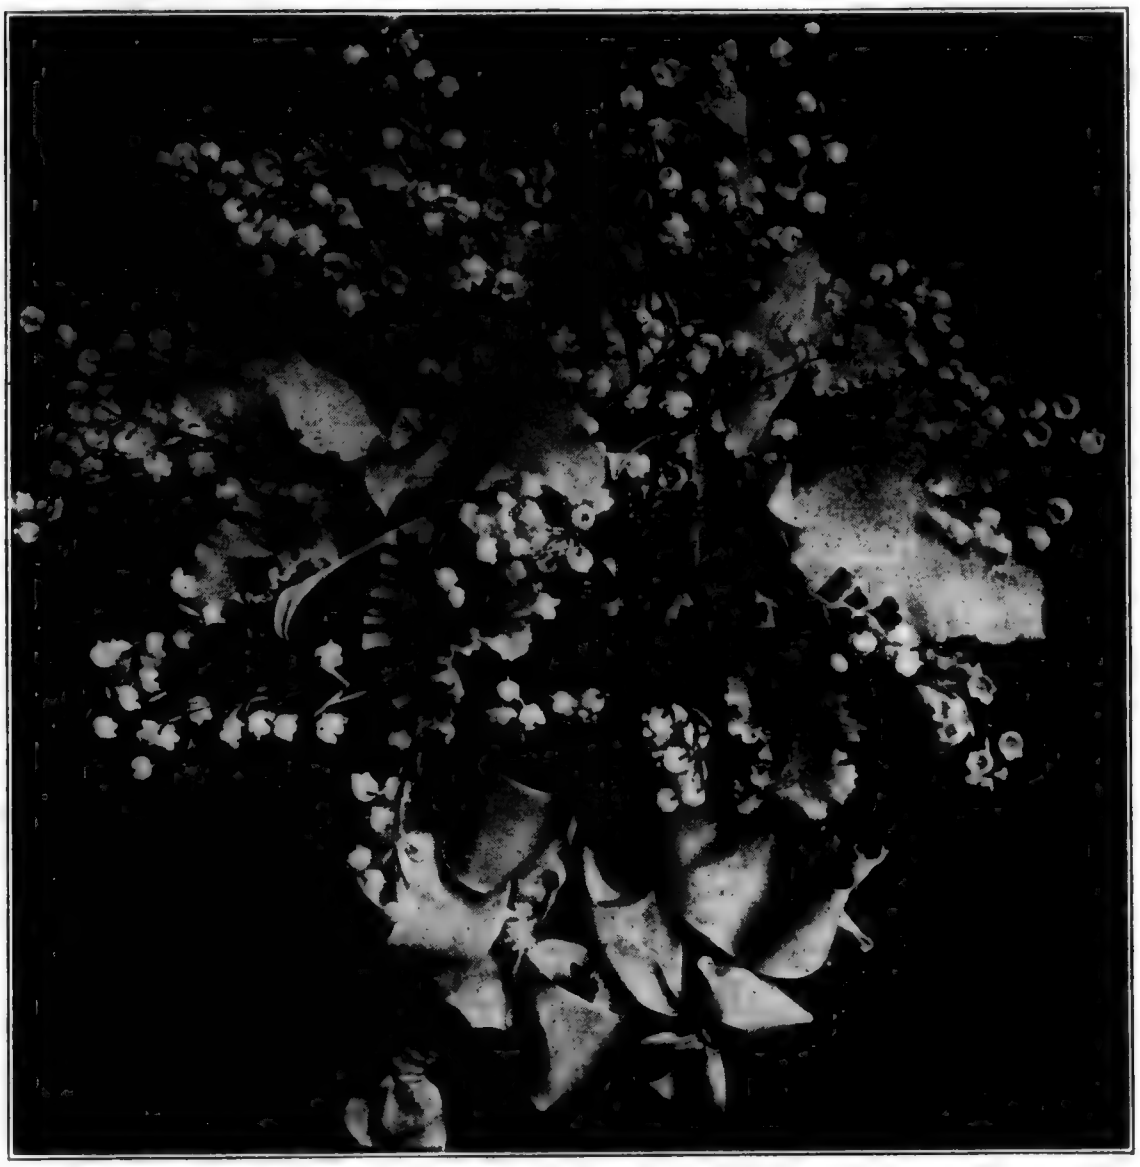
NEW PARCEL POST RULING.

Invoices, descriptive of articles contained in parcel post packages, may be enclosed in an unsealed tag envelope and attached to the outside of the parcel it is to accompany, according to a letter from Third Assistant Postmaster General A. M. Dockery, reading as follows:

Referring to correspondence concerning the sending with parcels mailed at the fourth-class rates of postage of invoices descriptive of the articles contained in the parcels, and requesting that the sender of a parcel be permitted to enclose the invoice in an unsealed tag envelope and attach the latter to the outside of the parcel it is to accompany, I have to say that no objection will be made thereto, provided the envelopes in which the invoices are placed are left unsealed and are plainly marked, preferably in printing, "Invoice inside," or some similar inscription, and the sender's and addressee's names and addresses are in all cases placed on the wrappers of the parcels, regardless of whether or not they appear on the envelopes containing the invoices. Furthermore, in order to prevent the separation of the envelopes and parcels while in the mails, the envelopes must be securely fastened to the parcels and placed underneath the string with which the parcels are tied.

You are informed, however, that if it should be found that the attaching of invoices to the outside of parcels in the manner indicated causes confusion in the mails, it will be necessary to require the invoices to be placed inside the parcels.

The Postoffice Department had been informed that after an order is invoiced and wrapped for weighing, the postage is charged on the invoice and it will be more convenient and less expensive for the merchants under this new ruling. Heretofore the invoices had to be inclosed in the parcel or letter postage paid thereon. C. L. L.



A NEW YEAR'S GREETING.

J. F. Ammann, president, and A. F. J. Baur, secretary, of the American Carnation Society, have sent out a handsomely printed New Year's card, as follows:

Fellow Member:—The American Carnation Society's officers extend to you greetings for the new year, with sincere hope for a prosperous one in carnation culture, and a happy one for yourself and those you love.

Please prepare now to attend and exhibit at the coming meeting and exhibition to be held in Indianapolis, Ind., January 31 and February 1, 1917.

With reference to the Indianapolis meeting Secretary Baur says: "Prospective exhibitors will please bear in mind that entries in the competitive classes will close January 22. A penalty of $2 will be imposed on each entry made after that date. Please mail in your entries early and make entry in every class in which there is a possibility of your showing. That will save expense for yourself as well as work and confusion for the secretary. The premium schedule has been mailed out. If you need another, drop the secretary a postal. Do it now. Everything points to a successful convention. Word comes from every direction of large delegations. The local society is planning entertainment for a large attendance and is leaving nothing undone to make your stay both pleasant and profitable. Carnation yellows will again be up for discussion. Another subject will be 'How Can We Improve the Marketing of Carnation Blooms?' Please come prepared to give your views on these vital subjects."

A Bride's Corsage of Seven Cattleyas and Fifty Valley.

VON SION NARCISSI.

Are Von Sion narcissi hardy? When should they be planted to have them in bloom for Easter? V. R. F.—Ind.

Double Von Sion narcissi are the hardiest narcissi we have, either in the border or naturalized. Single Von Sion, or Trumpet major, as it is more frequently called, is not so hardy and usually disappears in a year or two if planted outdoors. All narcissi for Easter flowering should have been planted before now. The best month is October, but bulbs might even be planted in flats now and flowered by April 8. The quality, however, will be inferior to that of earlier planted stock. C. W.

MEMORIAL DAY PANSIES.

We are going to grow pansies for Memorial day and intend to do the seeding in January. We will transplant the seedlings into flats and later, right after Easter, transplant them to an old violet bed in the greenhouse. Do you think the pansies will be in bloom for Memorial day? Will a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees in the daytime and 50 at night be all right? How close should the pansies be planted in the bed? M. B.—Minn.

The seeds should be sown at once. Some of the plants will bloom by Memorial day, but only a small proportion of them, in all probability. Seedlings raised in August give the finest plants in every respect. Your suggested treatment is all right except in the matter of temperatures. They are too high. Do not let the night minimum run over 45 degrees, with a rise of 10 degrees in the day; and be sure to air them abundantly. Pansies will not stand any coddling. Plant the seedlings three inches apart each way in the beds. C. W.

BRYANT'S EMERGENCY CORSAGE.

When the florist has an order for an elaborate wedding and the bride suddenly changes her mind to be married quietly in a tailored suit, just what is the florist to do? The designer has already planned the most elaborate shower possible, when along comes the groom to inform him that it will have to be a corsage, and to be sure to do his "darndest" and make it "some" corsage.

The illustration accompanying shows the "some corsage." Seven large cattleyas and fifty valley were used. J. L. Bryant, the artist, who is associated with A. C. Brown, of Springfield, Ill., points out that such a corsage will not be oversized when the orchids are carefully placed. At the present prices of select orchids and valley, the corsage surely was worth the price—$18.

TO PUT COLOR IN FERNS.

I should like to know what will give a dark green color to Asparagus plumosus and Boston ferns.

G. B.—Wis.

Give the plants an occasional watering with cow manure to which has been added some Scotch soot. The latter itself is splendid for putting color in unhealthy looking plants. In making the liquid it is best to put the cow manure and soot in a bag and immerse it in a barrel of water. Let it stand a day or two; then give the bag a few squeezings. Dilute the liquid with clear water before applying it. C. W.

SPORT OF NEPHROLEPIS.

Under another cover we are sending you some fronds of a fern which we have had for three years and which we think originated with us. It is a sport, and the leaves never grow over eighteen inches long. Will you kindly advise us as to the variety of this fern?

C. P. D. & B.—Ky.

The fern in question looks like a sport of Nephrolepis superbissima, this variety having sported on several occasions, in growths similar to the fronds received. We would suggest that the correspondent send some specimens to Professor Benedict, of the Brooklyn Botanic Garden, Brooklyn, N. Y., who has made a special study of the varieties of nephrolepis and could give a positive opinion on the question. W. H. T.

COMPOST FOR BOSTON FERNS.

I would like to know what is the best compost for Boston ferns. What temperature do Boston ferns require and is much ventilation necessary? I planted 1,000 runners last July, but, while they all took hold, the growth is slow. The soil was four parts sandy loam and one part well rotted cow manure. W. C. H.—Pa.

A proportion of one-fourth cow manure in the soil is rather too strong a compost for small Boston ferns. The manure may have soured the soil before the plants were established in it.

About one-sixth of old and well rotted stable manure, such as from a hotbed that had been in use the previous spring, would be better for this purpose. The best thing now to do would be to water the plants rather lightly and keep the surface of the soil stirred, or lightly cultivated, so that the air may get into it. Give the plants a night temperature of 60 degrees.

Ventilation will depend on the weather, but it usually is quite safe to give a little air during the day, whenever the temperature in the house runs up to 75 degrees. W. H. T.

STARTING FERN RUNNERS.

Is it better to start fern runners in small pots or in flats? Should they be cut back? A. R. G.—O.

These will start somewhat better in flats or in a raised bench where a little bottom heat runs below them in winter—just sufficient heat to warm the soil moderately. Some leaf-mold and sand should be added to the soil. Long fronds do better if cut back part of their length. C. W.

SCALY INSECT ON FERNS.

I am sending you one of a number of ferns that seem to be infested with some sort of insect. A white substance that somewhat resembles mealy bug settles on the foliage of the plants. How should I treat the plants to get rid of this enemy? A. G.—Okla.

The fern in question is infested with a scaly insect that is decidedly injurious and one that is frequently met with by fern growers. The best method of keeping this pest down is to give weekly sprayings with either nicotine solution or extract of tobacco, the nicotine solution to be composed of one part nicotine to 500 parts water, or the tobacco extract one part to fifty parts of water. It also would be a good plan to cut off the worst fronds and burn them. W. H. T.

DIVIDING BIG BOSTON FERNS.

Will you tell me how to take care of some large Boston ferns? They are in half-barrels and the fronds are extremely thick. Some of the fronds are yellow and full of seeds or spores, while others are young, vigorous and well colored. Should they be taken out of the tubs and the clumps divided and put in fresh soil, or would it be just as well to cut out the old fronds and leave the young ones? What would be the best fertilizer for ferns in this condition? H. L. H.—Mo.

It would be better to postpone the division of these old plants until spring, as the plants would not grow away so freely at this season. In the meantime the worst fronds should be cut out, thus giving more light and air to the young growth. Give the plants full exposure to the sun during the winter, and a night temperature of 60 degrees. A moderate top-dressing with pulverized sheep manure or shredded cattle manure will help to encourage the growth and give the ferns a darker color, but a light top-dressing once in two or three weeks is usually more satisfactory than a heavy dose applied at one time, particularly during the dark days of winter. W. H. T.

London, England.—The National Chrysanthemum Society held its annual show November 9 and 10, but it was considerably smaller than in ante-bellum days. The notable new varieties were Golden Champion, yellow, and Louisa Pockett, white, Australian varieties that are to be disseminated this season in America and England.

St. Michael, Azores.—A few years ago moderate quantities of longiflorum bulbs were sent to the United States from the Azores and one still hears of Azore freesias in America. It therefore is of interest to note that Consul William Bardel states that the total value of the bulbs for export to the United States from this place in 1914 was invoiced at $487 and that in 1915 this declined to $347.

Tamatave, Madagascar.—The exports of raffia fiber from this country in 1914 had a value of $469,612, and in 1915 this increased to $500,262. The shipments direct to the United States in 1914 had an invoice value of $12,108, and in 1915 of $23,856. Consul James G. Carter states that "the increased raffia shipments were the result of the efforts of American firms to purchase raffia direct from Madagascar producers" instead of from European second hands.

Colchester, England.—R. Wallace & Co., Ltd., are introducing Lilium regale (L. myriophyllum) to the trade by means of a distribution of seeds, stating that "the main factor for the present consideration of the variety is that it is easily raised from seed, flowering the third year from sowing."

London, England.—The largest meeting of horticultural traders ever brought together in the British Isles, recently was held to discuss preparations for the preservation of the trade after the declaration of peace. It resulted in the adoption of the following resolution: "In the event of a general commercial import tariff being adopted in this country at the close of the war, this meeting of representatives of all branches of the horticultural trade requests the president and council of the R. H. S. to urge upon the government the necessity of taking steps to safeguard British horticulture from being undersold with produce of foreign origin, such steps being (a) the prohibition of all horticultural imports from the enemy nations; (b) the establishment of a reasonable customs duty with neutral countries; and (c) the granting of most favored nation terms and conditions to the produce of all allied countries."

THE GLADIOLUS

MEMORIAL DAY GLADIOLI.

When should Gladiolus America be planted in a house with a temperature of 40 degrees at night to have it in bloom for Memorial day sales?
M. B.—Kan.

Plant the bulbs about February 1. If your house temperature were 50 degrees at night you could plant the bulbs as late as March 1 and have them in bloom for Memorial day. C. W.

GLADIOLUS NANUS.

When should The Bride and Peach Blossom, of the nanus type of gladioli, be planted for forcing? Any information will be appreciated.
A. A. S.—Mass.

Bulbs of Peach Blossom and The Bride gladioli are just coming to hand, and the sooner they can be planted the better. They succeed well in flats containing four inches of soil. A flat 12x24 inches will hold seventy-five bulbs. The bulbs also may be grown in benches, but when they are in flats they can be started in a cool pit and can be advanced or retarded more easily as occasion requires. C. W.

GLADIOLI FOR MEMORIAL.

At what date should Gladiolus Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride be planted in a carnation house to have them in bloom for Decoration day?
E. A. R.—Ill.

Bulbs of these small-flowering gladioli usually arrive in October, but if planted by Christmas they will flower at the time mentioned. As these gladioli start to grow soon after being received, it is best not to keep them too long out of the soil. For various reasons I consider culture in flats containing five inches of soil better than bench culture, as it is easy then to advance or retard them.
C. W.

PANAMA, THE PRIZE-WINNER.

Not because Gladiolus Panama can now lay any claim to newness or rareness—not for that reason is its picture given a place here, but because, like a star actress, it has had so remarkably successful a career on the stage during the few years it has been before the public. It has won medals and certificates and other awards almost without number, in this country and in Europe. The hosts of growers for whom it has won prizes will therefore recognize it, in the picture, as a tried and true friend.

Panama is a seedling of Gladiolus America and resembles its parent, but has a deeper rose-pink color. The spikes are long. The flowers are large, substantial and well arranged. The photograph from which the illustration was made was supplied by B. Hammond Tracy, of Wenham, Mass. In his list of Cedar Acres gladioli he describes Panama as "a perfect Hermosa pink, with large, wide-open, wax-like flowers."

GLADIOLI FOR FORCING.

I wish to plant gladioli in white and pink for spring forcing. When shall I plant these and what varieties shall I use? They are to be grown between carnations. A. A. S.—Mass.

Augusta, white, and America, pink, will suit you as well as any varieties grown. They are inexpensive and reliable. You can plant these any time from December 20 to February 20. The last-named date would give you flowers for Memorial day. C. W.

GLADIOLI IN COLDFRAMES.

I wish to plant gladiolus bulbs in a coldframe, double sash, about March 1. How far apart should they be planted? I am growing them for the cut flower trade. Please state which of the following three white varieties you consider best: Augusta, Chicago White, Blanche. I have good soil, plenty of rotted stable manure and hardwood ashes. I will turn the manure under this fall. C. N. H.—Ill.

Plant the bulbs three inches apart in the rows and let the rows run eight inches apart. This is closer than they are grown outdoors, but in a frame they will do well with this space. With regard to white gladioli, Chicago White has a purer color than Augusta, but it is not a better commercial variety. I would place them commercially for cut flowers in this order: Augusta, Chicago White, Blanche. C. W.

GLADIOLI FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Will you please tell us what are the best varieties of gladioli to plant and when to plant them to have them in bloom for Memorial day? Also tell us the proper temperature to give them; will 40 to 50 degrees be about right?
C. S. F.—Pa.

Such small-flowered gladioli as Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride can be planted now, in flats containing four to five inches of soil or in beds, to flower for Memorial day. If in flats, they can be timed more closely. Such large-flowered gladioli as America, Mrs. Francis King, Augusta, Brenchleyensis, Panama, Niagara and Pink Perfection can be planted about January 15 if the average night temperature is 40 to 45 degrees. If 45 to 50 degrees can be maintained, the middle of February will be sufficiently early to plant them.
C. W.

Gladiolus Panama.

Sweet Peas

SPACE BETWEEN SWEET PEAS.

How far apart in the rows should sweet peas be planted?

V. R. F.—Ind.

Indoors plant them four to six inches apart in the rows. Outdoors, for good blooms, allow twelve inches between the plants. C. W.

SWEET PEAS LATE.

We have a house 50x156 planted to sweet peas for the fourth season, and we notice that the peas have bloomed later each season. This year they are just starting to bloom. The crop was planted the same time each year, about the last of August.

We have given all the peas the same treatment and have had good crops, but later. Each year we trench the house about eighteen inches deep, four feet three inches apart, digging in manure and using thirty-five or forty 1-horse loads of horse manure. Now, are we using too much manure?

The first season the soil was heavy and we had some trouble with buds dropping, but the next season we drained the house by putting 3-inch drain tile under each row and since then have had less trouble with buds dropping. J. P. K.—Md.

If you would reduce the quantity of manure used one-half, your sweet pea vines would grow less vigorously, but bloom earlier. Cow manure, well rotted, is superior to horse manure, if you can secure it at a reasonable cost. I would prefer to feed the plants with liquid manure and top-dressings of cow or sheep manure, as they need it during the growing season, rather than make the soil so rich at planting time.

C. W.

SWEET PEA CULTURE.

I am sending under separate cover a shoot of sweet peas that seem to be diseased. It appears to be some form of mildew. The seeds were planted September 14, in sandy soil. They were run quite dry from the start, sometimes three weeks without water. At times the ventilators are wide open, also the doors. Would this cause the trouble? The grower maintains that they are too wet. There are two holes in the roof through which the water leaks. The plants underneath these holes are thoroughly wet and the plants on either side are vigorous and larger than the rest, with no signs of disease. Please tell me the cause of the above condition, and give cultural directions for the crop from its beginning. A. T. V.—W. Va.

The shoot forwarded was not affected with mildew, but had every appearance of having been browned by excessive dryness at the root. Mildew whitens the foliage and looks quite different from foliage absolutely brown and dried up as yours is. I should say that the culture has been radically wrong if the plants have been allowed to go for any such period as you name without water.

The full cultural directions for winter-flowering sweet peas appeared in The Review of October 12, 1916. The proper treatment for the plants is a minimum temperature of 45 to 48 degrees until the flowers appear, then 50 to 52 degrees at night, with a rise of 10 to 15 degrees with sunshine during the day and 5 to 8 degrees on cloudy days. Sweet peas naturally are moisture-loving plants, and if the beds in which they are planted are well drained there is not much danger of any oversupply of water. The soil in which they are growing should have been deeply spaded in advance and plenty of cow or other manure, well rotted, incorporated with it. Careless ventilation, causing drafts, will cause mildew. A dry, overheated condition will start red spider; both need to be guarded against. A mulch of sheep or cow manure when the plants are flowering will prove beneficial, but avoid the use of quick-acting chemical fertilizers.

C. W.

NARCISSUS ROOTS ROTTED.

We would like to know what causes the roots of Paper White narcissi to rot, after the bulbs have become thoroughly rooted. We potted the bulbs in October, in a compost of good, fibrous sod, with four or five parts of rotted manure and one or two parts of sand. The compost was piled last May, turned once or twice during the summer and kept well watered. The bulbs were placed in a trench outdoors to root, and were brought into the house after having formed excellent roots. Top growth came on finely for a while, and then practically stopped. On examination of the soil balls, we find that practically all roots are rotted off on the outside of the ball and that the ends are rotted on the inside. Part of the bulbs have had bottom heat part of the time and the others have not, but the roots are all the same. We have kept the plants well watered.

The temperature of the house has been carried at 50 to 60 degrees at night and as high as 75 to 80 degrees during the day, with plenty of ventilation. As a rule, however, the day temperature has not been much over 65 degrees.

K. & L.—Wash.

In the first place, your compost was too rich; one-third well rotted manure would have been ample. In the second place, you made a mistake in placing the narcissi in a trench outdoors, where they probably were left too long. Remember that Paper White narcissus bulbs are not hardy like those of tulips, daffodils and hyacinths. They should be placed in a coldframe, cellar or pit, or even under greenhouse benches, where they are free from drip, and in such places they rarely fail to do well. While they will stand such a temperature as you mention, they will flower vastly better if given not over 50 to 52 degrees at night, with a fair rise during the daytime. C. W.

EDIBLE ELEPHANT'S EARS

HIGH COST OF LIVING NOTE.

Caladiums for Use and Beauty.

Some years ago the United States Department of Agriculture took an interest in trying to introduce into this country certain species of caladiums that might prove of value as food plants. The Department reasoned that as several varieties of caladiums are used for food in the tropics, and as one of these is capable of producing more food to the acre than any other known plant, even being capable of feeding two or three thousands of people per acre the year around, there was no reason why they might not prove of value in this country, at least here, in the south, where the seasons are long. Further, it was reasoned that much land too wet for other crops might be available in growing these plants.

Accordingly, caladiums were gathered from the four corners of the earth. These were judiciously distributed in small quantities, but thus far none of them has proved of great value for the purpose intended. Doubtless this is largely due to the difficulty in inducing people to take up new things. But several of these caladiums are of great value from an ornamental standpoint, and as soon as generally known will largely displace the old Caladium esculentum.

A Substitute for Potatoes?

The Trinidad dasheen is perhaps the most promising variety for food. From a tuber no larger than a walnut a plant is produced that grows to a height of five or six feet, with leaves two feet broad by two and a half feet long. A tuber is produced by fall that is as large as the largest esculentum tubers on the market, with several offsets at least as large as the one planted in the spring. These tubers, when baked, taste fully as well as potatoes. The second season one of these large tubers produces dozens of leaves and makes a wonderful show.

As an ornamental plant, this caladium is most effective in the center of beds, surrounded by plants that do not grow more than four feet tall, or as a specimen plant in borders or on lawns. The stems are dark, wine red.

The Wonderful dasheen is a variety that is similar to the foregoing in many respects, but has broader and larger leaves. The wonderful part is doubtless in the number of leaves that are produced in a season. It is not an exaggeration to say that this caladium will produce five times as many leaves in the same length of time as the old esculentum, and the leaves are almost as large and fully as ornamental. Here, in northern Tennessee, the plant grows fully six or seven feet tall. This variety is bound to be widely used as soon as known.

This Variety Has No Tubers.

Closely allied to the caladiums are the colocasias and xanthosomas. Colocasia or Xanthosoma Marchallii, however, looks more like a giant "rabbit's ear" or "mule's ear," such as we see in the northern swamps, than like the caladiums to which we are accustomed. It does not produce tubers, and so must be sold as a growing plant, a fact that may mitigate against its popularity. The plant grows here from four to six feet tall, with leaves three or more feet long and of a rich, dark green color.

Xanthosoma or Colocasia illustris is a dwarf member of the family, seldom growing more than thirty inches tall. Its leaves are slightly larger than calla leaves and are wonderfully handsome, being a good green, mottled and blotched with plum, bronze and all intermediate shades. For a border plant there is nothing I have ever seen that will produce a richer effect, especially as a border to a bed of the following variety:

One of the Handsomest.

Xanthosoma or Colocasia Bataviensis, in my opinion, is the best of the elephant's ear tribe. It grows rapidly, throwing many leaves from even a small bulb. One of the accompanying illustrations is made from a photograph of a plant that grew from a single tuber last summer, and the tuber was no larger than a baseball at planting time, the middle of April. I have noted many plants with as many as thirty-five or forty good leaves that would average five and a half feet tall. The other illustration, showing a bed of this variety, indicates the height of the plants. I am standing in the edge of the bed, and my height is six feet one inch just as I stand, without my hat.

The stem of each leaf is a dark plum color, and the leaf itself is a blue-green, with veins the color of the stem. The blade of the leaf is not so large as that of Caladium esculentum, but the general effect is much richer and more tropical.

This season I had plants, as large as the single plant in the illustration, that grew from tubers no more than an inch in diameter. The tubers are more easily kept over winter than the esculentum tubers, and thus far they have never shown the soft rot that destroys the center eye in so many caladium bulbs. The plant grows rapidly and makes a show earlier in the season than a caladium of the old variety.

While there are several other varieties, the ones I have named are the easiest to grow and I think they are the most valuable for all outdoor planting. It might be stated that some of these varieties bloom freely, but the blossoms, not adding materially to the beauty of the plants, may be disregarded in stating their merits. Floyd Bralliar.

CLIMBERS FOR CONSERVATORY.

Kindly name a few vines that can be successfully grown in a conservatory. I wish to plant them in the ground and would like quick results, as the place is quite bare at present. W. F. J.—Ia.

A few suitable climbers are the following: Allamanda Hendersoni, A. Williamsi, Bougainvillea Sanderiana, Stephanotis floribunda, Plumbago Capensis, Jasminum primulinum, Clerodendron Balfouri, Clematis indivisa and Cissus discolor. For covering walls of brick, stone or cement, Ficus repens is satisfactory. Some of the foregoing are classed as stove or tropical plants, but all will do well in an ordinary conservatory, with a minimum of 45 degrees. The hoyas, passifloras, bignonias, Rose Cherokee and a number of other varieties are available, but those first named will be found quite suitable. C. W.

SPACE BETWEEN SWEET PEAS.

How far apart in the rows should sweet peas be planted?

V. R. F.—Ind.

Indoors plant them four to six inches apart in the rows. Outdoors, for good blooms, allow twelve inches between the plants. C. W.

SWEET PEAS LATE.

We have a house 50x156 planted to sweet peas for the fourth season, and we notice that the peas have bloomed later each season. This year they are just starting to bloom. The crop was planted the same time each year, about the last of August.

We have given all the peas the same treatment and have had good crops, but later. Each year we trench the house about eighteen inches deep, four feet three inches apart, digging in manure and using thirty-five or forty 1-horse loads of horse manure. Now, are we using too much manure?

The first season the soil was heavy and we had some trouble with buds dropping, but the next season we drained the house by putting 3-inch drain tile under each row and since then have had less trouble with buds dropping. J. P. K.—Md.

If you would reduce the quantity of manure used one-half, your sweet pea vines would grow less vigorously, but bloom earlier. Cow manure, well rotted, is superior to horse manure, if you can secure it at a reasonable cost. I would prefer to feed the plants with liquid manure and top-dressings of cow or sheep manure, as they need it during the growing season, rather than make the soil so rich at planting time.

C. W.

SWEET PEA CULTURE.

I am sending under separate cover a shoot of sweet peas that seem to be diseased. It appears to be some form of mildew. The seeds were planted September 14, in sandy soil. They were run quite dry from the start, sometimes three weeks without water. At times the ventilators are wide open, also the doors. Would this cause the trouble? The grower maintains that they are too wet. There are two holes in the roof through which the water leaks. The plants underneath these holes are thoroughly wet and the plants on either side are vigorous and larger than the rest, with no signs of disease. Please tell me the cause of the above condition, and give cultural directions for the crop from its beginning. A. T. V.—W. Va.

The shoot forwarded was not affected with mildew, but had every appearance of having been browned by excessive dryness at the root. Mildew whitens the foliage and looks quite different from foliage absolutely brown and dried up as yours is. I should say that the culture has been radically wrong if the plants have been allowed to go for any such period as you name without water.

The full cultural directions for winter-flowering sweet peas appeared in The Review of October 12, 1916. The proper treatment for the plants is a minimum temperature of 45 to 48 degrees until the flowers appear, then 50 to 52 degrees at night, with a rise of 10 to 15 degrees with sunshine during the day and 5 to 8 degrees on cloudy days. Sweet peas naturally are moisture-loving plants, and if the beds in which they are planted are well drained there is not much danger of any oversupply of water. The soil in which they are growing should have been deeply spaded in advance and plenty of cow or other manure, well rotted, incorporated with it. Careless ventilation, causing drafts, will cause mildew. A dry, overheated condition will start red spider; both need to be guarded against. A mulch of sheep or cow manure when the plants are flowering will prove beneficial, but avoid the use of quick-acting chemical fertilizers.

NARCISSUS ROOTS ROTTED.

We would like to know what causes the roots of Paper White narcissi to rot, after the bulbs have become thoroughly rooted. We potted the bulbs in October, in a compost of good, fibrous sod, with four or five parts of rotted manure and one or two parts of sand. The compost was piled last May, turned once or twice during the summer and kept well watered. The bulbs were placed in a trench outdoors to root, and were brought into the house after having formed excellent roots. Top growth came on finely for a while, and then practically stopped. On examination of the soil balls, we find that practically all roots are rotted off on the outside of the ball and that the ends are rotted on the inside. Part of the bulbs have had bottom heat part of the time and the others have not, but the roots are all the same. We have kept the plants well watered.

The temperature of the house has been carried at 50 to 60 degrees at night and as high as 75 to 80 degrees during the day, with plenty of ventilation. As a rule, however, the day temperature has not been much over 65 degrees.

K. & L.—Wash.

In the first place, your compost was too rich; one-third well rotted manure would have been ample. In the second place, you made a mistake in placing the narcissi in a trench outdoors, where they probably were left too long. Remember that Paper White narcissus bulbs are not hardy like those of tulips, daffodils and hyacinths. They should be placed in a coldframe, cellar or pit, or even under greenhouse benches, where they are free from drip, and in such places they rarely fail to do well. While they will stand such a temperature as you mention, they will flower vastly better if given not over 50 to 52 degrees at night, with a fair rise during the daytime. C. W.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

NEW YEAR'S GREETINGS.

From President Kerr.

We are at the beginning of a new year and again thinking of our friends. The splendid old year has gone, taking its many seasonable possibilities, but gives us in keeping a beautiful New Year. The 366 days of the year just passed were filled to overflowing with many opportunities to acquire happiness by spreading sunshine among our friends. We wish our friends success.

And with the possibilities of this New Year comes a ray of hope for peace between the warring nations, our friends, our brothers, a conception of which, when accomplished, will constitute once more joy, smiles, laughter and work, which lead to their success.

The heart of every American florist goes out in sympathy to our fellow craftsmen who are located in the warring nations. Let us each and all wish for an early peace, in order that it may alleviate the suffering of humanity and restore prosperity and happiness among them.

And may the widened circle of our S. A. F. organization in our own land give the New Year distinction in our calendar, as that in which the blessings and good of the organization were made more manifest than ever before to the communities which have been fortunate to have had the S. A. F. in trust.

I wish each and all success, or, better still, may each one realize his own ideals in his own life, which, when accomplished, will constitute success.

May the whole New Year be one round of friendships, joyous days of labor and tasks well done.

Robert C. Kerr, President.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Secretary John Young announces that President Kerr made the following appointments to take effect January 1, 1917:

DIRECTORS.

Under affiliation, to serve one year:
George Asmus, Chicago, Ill., Vice-president Florists' Telegraph Delivery.
S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa., President American Rose Society.
J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., President American Carnation Society.
E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., President Florists' Hail Association.
George E. M. Stumpp, New York, N. Y., President New York Florists' Club.
A. Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa., President Florists' Club of Philadelphia.
Wm. H. Amling, Maywood, Ill., President Chicago Florists' Club.

WASHINGTON REPRESENTATIVE.

William F. Gude, Washington, D. C.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW COMMITTEE.

Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass., reappointed for full term of six years.

COMMITTEE ON TARIFF AND LEGISLATION.

William F. Gude, Washington, D. C., chairman.
James McHutchison, New York, N. Y.
Wm. H. Siebrecht, Jr., Long Island City, N. Y.
Heber J. Ware, New York.
Leonard Vaughan, Chicago, Ill.

COMMITTEE ON PUBLICITY.

W. F. Therkildson, Philadelphia, Pa., term five years.
Guy French, Morton Grove, Ill., term four years.
Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa., term three years.
Thomas H. Joy, Nashville, Tenn., term two years.
Edward P. Tracey, Albany, N. Y., term one year.
The above committee elects its chairman.

OFFICERS FOR 1917.

PRESIDENT.

R. C. Kerr.....Houston, Tex.

VICE-PRESIDENT.

A. L. Miller.....Jamaica, N. Y.

TREASURER.

J. J. Hess.....Omaha, Neb.

SECRETARY.

John Young.....New York City

DIRECTORS.

W. R. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.
W. J. Keimel, Elmhurst, Ill.
A. J. Rossi, San Francisco, Cal.
C. L. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn.
F. X. Stuppy, St. Joseph, Mo.
G. W. Hess, Washington, D. C.
Ex-president MacRorie and the presidents of affiliated organizations.

COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL CREDIT AND COLLECTIONS BUREAU.

C. E. Critchell, Cincinnati, O.
S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa.
Frederick A. Danker, Albany, N. Y.
Hans Plath, San Francisco, Cal.
E. B. George, Painesville, O.
George W. Smith, Cleveland, O.
Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.
F. L. Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.
Joseph H. Hill, Richmond, Ind.
T. J. Wolfe, Waco, Tex.

COMMITTEE ON CONVENTION GARDEN.

Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn., term three years.
Clarence L. Brock, Houston, Tex., term two years.
Gustav Amrhyn, New Haven, Conn., term one year.

COMMITTEE ON MOTHERS' DAY.

Edward J. Fancourt, Philadelphia, Pa.
Karl P. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn.
Henry Greve, Dallas, Tex.
Charles P. Mueller, Wichita, Kan.
C. W. Eichling, New Orleans, La.
O. J. Olson, St. Paul, Minn.
Charles J. Graham, Cleveland, O.
R. E. Schiller, Chicago, Ill.
F. A. Holton, Milwaukee, Wis.

President R. C. Kerr is sending out a personal letter to each of the state vice-presidents, as follows:

As president of the S. A. F. I congratulate you upon your acceptance of the office of state vice-president and I believe your acceptance will warrant my earnest desire for full and hearty coöperation on all subjects of interest to our organization.

Do not overlook the fact that you are the headquarters representative in your state and I have full confidence in your ability to serve our society in an energetic and intelligent manner.

Of course it is only natural for you to have the interests of your local organization at heart, but I sincerely trust and in fact know that you will make special efforts to make the society of which you are state vice-president one of the largest organizations in your territory. It is incumbent upon you to direct your attention to securing as many new members as possible and taking care of the various interests of the present members in a businesslike manner.

It is also your duty to get in touch with each and every member of our society in your state and obtain their coöperation, which I am quite positive will be given you.

Have you considered that the next convention promises to be the largest gathering of our S. A. F. that has ever been held in America? Just instill into the members in your state the fact that great things are in store for them.

It is natural for you to expect that this office will aid you in every possible way to make a success of your administration, which, of course, it is needless to say, we will most gladly do.

I know that we shall reap our reward at New York and I would be unworthy of your consideration, should I think otherwise than that it was your coöperation and assistance which aided to make our administration a great success, which I am sure it will be.

It is for the above reasons that I am writing you this personal letter. Always bear in mind that I will assist you whenever called upon, or on other occasions when necessary. Do not let this opportunity for service stray from your doorway.

FIRE AT MONINGER'S.

Warehouse is Damaged.

Fire originating from some unknown cause at 2:30 on the afternoon of Saturday, December 30, partially destroyed the warehouse of the John C. Moninger Co., greenhouse builders, Chicago, causing a loss on stock estimated at $20,000, in addition to the damage to the building.

It was a spectacular affair, the proximity of the Moninger, Schillo and other lumber yards adding greatly to the danger of a conflagration. At one time there were twenty-three streams of water being thrown on the fire. It was twenty-four hours before the fire was out.

The building was a large one, of five stories and basement. A part of it was occupied by a tenant, the United Breeders' Co., the basement being used for iron work and the upper floors for the storage of material, mostly steel, heating apparatus and greenhouse hardware. The building was some distance from the mill, the office building and other structures on the property. The loss will be easily adjusted for the reason that the annual stock taking had been completed the morning of the fire, which was the last business day of the year. As it was Saturday, too, the plant was shut down at the time and no one but the watchman was on the property.

Damage to the Building.

The loss on the building, also covered by insurance, is the personal one of E. F. Kurowski and the estate of N. J. Rupp, his partner, who lay dead at his home at the time, awaiting burial; the building and land were the personal partnership investment of Messrs. Kurowski and Rupp, leased to the company of which they were officers.

The fire will not interrupt the business in the least, as the burned building held nothing except articles manufactured elsewhere and which can be replaced in the open market. It probably will be some time before the building can be used again, however, since the east half will have to be practically rebuilt. The three upper floors fell in the center, but the lower floors held, protecting the iron-working machinery.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The examining committees of the C S. A. have submitted reports on new varieties as follows:

At New York, December 18, Hamburg Late White, sport of Maud Dean, white, Japanese incurved, submitted by C. T. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y., scored as follows on the commercial scale: Color, 18; form, 13; fullness, 8; stem, 14; foliage, 12; substance, 12; size, 8; total, 85.

At Philadelphia, December 14, Hamburg Late White, white, Japanese incurved, submitted by C. T. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y., scored as follows on the commercial scale: Color, 18; form, 13, fullness, 8; stem, 14; foliage, 14; substance, 13; size, 8; total, 88.

At Boston, December 14, Hamburg Late White, white, Japanese incurved, submitted by C. T. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y., scored as follows on the commercial scale: Color, 17; form, 13; fullness, 7; stem, 14; foliage, 13; substance, 12; size, 7; total, 83.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

JOHN KRUCHTEN.

EARLY training and environment combined to fit John Kruchten for the position he now holds, as president of the John Kruchten Co. The son of a grower, he was born in Chicago, November 21, 1882. After enjoying the ordinary grade school education, he took the course offered by the Metropolitan Business College and upon graduation worked for several Chicago business houses. But the call of the florists' trade was strong upon him and in 1900 he entered his father's greenhouses, remaining there until 1902, when he took a stand at the Flower Growers' Exchange, then in operation at Wabash avenue and Randolph street, selling his father's stock. COGGAN SAVED THE GLADS.

The following is part of an article in a Battle Creek, Mich., newspaper:

There are various kinds of thrilling rescues, but S. W. Coggan, of Battle Creek, performed an unusual one last week, on short notice, and by rather heroic means.

Mr. Coggan made a flying run for a freight car, caught it, clambered aboard with a few simple weapons with which to fight an all-night engagement against frost and ministered to a carload of gladiolus bulbs all the way to Chicago.

The temperature in the car was just at freezing when Mr. Coggan arrived. It was 10 degrees below zero outside the car when the train pulled into South Bend, but the campaign for heat on the inside was winning.

The bulbs were the property of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, and were being shipped from the Vaughan farms at Ovid, Mich. The weather was mild when they were loaded and no fears were entertained as to their arrival in Chicago. With the drop in temperature, however, an alarm was sent out. The car was then a part of a freight train that was approaching Battle Creek. Mr. Coggan was called from dinner by a long distance telephone appeal to do something if possible. He made a run for a couple of oil stoves and some lanterns, hastily requisitioned a supply of oil, tried to hire a man somewhere on the street to make the trip in, but was unable to do so, and then, although the Christmas rush was upon his own business, he caught the car as it arrived in the Grand Trunk yards, and started to dig in and conduct a trench warfare against the cold. The bulbs were landed safely at the Chicago terminal, and Mr. Coggan then spent several hours trying to get into Chicago on a milk train that should have made the run on fast express time. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

NEW YEAR'S GREETINGS.

From President Kerr.

We are at the beginning of a new year and again thinking of our friends. The splendid old year has gone, taking its many seasonable possibilities, but gives us in keeping a beautiful New Year. The 366 days of the year just passed were filled to overflowing with many opportunities to acquire happiness by spreading sunshine among our friends. We wish our friends success.

And with the possibilities of this New Year comes a ray of hope for peace between the warring nations, our friends, our brothers, a conception of which, when accomplished, will constitute once more joy, smiles, laughter and work, which lead to their success.

The heart of every American florist goes out in sympathy to our fellow craftsmen who are located in the warring nations. Let us each and all wish for an early peace, in order that it may alleviate the suffering of humanity and restore prosperity and happiness among them.

And may the widened circle of our S. A. F. organization in our own land give the New Year distinction in our calendar, as that in which the blessings and good of the organization were made more manifest than ever before to the communities which have been fortunate to have had the S. A. F. in trust.

I wish each and all success, or, better still, may each one realize his own ideals in his own life, which, when accomplished, will constitute success.

May the whole New Year be one round of friendships, joyous days of labor and tasks well done.

Robert C. Kerr, President

President R. C. Kerr is sending out a personal letter to each of the state vice presidents, as follows:

As president of the S. A. F. I congratulate you upon your acceptance of the office of state vice president and I believe your acceptance will warrant my earnest desire for full and hearty coöperation on all subjects of interest to our organization.

Do not overlook the fact that you are the headquarters representative in your state and I have full confidence in your ability to serve our society in an energetic and intelligent manner.

Of course it is only natural for you to have the interests of your local organization at heart but I sincerely trust and in fact know that you will make special efforts to make the society of which you are state vice-president one of the largest organizations in your territory. It is incumbent upon you to direct your attention to securing as many new members as possible and taking care of the various interests of the present members in a businesslike manner.

It is also your duty to get in touch with each and every member of our society in your state and obtain their coöperation, which I am quite positive will be given you.

Have you considered that the next convention promises to be the largest gathering of our S. A. F. that has ever been held in America? Just instill into the members in your state the fact that great things are in store for them.

It is natural for you to expect that this office will aid you in every possible way to make a success of your administration, which, of course, it is needless to say, we will most gladly do.

I know that we shall reap our reward at New York and I would be unworthy of your consideration, should I think otherwise than that it was your coöperation and assistance which aided to make our administration a great success, which I am sure it will be.

It is for the above reasons that I am writing you this personal letter. Always bear in mind that I will assist you whenever called upon, or on other occasions when necessary. Do not let this opportunity for service stray from your doorway.

FIRE AT MONINGER'S.

Warehouse is Damaged.

Fire originating from some unknown cause at 2:30 on the afternoon of Saturday, December 30, partially destroyed the warehouse of the John C. Moninger Co., greenhouse builders, Chicago, causing a loss on stock estimated at $20,000, in addition to the damage to the building.

It was a spectacular affair, the proximity of the Moninger, Schillo and other lumber yards adding greatly to the danger of a conflagration. At one time there were twenty-three streams of water being thrown on the fire. It was twenty-four hours before the fire was out.

The building was a large one, of five stories and basement. A part of it was occupied by a tenant, the United Breeders' Co., the basement being used for iron work and the upper floors for the storage of material, mostly steel, heating apparatus and greenhouse hardware. The building was some distance from the mill, the office building and other structures on the property. The loss will be easily adjusted for the reason that the annual stock taking had been completed the morning of the fire, which was the last business day of the year. As it was Saturday, too, the plant was shut down at the time and no one but the watchman was on the property.

Damage to the Building.

The loss on the building, also covered by insurance, is the personal one of E. F. Kurowski and the estate of N. J. Rupp, his partner, who lay dead at his home at the time, awaiting burial; the building and land were the personal partnership investment of Messrs. Kurowski and Rupp, leased to the company of which they were officers.

The fire will not interrupt the business in the least, as the burned building held nothing except articles manufactured elsewhere and which can be replaced in the open market. It probably will be some time before the building can be used again, however, since the east half will have to be practically rebuilt. The three upper floors fell in the center, but the lower floors held, protecting the iron-working machinery.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The examining committees of the C. S. A. have submitted reports on new varieties as follows:

At New York, December 18, Hamburg Late White, sport of Maud Dean, white, Japanese incurved, submitted by C. T. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y., scored as follows on the commercial scale: Color, 18; form, 13; fullness, 8; stem, 14; foliage, 12; substance, 12; size, 8; total, 85.

At Philadelphia, December 14, Hamburg Late White, white, Japanese incurved, submitted by C. T. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y., scored as follows on the commercial scale: Color, 18; form, 13, fullness, 8; stem, 14; foliage, 14; substance, 13; size, 8; total, 88.

At Boston, December 14, Hamburg Late White, white, Japanese incurved, submitted by C. T Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y., scored as follows on the commercial scale: Color, 17; form, 13; fullness, 7; stem, 14; foliage, 13; substance, 12; size, 7; total, 83.

The introduction committee for 1917 is composed of the following: Mrs. W. F. Sheridan, of New York, chairman; Mrs. H. G. Berning, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. W. H. Sievers, of New York; Miss M. C. Gunterberg, of Chicago; Mrs. B. Hammond, of Beacon, N. Y.

Mrs. C. H. Maynard, Sec'y.

JOHN KRUCHTEN.

EARLY training and environment combined to fit John Kruchten for the position he now holds, as president of the John Kruchten Co. The son of a grower, he was born in Chicago, November 21, 1882. After enjoying the ordinary grade school education, he took the course offered by the Metropolitan Business College and upon graduation worked for several Chicago business houses. But the call of the florists' trade was strong upon him and in 1900 he entered his father's greenhouses, remaining there until 1902, when he took a stand at the Flower Growers' Exchange, then in operation at Wabash avenue and Randolph street, selling his father's stock. August 28, 1905, he started in business as a commission merchant and May 23, 1915, incorporated with his brother and took up his present quarters in the Atlas block.

COGGAN SAVED THE GLADS.

The following is part of an article in a Battle Creek, Mich., newspaper:

There are various kinds of thrilling rescues, but S. W. Coggan, of Battle Creek, performed an unusual one last week, on short notice, and by rather heroic means.

Mr. Coggan made a flying run for a freight car, caught it, clambered aboard with a few simple weapons with which to fight an all-night engagement against frost and ministered to a carload of gladiolus bulbs all the way to Chicago.

The temperature in the car was just at freezing when Mr. Coggan arrived. It was 10 degrees below zero outside the car when the train pulled into South Bend, but the campaign for heat on the inside was winning.

The bulbs were the property of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, and were being shipped from the Vaughan farms at Ovid, Mich. The weather was mild when they were loaded and no fears were entertained as to their arrival in Chicago. With the drop in temperature, however, an alarm was sent out. The car was then a part of a freight train that was approaching Battle Creek. Mr. Coggan was called from dinner by a long distance telephone appeal to do something if possible. He made a run for a couple of oil stoves and some lanterns, hastily requisitioned a supply of oil, tried to hire a man somewhere on the street to make the trip in, but was unable to do so, and then, although the Christmas rush was upon his own business, he caught the car as it arrived in the Grand Trunk yards, and started to dig in and conduct a trench warfare against the cold. The bulbs were landed safely at the Chicago terminal, and Mr. Coggan then spent several hours trying to get into Chicago on a milk train that should have made the run on fast express time. All the tracks were jammed.

OBITUARY

Nicholas J. Rupp.

Nicholas J. Rupp, treasurer of the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, died December 27 from the effects of an operation for appendicitis. He had been suffering from a nervous breakdown and had been at home for upwards of a year, but his health was steadily improving; in fact, so much so that he was about ready to resume active duties when he was stricken with appendicitis. He was taken to a hospital and an operation immediately performed, but his heart gave out the second day and he passed away at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Mr. Rupp was one of the pioneers of the greenhouse construction business. In 1894, after the death of John C. Moninger, he joined E. F. Kurowski and together they bought the business from Mrs. Moninger. From then on he devoted his entire life to the advancement of greenhouse construction. He was constantly at his office with the John C. Moninger Co. and contributed greatly to the rapid advance and success of the company.

Mr. Rupp was a member of the Society of American Florists for twenty-one years, having joined in 1895 at the Pittsburgh convention. He also was a member of the Chicago Florists' Club and many other trade organizations.

Most members of the greenhouse trade knew him as a jovial good fellow and many florists and vegetable growers have profited by his advice in regard to the building of their greenhouses.

He was 53 years old and, besides his wife, is survived by a son, Walter Rupp, who is secretary of the John C. Moninger Co.; two daughters, Clara and Elsie; his father, Charles Rupp, Sr.; a brother and two sisters. The funeral was held December 31, from his residence, 3508 Janssen avenue, with interment at St. Lucas cemetery.

John McIntyre.

John McIntyre, of New York, for many years a prominent figure in wholesale circles at Philadelphia, died last week. He was employed at C. C. Trepel's Bloomingdale's.

H. H. Frey.

H. H. Frey, senior member of Frey & Frey, of Lincoln, Neb., died December 11, at the age of 76. The decedent started his florists' business at Lincoln thirty-five years ago, in partnership with his oldest son, C. H. Frey, who, after ten years, withdrew from the firm to form the C. H. Frey Co. The deceased is survived by five sons and one daughter. The business of Frey & Frey will be continued by the four sons, Joseph B., Clem E., R. J. and Irwin F. Frey.

Mrs. M. M. Ayres.

With much regret I announce the death of Mrs. Matilda M. Ayres, of St. Louis, at the Deaconess hospital, December 29, after an illness of several months with dropsy. Her death came just one year after she sold her interest in the Ayres Floral Co., at 315 North Grand avenue. For fifteen years she was the head of the company, and for ten years previous to this she was manager for Luther Armstrong, who was her foster brother.

Nicholas J. Rupp.

Mrs. Ayres was 70 years old and a well-preserved woman for her age. She had the distinction of being the only woman member of the St. Louis Florists' Club. She was an honorary member at her death. She was much respected by all in the trade and her death was much regretted by her many friends. She was quite wealthy, and it is said left nearly all to charity and churches.

The funeral took place January 1, from Wagoner's chapel, St. Francis Xavier's cemetery. Many beautiful floral designs were sent by her friends, and the attendance of florists was large.

NEW YORK FEDERATION.

The New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs will hold a meeting at Ithaca, N. Y., February 14, 1917, in connection with the annual Farmers' week program. The program for the day is as follows:

9 a. m.—"Roses in Greenhouses, and Their Breeding," by Prof. E. A. White.
10 a. m.—"Orchids and Orchid Breeding," by Prof. David Lumsden.
12 noon—Informal luncheon.
2 p. m.—"Garden Roses and Their Culture," by Prof. A. C. Beal.
3 p. m.—"Diseases of Roses," by Dr. L. M. Massey.
4 p. m.—Business meeting.

The department of landscape art has arranged for a lecture at 11 a. m., by Henry Hicks, of Westbury, N. Y., on "Making Home Grounds Attractive."

In connection with the above program, there will be an exhibition of students' work in table decorations, plant baskets, bouquets and other cut flower arrangements, in the Floricultural building, Wednesday and Thursday, February 14 and 15. There also will be an exhibition of roses, carnations, violets, sweet peas and other florists' crops, which will be shown by specialists in cut flower production. Other lectures in floriculture will be given on other days of the week by the staff of the department of floriculture.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

The Saltford Flower Shop, of Poughkeepsie, reported excellent business, with bright Christmas prospects. The veteran, George Saltford, was examining a batch of Begonia Mrs. J. A. Peterson when I found him at the greenhouses. He remarked that this variety would supersede all other begonias. Holiday plants were abundant, both in single and made-up specimens. Rose Mrs. Aaron Ward is grown for corsage purposes and is the only variety handled. Carnations White Wonder, Matchless, Enchantress Supreme, Alice and Benora were in prime shape. Across one high carnation house, wires are strung, on which are suspended a vigorous lot of lælias in pans. Dendrobium Wardianum and Oncidium varicosum were also there; the latter variety is later transferred to a warmer house. A house of cattleyas was interesting. These were grown in 5 and 6-inch pots in place of pans, as formerly. Oncidium splendidum was throwing flower spikes of exceptional strength. Mr. Saltford believes in crowding the roots rather than overpotting and in keeping the plants on the dry side. He thinks an assortment is necessary to keep up the interest. Passing through a house of gorgeous, double-flowered poinsettias, we came to a house of Sweet Pea Yarrawa. "We have been growing sweet peas for seven years," remarked Mr. Saltford, "really experimenting, but now we seem to know how to grow them profitably. We do not feed until the vines are three feet tall, and keep them on the dry side. By this time, especially with Yarrawa, buds appear. Then we feed them, and once the plants bloom, the temperature is kept not below 48 or 50 degrees. If buds are not seen when the plants are of the height mentioned, we force, but still keep the plants dry and do not feed them." The space between the rows was occupied by stevias in pots and is later planted with outdoor Spencers, which are equally successful. A batch of geraniums grown standard shape were noted. "Somewhere," said Mr. Saltford, "I read that standard geraniums sold last summer for $15 per pair, and we have decided to grow some, as our trade undoubtedly will take them." I reminded him that he saw the item in question mentioned in my Musings in The Review, the subject being the splendid specimens grown by S. Goddard, of Framingham, Mass. George Saltford, Jr., is steadily gaining in health, but it will possibly be a year ere he returns to active service in the business.

W. W. Hannell, of Watervliet, N. Y., is acknowledged to be the prize grower of heather in this territory. A house of Erica melanthera and persoluta rosea, in perfect shape, had been sold. "There is a fine lot for a Mr. Baker," remarked Mr. Hannell, adding, "Would that we had more Bakers and less butchers in the trade.'' A splendid lot of poinsettias also was noted. Roses were in heavy crop, especially Killarney, in low solid beds, of good color.

Valentine Burgevin, Inc., of Kingston, N. Y., has its model range in excellent shape, as usual. Particularly notable were some conceits in baskets of plants, prettily arranged, and to suit all purses. The brothers Burgevin recently formed a corporation, but retained the honorable name of the founder. W. M.

NEWS NOTES AND COMMENTS

Denver, Colo.—''Our holiday business was most satisfactory, with a fine demand for both cut flowers and plants,'' reports the Curtis Park Floral Co.

Bluffton, Ind.—Christmas night Dillon Myers slipped on an icy step and fell, injuring his back and hip. He is confined to his home. While the injury is not dangerous, it is quite painful and he will be several weeks recovering from it.

Decatur, Ill.—The holiday business was the best ever, both in plants and cut flowers, according to Henry Daut. The weather could not have been more favorable and there was no shortage in any item, save, perhaps, red roses and red carnations.

Roseburg, Ore.—Mrs. F. D. Owen, of the Fern Island Greenhouse, says: ''My Christmas trade was the best ever. Roseburg people never demanded such high-class plants and cut flowers. I was better prepared to meet them halfway. We did a rushing business and all enjoyed the merry rush. On account of the early freeze in October and November, everybody lost all outdoor mums and must all depend on the florist.''

Minneapolis, Minn.—C. H. Janssen, secretary and treasurer of Swanson's, Inc., says: ''It gives us pleasure to state that the holiday business has been far above all expectation. We have done an exceedingly good business and, as far as we are able to judge from the business we have done, there is existing here a prosperity which enables people to buy luxuries even though the necessary commodities of living are high. We also wish to speak a commendation for The Review. It is an indispensable medium and we are finding it of great value. It is referred to constantly and I am sure it would be difficult for us to get along without it.''

Schenectady, N. Y.—''Holiday business never better.'' That is the unanimous report of the craft. There was a scarcity of blooming plants and cut flowers were not overplentiful. Prices were slightly above the average. No complaints were registered, except that the poinsettia as a cut flower is unsatisfactory. Why are not more of the double variety grown, as is done so successfully and with profit by our confreres at Kingsston and Poughkeepsie? Echoes from Troy and Albany say the Trojans and Albanians also shared in the general prosperity and, if profits were not so big as one could wish, the volume was larger. This also seems to be the opinion of merchants in other lines of business.

San Diego, Cal.—Boyle & Darnaud report a splendid Christmas business, especially in orchids, of which the firm grows large quantities at the nursery.

Bluffton, Ind.—Myers & Co. report the largest Christmas trade in years, mostly in cut flowers, of which they had plenty, especially long-stemmed Ophelia, which had the leading call. In pot plants, poinsettias, cyclamen and Primula malacoides rosea had the lead.

Pontiac, Ill.—W. J. Miller & Son say this was the first Christmas they have had enough scarlet carnations. There was an increased demand for plants and this helped to put the total sales twenty-five per cent ahead of last year. From Christmas to New Year's business also was unusually good.

Atlanta, Ga.—The Whitehall Floral Co. reports business double that of last Christmas. This increasing trade demanded the purchase of the old Fair and Cherokee street greenhouses, which have been remodeled and thoroughly equipped for growing roses, carnations and pot plants. The manager, W. M. Bailey, says there was great demand for roses this Christmas.

Dayton, O.—It is true that W. G. Matthews, proprietor of the Dayton Floral Co., has a fondness for the vernacular, but a sprinkling of made-in-America slang frequently adds ''pep'' and charm to a letter or conversation. Mr. Matthews, like many others, slipped under the ropes at the eleventh hour to take advantage of the $1 subscription price of The Review, which became $1.50 January 1. Here is Mr. Matthews' epistolary surprise: ''Slip me couple years of Reviews—afore 'tis too late. Safety first, you know. Being without The Review is next to being without coal.'' Then Mr. Matthews proceeds to tell of Dayton's holiday business: ''The Christmas trade in Dayton was the best the florists ever experienced. At first some were timid about asking the advanced prices, thinking they would drive away trade and ruin their business. But this was not so; in fact, business increased. The time is now to explain to the public that we no longer can work on for sentiment. When the customer thinks your prices are outrageous, just mention the following necessities we are compelled to buy: Coal, gasoline, labor, boxes, paper, string, ribbons—yes—butter, eggs, beef, shoes, clothing, sugar, flour, etc. You will, ten times out of ten, have satisfactorily explained to your customers why flowers are a necessity and cost more money.''

Cherryvale, Kan.—F. W. Meyer, who has ''Quality'' as his motto, says that the Christmas business actually was double that of 1915.

Greeley, Colo.—P. O. Hansen's 17,000 feet of glass did a large and profitable Christmas business. Mr. Hansen will purchase a new touring car in the near future.

Pueblo, Colo.—Julia Stone, proprietress of the Colonial Flower Shop, reports that the Christmas business swept the market clean of cut flowers and plants. The most expensive plants seemed to be in greatest demand.

Lisbon, O.—J. W. Scott says Christmas business not only exceeded his expectations, but also exceeded the best previous records for this locality. Cut flowers and plants both sold splendidly and the supply was large.

Logansport, Ind.—The florists here did a rushing holiday business—stock was completely sold out. Some were unable to fill orders Christmas day and others could have closed shop at noon the day preceding. Prices advanced all along the line.

Fort Smith, Ark.—George Rye, who styles himself ''Some Florist,'' says: ''It has been one of the hardest and worst Christmases that ever hit this part of the country. To begin with, the weather went to 10 degrees above zero December 18, which caused all stock received up to December 20 to be frozen. The express company caused the greatest loss ever known by failing to deliver flowers that should have arrived on time. I lost five boxes shipped December 19 and 20 that arrived December 25 and 26 and you can just guess what shape they were in. Never in the history of the flower business in this section was stock delayed as this Christmas. What stock did arrive in good shape went for a good price, but I was much disappointed in my plant business. Just to give an example, carnations shipped to me from Chicago December 19 did not arrive until December 23; plants arrived frozen. Two boxes were shipped. One arrived December 22, and today, December 29, the other one came in, shipped at the same time, of course all frozen. Wholesale prices were higher this year than ever before and the retail man could not advance his prices to come up with the wholesale market, and that hurt the business. Take it all in all, it was one of the worst years ever experienced in this section of the country.''

The Review brings results.

ALTHOUGH supply houses carried over moderate quantities of red frieze, it is as nothing to what department stores through the country have to work off.

IT will pay to root all the cuttings of Alice carnation. The variety has given so good an account of itself since its dissemination that the demand for young stock will take up everything that is likely to be available.

LAST week's mails brought many complaints from subscribers who had failed to receive The Review of December 21. The Christmas mails were so badly congested that in some cases it took a week for copies to reach a destination ordinarily reached within twenty-four hours.

THE success certain growers for the eastern markets have had with the Hadley rose will prompt some of the western experts to give the variety another trial; a rose that can be grown good enough to command $1 per flower at Christmas, even for a small part of the cut, is worth studying.

THE shortage of Manetti stocks is important, but it would have been far worse in the days when growers were in the habit of replanting their roses each season. This year a shortage of young grafted stock merely will mean that growers will carry over more of the old plants than heretofore.

THE Mrs. Russell rose seems peculiarly susceptible to extremes in weather. It does well in the heat of summer, but a damp, hot spell cooks the flower. Recent zero days also have played havoc with some splendid crops. But Mrs. Russell is so good when it is good that it is forgiven its off days.

THERE are a large number, especially in the wholesale branch of the business, who hope collections will improve now that the new year has arrived.

FROM the number of readers who sent The Review $5 for five years' subscription and dated their letters December 26, it may be deduced that the trade had a right fair Christmas.

HERE is a Happy New Year idea for dahlia growers, for they are assured an increased demand and no possibility of unsalable surplus! This is how: Inuline is a chemical necessary for the production of the serum used in anti-typhoid and anti-typhus inoculations. Before the war Germany supplied it. Now the chemists have discovered that the root of the dahlia contains two per cent of inuline, which is in great demand.

PUT THEM ON THE MAP.

There are several cities of good size that are not on the trade map—for the reason that The Review has not yet found anyone to see that they are adequately represented in its news columns.

The Review would like to hear from someone who will be interested in supplying a weekly news letter from Albany, N. Y.

Baltimore, Md.
Louisville, Ky.
New Orleans, La.
Syracuse, N. Y.

Or if there is any other town not adequately represented, The Review would like to arrange for news letters.

FLORISTS' HAIL ASSOCIATION.

Increased Rate of Assessment.

It is not generally known that all insurance companies insuring crops have lost money during the last two years.

The Florists' Hail Association, like the old line insurance companies, has been up against the loss proposition hard during 1915 and 1916. The heavy losses have been met promptly without levying an extra assessment.

At a Chicago meeting of the directors, they believed that a raise in the rate for the March assessment of 1917 would be likely to pull the association through the coming year without the levy of an extra assessment, provided the loss ratio of the last ten years was not exceeded. The era of prosperity which the trade is now enjoying ought to make the increased rate a small matter to a large percentage of the membership of the Florists' Hail Association.

New business coming in at the new rate in a measure shows that the new rate will make practically no difference to the prosperity of the association.

John G. Esler, Sec'y.

WILL THE BUSINESS PAY?

The Review frequently of late is asked if, in its opinion, the greenhouse business can be made profitable with fuel at such prices as $6.50 per ton for low grade coal.

The publishers of The Review are of the opinion that the greenhouse business will be profitable, except perhaps for brief intervals, under any outside conditions.

A condition of high prices for general commodities is favorable to the flower business rather than against its success. Business always is good on a rising market; when everything else is going up in price the florist can keep pace if he only thinks so. If prices for other commodities eventually become settled on the present high levels, the prices of flowers will be found to have advanced in about the same proportion. Florists will prosper so long as prices rise or continue high. The difficulty will come when prices begin to fall. The trouble then will lie in the fact that not so many people are making money and that spending power is reduced. This will cut off the demand for flowers and reduce their prices faster than greenhouse operating expenses can be reduced. Falling prices are what this trade should fear, not advancing prices.

MAKING ADVERTISING PAY.

Forced to the action by the high price of paper, The Review increased the subscription price January 1 to $1.50 per year. In advance of that date a considerable number of readers took advantage of the opportunity to renew subscriptions for one or more years at the rate then prevailing. Many of the letters accompanying remittances were of interest. Like these:

The Review is so well worth the new subscription price that it seems like taking advantage to subscribe for two years at the old rate.—C. W. Outhwaite, New Iberia, La., December 21, 1916.

The Review is one of the high class magazines which every live wire in the florists' trade needs in his business.—C. L. Spahr, Tarentum, Pa., December 27, 1916.

Here is a money order for $5 for five years. What would we do without The Review, with the profitable articles and money-saving ads it always contains?—F. W. Meyer, Cherryvale, Kan., December 26, 1916.

We have made thousands of dollars through the information we obtained by reading the articles and ads in The Review. It is indispensable in our business and we send $5 for the next five years.—Kirchhoff Bros., Chicago, Ill., December 26, 1916.

Turning from the subscription department to the advertising desk, it is not a surprise to find that advertisers also have been hearing from the readers of The Review. Like these:

The ad has brought more orders than I shall be able to handle this month, but you surely will hear from me later.—Max B. Schreiber, McDonald, Pa., December 18, 1916.

The ad sold all the plants I had to spare in one day after I received the paper.—Henry Gerstenkorn, Decatur, Ill., December 18, 1916.

We are cleaned up; The Review does the work.—Brown's Greenhouses, Clyde, O., December 14, 1916.

Whoa! Back up, take out the ad; wait until I grow something more and I will be with you again!—James Frost, Greenville, O., December 14, 1916.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

New Year's demand in the houses that do the shipping trade was unusually good, but after the shipping orders were out the activity in this market was less than in former years. The wholesaler who did not have established shipping business to rely on found this a poor New Year's. The absence of special local demand may in a large measure be attributed to the fact that New Year's eve this year fell on Sunday, upon which day no liquor is allowed to be served. As the life of New Year's celebrations always has centered around the champagne supper, those who wished to celebrate in the accustomed manner either held small parties at home or went to some other city to see the new year in. This was anticipated by Chicago hotels and restaurants, which therefore made little provision for decorations, always an important item in New Year's business. What local demand there was came principally for such flowers as are used for corsage work, a great number of parties always being given around the first of the year. Shipping business, on the other hand, was brisk and held up the market fairly well.

American Beauties were decidedly short and no difficulty was found in clearing stock at good prices. There were few eastern Beauties in the market. Russells also were markedly short. Although the cut of other roses was a little below par, there were more than the demand called for. Shorter and medium lengths, especially of such roses as are suitable for corsage work, sold easily, but the longer lengths dragged heavily. Carnations took a decided drop again, and wholesalers were glad to accept almost any reasonable offer.

Easter lilies came in a little faster than heretofore and found a fair sale. The severe weather has retarded sweet peas somewhat, but they now begin to arrive in larger quantities. The latter part of the week, when there were practically no Brunners or violets in the market, sweet peas sold readily, but at other times they were difficult to move. Violets were in ample supply, although most of the stock came from the east, home-grown singles being below the usual supply. Paper Whites remain plentiful. There are enough cattleyas now. Jonquils are decidedly popular, but not yet in large supply. Valley cleans up regularly, as usual this season. Stevia is on the down grade. Bouvardia is in small supply and sells well. Other items of miscellaneous stock sell fairly steadily, but are not in large supply.

An Optimist.

The gentleman who compiles the statistics for the annual business review for the Tribune is an optimist on the florists' business. The source of his information is not revealed, but this is the way Chicago's business in wholesale cut flowers was set down:

In 1916	$3,610,000
Increase	$ 722,000

There are, of course, no public records by which the actual volume of the wholesale cut flower business can be ascertained—few of the twenty-five or thirty concerns in the market care to disclose the sum of their yearly sales—but probably everyone will agree that a guess at $3,610,000 is amply large enough for 1916. The method of arriving at the total appears to have been adding twenty-five per cent to the estimate of 1915—and surely no one but an enthusiast would believe that the average increase in sales, due to increased production and better prices, has been twenty-five per cent as compared with the good year of 1915.

Fire at Oakwoods.

Fire originating in one of the boiler-sheds at Oakwoods cemetery made a spectacular blaze Saturday evening, December 30, and threatened the destruction of the large range of greenhouses. The shed was reduced to ashes and the ends of three greenhouses were burned off, exposing the stock. One of the houses of bedding plants in the sand and small pots was so badly damaged everything froze. The other two damaged houses were in carnations and S. A. Reid, the gardener, who has been in charge more than a quarter of a century, found it possible to keep the temperature from going below 40 degrees, although it was a cold night, by using a dozen oil stoves; only the plants in the end of the house were seriously damaged. Several other houses were without heat until breaks in the piping could be repaired, but the damage was not so great as one who saw the flames would have expected. The range has two separate boiler-sheds, both boilers being coupled to the same main.

December Weather.

According to Weather Bureau records, issued January 2, December was a favorable month for the growers, the sun being fifty-five per cent of the possible, or three-eighths more than usual, as we ordinarily get only forty per cent of the possible sunshine in December. The mean temperature was 3.3 degrees below normal. Of importance as affecting the fuel bill, the wind movement for the month was only 9,778 miles.

Various Notes.

F. M. Johnson and Edward Galavan, of the A. L. Randall Co., have interested themselves in the case of John Loehrer, formerly well known in this market. Mr. Loehrer was in the greenhouse business for many years at Boone, Ia. He now lives at Sioux City, and is said to be totally blind and dependent on Mrs. Loehrer. Both are elderly people. The J. C. Rennison Co., at Sioux City, is acquainted with the circumstances and writes that these people are deserving and that anything done for them will be much appreciated.

A. Hall and W. H. Waddington, who for the last five years have been with August Lange, are proprietors of the Lakeside Flower Shop, 4700 Sheridan road. They opened their store December 16. The fixtures of the new store are of mahogany finish. The walls are a warm gray. Tables have white marble tops. Buchbinder Bros. installed the built-in refrigerator. Mr. Hall says they had a splendid Christmas business considering the short time the store had been open.

The A. L. Randall Co. has added the fourth floor of the Le Moyne building to the three which it already occupies.

John G. Poehlmann has gone to Rockford, Ill., where he intends to spend about two months getting a much needed rest.

dent Peter Reinberg reviewed the work of the commissioners in planning and recommending for purchase 20,000 acres of timber land in the county to be preserved as natural forests, and congratulated the board on the excellent progress which it had made.

While the fuel question still worries a considerable number of the local growers, Wietor Bros., whose requirements run into the thousands of tons per year, say they are not having and have not had any trouble on this score. They burn Pocahontas exclusively, contracted for last spring, and have had regular deliveries at the contract price from both of the concerns with which they deal. Most of the growers can look back to the time when they obtained Pocahontas coal at 90 cents per ton f. o. b. the mine in West Virginia, but Mr. Wietor says the contract price this year was $1.50 per ton, which means $3.60 delivered in Chicago. On the spot market the same coal has brought more than $6 for several months.

Forty-one cases of German valley pips reached Poehlmann Bros. Co. December 29. The shipment came via Holland and arrived here in excellent condition.

If one is looking for an attractive window decoration, it is almost certain that it can be seen at Mangel's Palmer House store. Last week the feature of the display was several large vases of American Beauties, supplemented by Ophelias, poinsettias, snapdragons and vandas. The sides and ceiling of the window were decorated with Christmas greens. John Mangel reports that Christmas business was the largest he ever has had, while decorating work, chief among which was the Lolita Armour party, kept him busy for New Year's.

It is market talk that the heaviest single loss by frost during the before-Christmas cold snap was on a shipment of three boxes of orchids to A. L. Vaughan & Co. from W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Being a little unsure about how safely valley pips will travel under existing conditions, H. N. Bruns is having his stock come forward in small shipments. His theory was that he thus would minimize the risk. But so far none of the stock has suffered for the want of refrigeration on the Rotterdam steamers. The fourth shipment, consisting of 250 cases, arrived in Chicago December 29.

The work of fitting up the new home of the E. C. Amling Co. has progressed so well that removal to it is expected to take place next week.

At Wheaton R. Scheffler is completing another house 36x250, to be planted with sweet peas as a first crop.

Fred Ottenbacher has reëntered the employ of Zech & Mann.

The weather has favored the sweet pea growers, according to H. Wehrmann, Maywood. He started to pick a fortnight before Christmas and in the first week shipped 2,000, but in the seven days before Christmas he picked 20,000 and in the week between Christmas and New Year's, 17,000. The January pick will depend entirely on the amount of sun, he says.

An attack of the grip kept August F. Poehlmann indoors during the last days of 1916.

Stollery Bros., 1046 Wilson avenue, had an attractive special window, decorated for the holidays. The sides were birch bark and cork, forming a rustic fence and arbor. The floor was of solid green, with small gold baskets containing violets and birch bark baskets containing cyclamen and azaleas. The brothers report a heavy business in red frieze-covered baskets containing greens and winterberries. Azaleas sold well.

A year-end vacation brought Guy W. French down from Union Grove, Wis., December 29. He will return after the meeting of the Florists' Club January 4, which will relieve him of his secretarial duties.

Japanese baskets decorated with kumquats were the feature of an attractive window display at Fleischman's last week.

Erne & Klingel are getting ready for St. Patrick's day. They have already received their stock of carnation absorber.

According to Fred Nelson, the telephone is of steadily increasing importance in the large retail trade of the George Wittbold Co. Mr. Nelson says three trunk lines now are being used nearly to capacity.

James P. Foley, of the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., has been confined to his bed for a week.

land, received a cable announcing the death of his father.

Home-grown violets are markedly scarce this year. According to Miss O. A. Tonner, this is largely due to the excessive heat and drought of last summer, which burned many plants on the field.

The E. F. Winterson Co. had the first tulips seen in the market this season. They arrived December 29, but were frozen, as the shipper, a New York grower, had packed them in a corrugated box without sufficient wrapping.

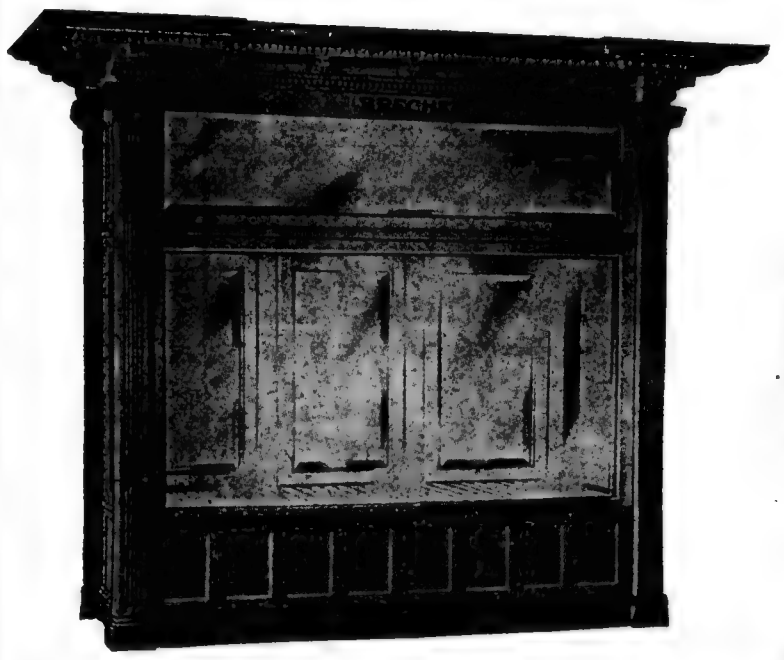
Edward H. Goldenstein, who is on his first trip as a partner in the firm of Langhout & Co., reports that thus far he has met with gratifying success. Mr. Goldenstein intends to spend the packing season in Holland.

A New Year's party was given by Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Waters, at their home at 3712 Rokeby street. Among those present were A. F. Longren and wife, E. C. Pruner and wife, Allie Zech and wife, Sam Seligman and party.

Increased business in the supply department of Poehlmann Bros. Co. has made it necessary to enlarge the office quarters on that floor.

S. Kitasawa, Chicago agent of the Southern California Flower Market, is greatly pleased with the manner California plumosus is making its way in the Chicago markets. He asserts that asparagus grown in slat houses in southern California has exceptional lasting qualities, that it remains fresh for a long time and that it does not scatter until thoroughly dried out.

Visitors.



A visitor in quest of rest after a busy Christmas was W. C. Lawrence, of the Lawrence Floral Co., Atlanta, Ga. He was piloted around town last week by Frank McCabe, who pays Atlanta a periodical visit in the interest of the A. L. Randall Co.

Frank C. Anderson, West Baden, Ind., was in Chicago last week on his way to Naperville, Ill., where he has accepted a position as foreman at the houses of J. C. Bauer.

short side. The sale of violets, orchids and valley was heavy. The novelties, artificial flowers and baskets, sold well. The telegraph business made a big increase over last year's, showing that the public are becoming educated to the service.

The New Year's business was good, yet perhaps not quite up to last year's.

The Market.

It is many years since the florists of this city and vicinity experienced two such busy weeks as those which came to a close with the old year. The business Christmas week exceeded all expectations. There was a general clean-up on the part of everybody—greens, plants and cut flowers going strongly, notwithstanding a stiffening of prices. The general report is that potted plants sold better this year than ever before.

Various Notes.

Smith the Florist, Washington street, had some fine basket effects.

Macnair was on the jump at both stores and could have sold many times as much stock if it had been available.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business has been excellent since Christmas, the demand for New Year's winding up December with a rush. There was no advance in prices; just a little starch went into them here and there, encouraged by the unfavorable weather and the brisk buying. There is evidence that the crops were well timed. Beauties and the higher grades of other roses are much less abundant. The lower average prices just now are partly explained by smaller flowers and shorter or weaker stems. Still, the general quality is quite as good, maybe a trifle better, than usual at this season. White flowers continue overabundant, particularly Paper White narcissi. So, to a lesser degree, do white carnations and white roses.

The New Year's business was excellent. The wholesale houses felt it mostly December 29 and 30. They were all open Sunday, December 31, for at least half a day. Most of them closed at 1 o'clock on New Year's day. There was a heavy demand for funeral flowers January 2 that helped to dispose of some of the white flowers at a trifle below list prices.

Daffodils are a welcome addition to the list of flowers. While generally a little short in stem, the flowers are excellent.

The general belief is that December has been a most satisfactory month in plants, flowers and supplies.

A Golden Wedding.

Most quietly, William J. Baker and Mrs. Baker celebrated the golden anniversary of their wedding on the evening of Christmas day. Just a happy home gathering, known to only a few, which marked the rounding out of many years' peace that commenced soon after Mr. Baker's return from the Civil war, in which he served his country gallantly. Mr. Baker is hard at work every day at his wholesale commission house. He takes pride in disposing of his flowers to the best advantage. Some of his consignors have shipped to him ever since they have been in business and feel an affection for him that is far above any mere business relation. Long may he wave.

The Surplus Flowers.

Comment has been caused by the quantity of flowers that found their way to the street or curbstone stands at Christmas and during the Christmas holidays. This, it is urged, is a detriment to the business. Personally I think, after a few careful observations, that it is the right plan. The objector say that such sales are a sign that prices have been held too high. But it seems that this is a mistake. The effort to bring in a crop at any given time is certain to spoil some of the stock. Were these culls shipped or sold locally with good flowers they would do far more harm to the business than selling them by themselves for what they are worth. They might be destroyed, but when they can be sold they help to create a love for flowers that after will lead the purchaser to the retail shops for something better; and they help to meet the expense of production and of marketing. No wholesaler will knowingly sell flowers for less than they are worth. There is the key to this problem.

The Death of John McIntyre.

Sadness has come to cut flower circles at the festive season by the news from New York of the death of John McIntyre, who was employed at Bloomingdale's.

John McIntyre was for many years one of our most prominent figures in the wholesale world. It is currently believed that the word "hustler" was coined expressly for John McIntyre. The way he got around with his boxes of cut flowers was a marvel. Early and late he was at it with an energy and zeal that never flagged. His punctuality and speed were an inspiration to the young salesmen.

Club Meeting.

The January meeting of the Florists' Club was held in the club rooms in Horticultural hall, on Broad street below Locust street, Tuesday evening. There were certain domestic problems connected with the budget that occupied time and evoked discussion. Just what the chef's pay may be and just what the duties of the position may be, perhaps are not for general perusal, so we will pass on to the illustrated lecture on "Rock Gardens" by Richard Rothe, of Glenside, Pa., which was the attraction of the evening.

Various Notes.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons arranged the decorations for the first assembly ball at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, January 5.

Raymond Brunswick's engagement was announced New Year's day. How he found time, between his arduous duties with the M. Rice Co. in working hours and as scout master in leisure moments, is surprising. Of course you want the lovely lady's name, but that must remain a mystery for this month.

Alexander B. Scott says that somewhere around 50,000 roses were cut at Sharon Hill the week before Christmas.

Oswald J. Derousse, right-hand man to President Rea, of the Pennsylvania railroad, died suddenly New Year's day, from asphyxiation; he was overcome by the fumes while working at his car in a closed garage. Mr. Derousse owned the Colonial Greenhouses at Pleasantville, N. J., formerly owned by the late Mrs. Mary S. Flemig. Thomas Walker, brother of John Walker, of Youngstown, O., is Mr. Derousse's manager. Mr. Derousse was highly esteemed in trade circles and his death was a great shock. He was 49 years of age.

John Cunningham and George Cook are J. M. Deutscher's assistants at the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business was quiet for New Year's. There was not much more than the ordinary call for stock, and, while prices have not shown a marked drop, conditions are not so good as they were last year at this time. The call for corsages, which is usually heavy, has not seemed to materialize to the same extent this year. There was a medium supply of orchids of fine quality and these cleaned up readily. Violets were scarce and were cleared each day as soon as they appeared. Singles were almost unobtainable. There was a limited number of sweet peas, with long stems, that were in great demand and cleaned out daily at $3 per hundred. The stock was fancy and well worth all it brought.

Roses in general were in good supply and sold well. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses, however, were scarce, and as the quality was fine they brought good prices. The demand for Hoosier Beauty, Ophelia and Ward was also strong. Carnations cleaned up nicely and good prices were obtained. The demand was good, and as the stock was in good shape there was little held over. Stevia was in quantity and sold readily. There has been little or no change in the valley situation. The stock remains scarce, selling at $6 for first quality, which is not extra good.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Business has continued brisk since Christmas and many orders were placed for New Year's. Grand balls, parties and debutante affairs have been the means of keeping most of the stores busy. A vast amount of funeral work has added to the steady and most satisfactory business. It now is safe to say that the holiday business was in every way most satisfactory, and all florists are well satisfied. The cut flowers perhaps did not move so well as in previous years, owing to extremely high prices, but a big business was done in growing plants, of which there happened to be a large supply. We have had rather severe weather since the holidays and shipments have been greatly hindered, in many cases frozen. The supply of stock, however, has been fairly large. Prices are a little easier since the rush, but a good figure is demanded even now.

The supply of American Beauties is good and these are seen in all grades. Milady, Hoosier Beauty and Prince d'Arenberg sell well. Some wonderfully fine Russell with long stems sell easily. Maryland, Ophelia and Ward are all in medium demand, and the quality is good. Violets have sold faster this week and they are exceptionally fine. Pink bouvardia reaches the market and sells well. Orchids are plentiful and move easily. Carnations have slackened in supply. Stevia is in fine condition and sells rapidly. Sweet peas in pink and lavender are good and meet early buyers. Pussy willows are used extensively for basket work. Easter and calla lilies have shortened some. Jonquils and Roman hyacinths are ar-

BUFFALO.

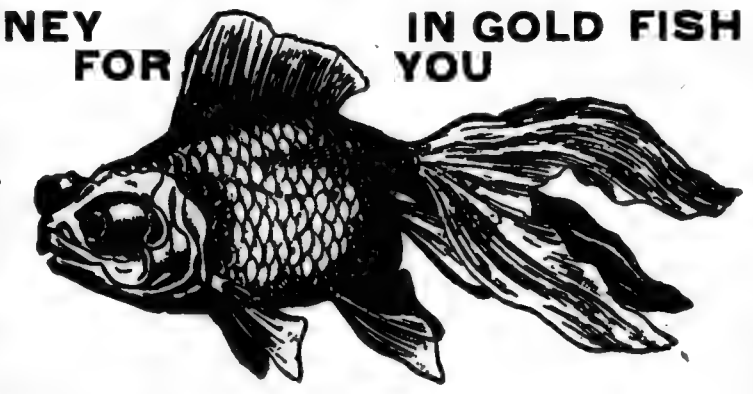
The Market.

The Christmas business was better and larger—a satisfactory Christmas in every way, from grower to consumer. December 19 business became unusually brisk. December 22 a heavy snow storm struck Buffalo and seemed to cripple everything. But December 23 there was a full recovery of activity. Orders booked in advance this year were unusually numerous. The snow storm, however, delayed some shipments until too late for use. It was expected by many that stock would be scarce, but it was quite the contrary; there seemed to be enough in nearly all items. Christmas on a Monday provided a great relief to the storemen, as this divided the usual rush between the two days. It made it much more convenient in every way.

American Beauties were decidedly scarce beginning December 22, this being due to the fact that other roses sold at such high figures that many preferred the Beauties, even if they cost a little more. This does not mean that Beauties sold at a low figure. Some exceptionally fine Russells reached the market and sold instantly. Killarneys also were good. Some of the Richmond roses were rather weak in the neck, but this was overlooked. All red roses cleared at good prices; in fact, all kinds of red flowers. Red carnations were rather scarce and sold at $15 per hundred; Ward carnations were next in demand. Enchantress dragged along somewhat slowly.

Valley, cattleyas and cypripediums sold exceptionally well; also gardenias and sweet peas, the latter being none too plentiful, but of fine quality. Violets, both doubles and singles, realized an extra heavy demand. The quality was good. The demand for narcissi exceeded the supply. Mignonette and snapdragons were rather scarce.

Everything in plants cleared as well as expected. In surveying the different retail stores, few Christmas plants may be seen. Poinsettias cleared well and hampers of plants sold without difficulty. Holly in general was poor and somewhat scarce. As yet there has not been a retailer whose business did not increase anywhere from twenty to forty per cent.



Various Notes.

Some White Maud Dean mums grown by C. T. Guenther were popular at Palmer's stores during the Christmas season. The staffs of both stores have been busy with decorations during the last week.

S. A. Anderson reports a substantial increase in the season's business. The features of the holiday season were plant baskets. A. E.

were exceedingly shy. There were a few of these in larger sizes to be had, but the medium size was markedly scarce. The few offered were picked up early and brought good prices. There was a good supply of cyclamens on hand and these sold readily. Poinsettias were in good supply and cleared nicely. Primulas and Cincinnati begonias came in for their share of the trade and many palms, ferns, etc., were disposed of. In cut flowers there was an elegant crop of roses, and it was needed, as the out-of-town shipments were held up for several days and as a rule came in too late for the Christmas trade. There were many orders for Beauties, Russell and violets that had to be filled with other stock. It is doubtful if at any other time in the history of holidays stock was so tied up as this season. There were loads of flowers to be had, at any price, from the express companies. Carnations were in good supply, but they did not move so readily as they should, and it now looks as though they are taking a back seat to a certain extent. On a holiday people seem to prefer roses and if they have to pay a high price for carnations, so much the worse for carnations. There was a scarcity of valley and that in the market was picked up early. There was a good supply of Paper Whites and yellow narcissi, cut poinsettias and some lilies. Taking it as a whole, trade was satisfactory all around and everyone seems well satisfied.

Various Notes.

Sherman Stephens & Son report that the bad weather was hard on them at Christmas time, as few people ventured out to the cemetery; but trade has been good since.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports a large business at Christmas and since then there has been much funeral work and decorating.

T. J. Ludwig's said they had all the force could take care of and were well satisfied.

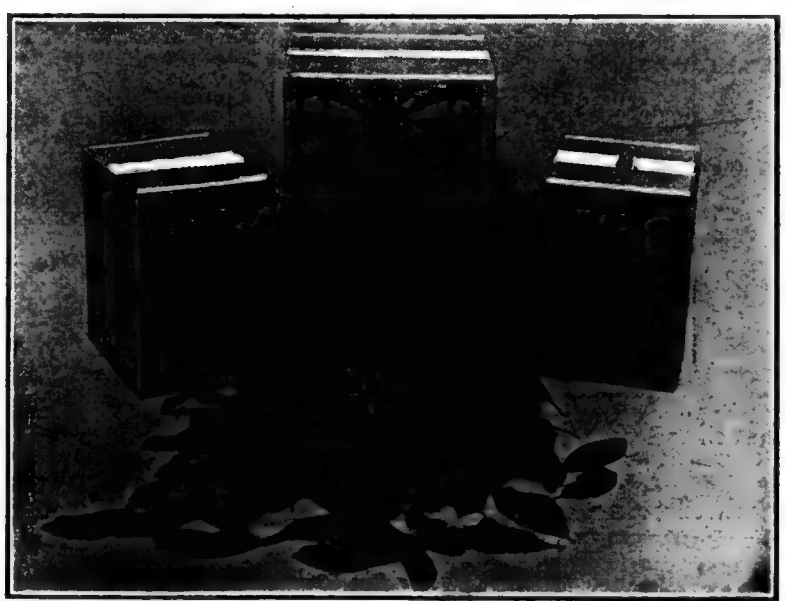
Underwood Bros. had their usual rush during the holidays and are still busy.

The Munk Floral Co. had a fine lot of cyclamens and a good, heavy cut of roses.

E. Metzmaier reports business good in all branches.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. had a good cut of roses and carnations and a good line of potted stock. It reports business still heavy.

The New Year's trade seemed to be good all around, according to reports coming in. J. M.



YELLOW SPOTS ON HARRISII.

Yellow spots are showing on the foliage of my Lilium Harrisii plants. These spots resemble the carnation yellows somewhat, but they are quite distinct and affect the foliage toward the lower part of the stalk. Please tell me the cause of the trouble and give a remedy for it.

V. R. F.—Ind.

Your lily foliage undoubtedly is affected by a disease not at all uncommon to this class of plants. The trouble is usually caused by premature digging of the bulbs, and propagating from diseased stock. For this reason Harrisii shipments have been comparatively small of late years, but determined efforts are being made in Bermuda, I believe, to stamp it out. If you have treated your plants carefully you are in no wise to blame for the trouble. It is aggravated by an excess of water in the early stages of growth. No spraying will avail much and I would advise you to throw away all diseased plants.

The Market.

The Christmas business was the largest and, on the whole, the most satisfactory this market has ever had. The weather was clear but cold, the temperature ranging below zero most of the time. Complaints on the part of customers were few, as the retailers had two days in which to make up and deliver stock.

Blooming plants and made-up baskets were the principal lines sold. Cyclamens, begonias and poinsettias were the leaders and some exceptionally fine stock was offered. Retailers suggested plants to their customers, as they did not want to scare them with the high prices of cut flowers. As a consequence only a few cut flowers were sold — speaking comparatively. Baskets filled with plants were sold in quantities. The business done in this line was beyond expectations. The demand for corsage bouquets also was heavy.

Cut stock was plentiful and prices remained about as usual during the holidays, except for carnations, which were much lower than last year because of the large local production. Paper Whites were in strong supply, but cleared in a large number of funeral orders. Wedding decorations were numerous and table and hotel decorations kept the market cleaned up.

From across the state line comes the report that the holiday trade there was better than ever. Ample preparations were made and everything sold well. Holly wreaths and trees found a good market. Retailers were satisfied with the way orders went out, though much difficulty was experienced with out-of-town orders.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray reports business all he could expect. He sold everything on hand.

Arthur Newell reports an increase of twenty-two per cent in business for the holidays. Potted plants and baskets were the leaders. Poinsettias, begonias and cyclamens sold well.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. made large preparations for the holiday trade, but even at that fell short of the demands in everything they had. The quality of the plants and cut flowers was the best ever produced for the holidays. This concern had many orders for decorations.

The Oakwood Floral Co. had a large quantity of fine sweet peas with long stems; also some extra fine carnations.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports trade better than ever. "Couldn't take care of all the business; sold out completely," was the report. A new ribbon case, 26x60x66, will be installed soon.

Plant Co. reports the best business ever. Plants moved well and more could have been sold. Corsage work was exceptionally heavy. January 1 Mrs. Lamb became manager of the store. The former manager, G. K. Parker, will go into business for himself. T. J. Brackenberry will take up a position with C. P. Mueller, of Wichita, Kan. He also was with the George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co.

Fred Fromholdt had to work night and day to get out his Christmas orders. He was cleaned up on everything he had or could get hold of.

Miss Jennie Murray had a good trade. Funeral work has been unusually heavy during the last two weeks. She had to stay home for several days to rest up after the Christmas rush.

A. F. Barbe sold practically everything he had except a few pot plants. He sold 500 holly wreaths at 50 cents and 100 wreaths of different greens at $1 to $10 each. He had plenty of cut flowers and plants for his trade and did not have to buy anything.

W. J. Barnes had a heavy business. He sold more than 125 made-up baskets. He had a large quantity of begonias in 4-inch to 8-inch pots that were fine and sold quickly. His carnation crop was unusually strong.

Edward Ellsworth reports the best Christmas trade he ever had and that no complaints were heard. He was surprised at the number of baskets sold. Cyclamens and begonias were his best sellers in the plant line. Mr. Ellsworth had some Dutch hyacinths in bloom and these proved a great success. These were the new Dutch hyacinths that were grown one year in France.

August Luther, Jr., says his Christmas trade would have been double that of last year could he have procured the help to take care of the store. A car, which he had hired, was smashed, so he had to make deliveries in his own car, and this took him away from the store.

Miss Lou Boggess said her Christmas trade this year tripled the best business she ever has had.

Ed. A. Humfeld reports an excellent holiday trade. He was the only one to have azaleas in bloom and these went fast. His basket trade was far ahead of that of last year.

John Stevens had an unusually heavy crop of carnations for the holiday trade, averaging more than 3,000 cut carnations each day.

good. This concern had an excellent display in front of its store—about eight Christmas trees, ten feet in height, with colored electric lights.

T. J. Noll & Co. report that two consignments were frozen. They sold 30,000 roses and 9,000 carnations. This was locally grown stock.

Henry Kusik & Co. say that three of their consignments froze. There were about 5,000 carnations, 5,000 roses and 10,000 violets in the consignments.

Visitors last week were Robert Newcomb, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, and H. Cheeseman, of Ralph M. Ward & Co., New York. W. J. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Prices have suffered a considerable decline from those of a week ago. The after-Christmas demand proved to be less brisk than that of a year ago, although the holiday trade went far ahead of that of 1915. Roses seemed to be affected more than other flowers, and, although they now are decidedly off crop with most of the big growers, sales drag considerably. American Beauties sell slowly; even fancy Hadley and Russell roses do not move as they should and it looks at the time of writing as if a slump were imminent. We are having the coldest weather of the season and, while this checks production, it cripples buying. Carnations held up well until December 29; then a decline set in. Violets have held up well, but are not the popular flowers they were a few years ago.

Lilies are overabundant and a large number have to be carried over each day; the same holds true of Paper

Whites. The latter made splendid prices last year. As a consequence many more growers took them up, with the inevitable result. Freesias are coming from several growers; also Golden Spur narcissi. So far Roman hyacinths are only arriving in small lots. Calendulas are good, making up to $5 per hundred. Wallflowers sell tolerably well; also forget-me-nots. Sweet peas are overdone. I never saw so many in December before.

Rather more gardenias are coming in and cattleyas are more plentiful. Valley cortinues high-priced, but the demand for it is not heavy. There is only a moderate call for asparagus.

New Year's trade was scarcely as good as expected. January 1 was a state legal holiday for the first time and the fact that it fell on a Monday made matters worse. This combination of circumstances hurt business considerably, but nevertheless Boston had the greatest New Year's celebration it ever had and a fair business was done.

Various Notes.

W. D. Howard, of Milford, is one of the leading carnation growers for the Boston market, his flowers being handled by George H. Noyes at the Flower Exchange. His stock looks well this season, especially Matchless, Ward, Pink Delight, Eureka, Beacon and a salmon sport of Winsor. Mr. Howard has 1,000 plants of a good, bright crimson seedling grown by A. B. Knowlton, the result of a cross between Beacon and Fenn. Next season he will plant Cottage Maid. He is planning to attend the Indianapolis carnation convention.

W. H. Ward, of Montvale, has a fine crop of forget-me-nots and freesias coming in. His carnations look well. He is growing chiefly Matchless, Ward, Pink Delight, Benora and Beacon.

The Boston Florists' Bowling League had to suspend all contests during the holiday rush, but now that business is on a more normal basis competitions were resumed January 4.

Wax Bros., the hustling Tremont street florists, did a record Christmas business, and they report that the New Year's trade also was good.

E. J. Ahearn, one of our specialists in yellow marguerites, now is having a splendid cut of both these and calendulas.

Fred L. Sly, of South Stoughton, has dropped violet culture as unprofitable and now devotes his glass to sweet peas, which he will follow with tomatoes. The tomatoes proved to be a most profitable summer crop last season.

J. W. Foote, of Reading, still is cutting Bouvardia Humboldtii, in addition to a fine line of carnations and asparagus.

Indications are that Boston and vicinity will send a good representation to the Indianapolis carnation convention. Boston hopes to secure the convention for 1918. All planning to go to Indianapolis should apply to S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, who will send full information as to rates, etc.

nificent shipments of Hadley, Russell, Ophelia and Killarney roses from the Montgomery Co., Hadley, Mass. I saw some fine boxes of Hadley from here at Christmas, with 36-inch stems.

R. E. Wadsworth & Co., of Northboro, is sending in a superior lot of Benora, Matchless, Pink Delight, Ward and other carnations, in addition to freesias, callas and mignonette.

Alexander Porter, of Woburn, still is sending in some good chrysanthemums and large lots of Princess violets.

D. F. Hutchinson & Son, of Lexington, still are cutting good Bonnaffon mums, in addition to sweet peas and carnations.

H. J. Borowski & Son, of Roslindale, had a superb lot of Cincinnati begonias for Christmas, which sold out clean. Of cyclamens they had 5,000 magnificent plants, but they are blooming later than usual, about 1,000 being open for the holidays. Calls for the remainder come in faster than they open. Some extra fine plants will be held in a cold house for Easter.

Miss R. A. Washington, of North Stoughton, is one of our few local women florists. Her flowers are sold at the Boston Coöperative Market. Carnations, stevias and a variety of other stock are grown. Mrs. J. F. Flood, of Montvale, another grower who is a stall holder in the same market, specializes in asparagus.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold a field day at Framingham, Mass., Saturday, January 20. Special cars will leave Park square, Boston, at 1 o'clock sharp. This takes the place of the field day postponed December 16 on account of a heavy snow storm.

Anderson Bros., of Woburn, are sending in nice shipments of Enguehard mums, pink ericas, Calendula Orange King, Paper Whites, stevias and Godfrey callas.

John Lynch now is salesman at the Coöperative Market for N. F. Comley, who sends in a large variety of flowers, including roses, carnations, stevias, bachelor's buttons, violets and sweet peas.

A. G. Lundquist, of Woburn, is this season specializing in sweet peas and carnations, and is making fine shipments of each at present.

Mrs. E. K. Farr, of Stoneham, grows carnations of as fine a grade as comes to the Boston market. This season Matchless, Alice, Peerless Pink, Beacon, Benora, Ward, Fenn and small lots of Nancy and Belle Washburn are being tried. Good sweet peas are grown here.

Mr. Sanborn, of the A. T. Stearns Lumber Co., says that in spite of prevailing high prices for lumber, hardware, glass and labor, business in greenhouse materials is better than ever, and within a few days his concern has booked orders for several large houses.

Remember the installation night of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, December 16. Ladies, as usual, are cordially invited. Following the regular business, there will be entertainment, collation and dancing.

The Budlong Rose Co. states that its Christmas trade exceeded that of all previous years. At present its houses are somewhat off crop, an average of 5,000 to 6,000 roses coming in daily.

The coldest weather here of the present winter ushered in 1917. Icemen are preparing to house their crops. May the present year prove to be one of happiness and prosperity for all readers of The Review. W. N. C.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business since Christmas is reported satisfactory to the leading retailers. New Year's festivities caused a lively demand for cut flowers and decorative plants. New Year's day society kept open house, which caused a big demand for decorative stock, both cut flowers and plants.

On the whole the members of the trade here are well pleased with the business done both for Christmas and New Year's. A little lull is expected for this week, but many large social affairs are booked for the later weeks of January.

Last week cut stock was quite plentiful and quite a drop in prices took place, especially on carnations, as the best stock brought only $2 per hundred. Indeed, many clean-up sales were reported at $10 per thousand.

Roses held up fairly well, except Killarney, of which there were so many the price fell to a low point. Beauties sold at $6 per dozen for the best and long Russell brought $4 per dozen. Ophelia has been and is much in demand, but quite scarce. Sunburst, too, was not equal to the call.

Sweet peas are more plentiful and some extra fancy Spencers brought as high as $1.50 per hundred while the demand was large. Violets are selling clean at $1 per hundred, but are expected to become plentiful, especially if the fine weather continues. The bulk of this stock comes from Kirkwood. Orchids sold fairly well last week at the reduced price of 50 cents for cattleyas and 25 cents for cypripediums. Paper Whites are becoming a glut, but lilies are scarce and command good prices. Plumosus sells well, as do most other greens.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its first meeting of the new year, Thursday afternoon, January 11. The officers' meeting will be held this week to decide where the meeting will be held and to map out an interesting program.

ports a large Christmas business in all lines. The company is cutting a splendid lot of Killarney, Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty roses.

The new state vice-president of the S. A. F. for eastern Missouri is Jules Bourdet. The appointment is a popular one.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, Ill., spent a day in the city last week. Mr. Guy says the Belleville florists all had a splendid holiday trade and that plants and cut flowers sold equally well.

David Geddis, chairman of the transportation committee for the trip to Indianapolis for the carnation meeting, says he has quite a list of those who will make the trip. A special car will be engaged for the party.

Rudolph Windt, son of J. F. Windt, has taken a position with Edwin Denker, at St. Charles, Mo.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle will meet at the home of Mrs. F. C. Weber, Wednesday afternoon, January 10, at 2 o'clock. Entertainment for the lady visitors to the spring flower show will be planned at this meeting.

All the florists along Grand avenue report a satisfactory New Year's business, exceeding that of last year. They say orchids had a great call, as did violets and Beauties.

Ostertag Bros. report that they had several large decorations at the hotels and cafes for the New Year's celebrators. Cut stock was used principally this year.

W. A. Rowe, of Kirkwood, cut a lot of fine jonquils for the holidays. His cut of carnations from his new range was large and of fine quality.

Now that the holiday rush is over, the Flower Show Association will again hold weekly meetings at the office of the Bourdet Floral Co. Chairman August Hummert of the committee on guarantee fund, says the fund is complete, and the program committee will begin work this week. J. J. Windler is chairman. J. J. B.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Fire, supposed to have started from the boiler, did considerable damage in the orchid house at the Oscar Schultz range, December 26. None of the employees of the place was in the house at the time. An alarm was sounded and the fire was quickly extinguished, but considerable tearing out had to be done in the wooden structure adjoining the greenhouse, as the flames had worked their way up between the partitions to the roof.

At the annual meeting of Clan MacLeod, Hugh S. Meikle was elected past chief and trustee.

Thomas J. Gibson had the decorations for a large social event at the government training station.

Edward Forrest has been serving on the petit jury in the Superior court during the last week. W. H. M.

Seed Trade News

President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, held its semiannual reunion last week, sixteen of the company's salesmen being present.

BEANS may not yet be worth their weight in gold, but Harris Bros. Seed Co., Mt. Pleasant, Mich., set a number solitaire in scarf pins as New Year's remembrances for its friends in the seed trade.

THE approaching convention of canners at Cleveland promises to break all records for attendance, according to the reservations made at the two leading hotels. The seed trade will be largely represented.

THE changes that time brings forth are well shown by a letter from a large retail seed house in England, recently received by The Review, in which the English house expresses its wish to get in touch with seed growers in America.

A MEETING of the executive committee of the American Seed Trade Association will be held at the Hotel Vanderbilt, New York, January 30. The principal business will be the selection of the place for the June convention and plans for a large meeting there.

THE British trade press reports the death of W. E. Bunting, of Colchester, who was known to many American seedsmen as a grower of special strains of vegetable and flower seeds. One of his sons is G. A. Bunting, of Bunting & Co., wholesale seed merchants, London.

THE L. L. Olds Seed Co., Madison, Wis., follows a practice that is believed to be decidedly unusual in the trade. A preliminary edition of the general catalogue is made up carrying the garden seed pages only and is distributed about two weeks earlier than the complete catalogue. The 1917 edition of the garden seed book consists of thirty-two pages and the cover, while the general book will be ninety-six pages and cover.

J. BOLGIANO & SON, Baltimore, were well represented at the annual convention of seed analysts at New York last week. Miss Jesse L. Anderson, in charge of the seed laboratory; J. Henry Joyeux, in charge of the field seed department, and Morris Robinson, who has charge of the retail store, were in attendance. Bolgiano & Son claim to have the most complete private laboratory for the testing of seeds in the United States.

W. CUTHBERTSON, of the Edinburgh seed house of Dobbie & Co., well known to the trade in America, who has done splendid service in recent years as president of the Horticultural Trades' Association of Great Britain, has tendered his resignation for the reason that "the association requires, at the present moment, a president who is an enthusiastic tariff reformer." Evidently Mr. Cuthbertson is not able to abandon the free trade convictions of a lifetime on such short notice as war conditions give.

Secure Sutton's Novelties Now

WE are never in a hurry to put our novelties on the market. They first must go through grilling tests.

As a result, when we do offer them, they are decidedly worth offering.

You can't go wrong in buying Sutton's Seeds.

ONE service the war has done the seed trade of America is to turn attention to the creation of a home supply of flower seeds. It probably will be some years before the quality can be made as dependable as in the case of the best German stock, but even this year the supply of acceptable stock is much greater than ever before.

IT will be unanimously admitted that the crop of gladiolus bulbs was light this season, both in the United States and in Holland, but there is difference of opinion as to whether or not second hands will experience a shortage in the spring. Because of the shortage, dealers have bought with avidity. Importations are and will be heavy. There are those who believe a good number of dealers will find they have overbought.

FREE SEEDS OF 1916.

In the annual report of the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, it is stated that "during the fiscal year 1916 there were distributed on congressional and miscellaneous requests 12,417,972 packages of vegetable seed and 3,754,870 packages of flower seed, or a total of 16,172,842 packages, each containing five packets of different kinds. There were also distributed 14,202 packages of lawn-grass seed, 819 packets of tobacco seed, 10,364 boxes of narcissus and tulip bulbs, and 96,000 strawberry plants, comprising sixteen varieties.

"A distribution of new and rare field seeds was made throughout the entire United States, having for its object the dissemination of seed of new and rare forage crops, seed of improved strains of staple forage crops, and high grade seed of crops new to sections where the data of the department indicate such crops to be of considerable promise. Each package contained a sufficient quantity of seed for a satisfactory field trial, and the recipient was urged to use the seed, if feasible, for the production of stocks for future plantings. A report card and circular giving full directions for the culture of the crop accompanied each package of seed. This distribution included the following: Grimm, Baltic, Canadian Variegated, Peruvian, Kansas-grown, Dakota-grown, and Montana-grown alfalfas; Sudan grass; Dwarf Yellow milo; Dwarf hegari; Dakota Amber and Sumac sorghums; Kursk, Siberian, and Turkestan varieties of millet; Kaiser, Bangalia, Bluebell, French June, and Golden Vine varieties of field peas; Brabham, Groit, Catjang, and Early Buff varieties of cowpeas; Black Eyebrow, Haberlandt, Mammoth Yellow, Manchu, and Tokyo varieties of soy beans; Chinese, Early Florida, and Yokohama varieties of velvet beans; Natal grass and Rhodes grass; and Columbia, Dixie, Durango, Holdon, Lone Star, and Trice varieties of cotton. During the year 339,742 packages of new and rare field seeds were distributed, including 120,943 packages of cotton seed. Such a distribution enables a farmer to procure seed of new and improved crops in sufficient quantities to produce stocks for future seeding, the general effect of which is gradually to improve the crops of the country."

DUTCH BULB IMPORTS.

Last week's shipment of Holland-grown bulbs, probably all gladioli, which arrived December 25 by the Rotterdam steamer Maartensdyk, at New York, brings the total of all bulbs for the season well over 48,000 cases, a figure greatly in excess of either the 1915 or 1914 totals. New York customhouse papers give the following as consignees of last week's batch:

Consignee	Cases
Burnett Bros.	2
Hempstead, O. G., & Son	19
Stumpp & Walter Co.	32
Maltus & Ware	191
Vandegrift & Co.	3

American Express Co.	2
Erie Railroad Co.	3
Baldwin & Co.	3
Total	344
Previously reported	47,994
Total to date (through New York)	48,338

There were three consignments of seeds, as follows: P. Henderson & Co., 180 bags; Stumpp & Walter Co., 1 case; Moon Co., 82 bags.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

Charles Offerle, of Erie, Pa., added an Overland truck to help with his Christmas deliveries.

A strong Christmas spirit seemed to prevail among the florists of Erie, Pa. All seemed to be up to their necks in work, the making of boxwood wreaths being the pastime when I called. The shortage of cut stock was keenly felt, but with a good display of artificial goods I suppose only a few sales slipped by.

The Schluraff Floral Co., also of Erie, had several decorations to make up. A large advance sale of boxwood wreaths was reported.

John Laver, of Erie, had a display of orchid plants combined with holiday goods in his windows.

The Baur Floral Co., of Erie, had all it could do to keep up with the demand for wreaths and decorative material.

Trost & Steinfurth, of Erie, had an exceptional display of holly and boxwood wreaths at their stand in the market.

Traer, Ia.—Elliott H. Stutters, at present in the employ of C. H. Thomas, says that he intends to launch a florists' business at Clarion, Ia., in the spring.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

BALCH'S FILLBASKET TOMATO.

A December issue of The Review contained this request for information: "The Review recently has received a number of inquiries for the tomato known as Balch's Fillbasket. It is not listed in any of the catalogues, but has been recommended as an excellent forcing variety. Information will be gladly received as to who can supply the seeds." Among the replies received were the following:

I noticed in the issue of December 21 the announcement that you would like to know where to obtain seed of Balch's Fillbasket tomato. This seed may be obtained from Charles Sharpe & Co., Ltd., Sleaford, England. We believe that Messrs. Sharpe hold the sole wholesale agency for this seed. We do not know of any source in the United States where it may be procured.

Margaret Leahy.

In reply to a question in The Review for December 21, I would say that I am growing the Fillbasket tomato in our houses from seed procured from Sutton & Sons, Reading, England, through Winter, Son & Co., 64 Wall street, New York. I find it a strong grower and sure setter, with fruit of medium size, smooth and early; the best variety for forcing I have ever handled.

T. P. Connor.

We have a crop of Balch's Fillbasket tomatoes ripening here, at East Patchogue, N. Y., and can supply a limited amount of seed to the parties inquiring through The Review. We have some clusters of fruit with twenty-one tomatoes in them, and five or six clusters to the plant. Not all of the clusters contain twenty-one fruits, but many have sixteen to eighteen medium-sized, firm, bright red tomatoes, for which we are receiving 30 cents per pound in the New York market. Willey's Farm.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business during holiday week was exceptional. The greatest call has been for corsage bouquets, resulting from numerous social functions, which incidentally increased the amount of decorative work. Small flowers, therefore, have been in great demand, including small roses, sweet peas, violets, orchids and valley. Small roses have been scarce because of their greater popularity. Sweet peas have been of good quality and were good property at $1 and $1.50 per hundred. The local growers of violets cleaned up well at good figures, owing to the late arrival of eastern shipments. Valley and orchids have been scarce, even at good prices.

In the cut flower market roses have excelled in popularity this holiday season. Russell disqualified American Beauties for first place. The red roses, including Milady, Richmond, Hoosier Beauty and Hadley, for the last ten days have been without rivals, and roses in other colors have fared well. These have been of good quality, ranging in price from $4 to $25 per hundred. Carnations in red and deep colors have stood at the head of their class, bringing from $7 to $8. White and lighter shades are in less demand and make only from $4 to $6. Some poor, inferior stock, saved too long, can be had at the purchaser's price.

Funeral work has made valley a valuable and scarce article. Easter lilies have been especially rare, but callas are arriving more freely and find a ready sale. Narcissi have been cleaning up better because of their usefulness in funeral work, and good stock can be had at $3 and $4 per hundred. Calendulas are in the market, but they have lost popularity. Snapdragons are again seen and yellow daisies and bouvardias are welcomed. Pot plants have been selling well. Southern greens have been arriving in much better shape.

Various Notes.

H. B. Ruppert, of the Carbone Art Pottery Mfg. Co., of Boston, was a recent visitor.

John Rieman met with an unfortunate accident the day after Christmas. In stepping off his front porch he slipped and fell, dislocating two fingers and badly bruising his knee.

During the holidays the local store of the E. G. Hill Co. made more than 200 corsage bouquets in three days' time. Many of these were expensive, containing orchids and valley.

Edward Reinken, who took over the greenhouses of his father and brother July 1, discontinued business the day before Christmas. The stock is for sale and the greenhouses for rent.

The usual mistake in regard to roses was made again this year. At Christmas the supply of Ward, Baby Doll, George Elger and Sweetheart roses was more than satisfactory, but at New Year's, the real corsage bouquet day of the year, practically none of these varieties was available.

Complaints have been coming in about the Christmas carnations. As in previous years, the growers held their stock for higher prices until it was really too stale, and then got high prices. This is a mistake on their part, as it hurts the business and is fast killing the carnation sale.

A mass meeting of the committees for the coming carnation show will be held at the Commercial Club rooms Tuesday, January 9, at 10 a. m. Reports from all the committees will be heard and final arrangements will be completed at this time. After adjournment luncheon will be served. at 2 p. m. in the Palm room of the Claypool hotel. The regular election of officers will be held. Competition for the Indiana rose trophy will be held in conjunction with this meeting, so if you are a grower of roses do not forget to tuck a bunch under your arm and bring them along. Tickets for the carnation show at the Claypool, January 31 and February 1, will be ready for distribution and may be obtained from O. E. Steinkamp, secretary. A banquet will be held at 6:30. A record-breaking meeting is anticipated. The Indiana carnation trophy will be withheld until the annual convention of the American Carnation Society. The trophy will be awarded to the one displaying the best vase of fifty carnations, including not less than four commercial varieties. Entries are coming in rapidly, and a large display is expected from the central states. All entries must be in by January 22 and submitted to A. F. J. Baur, 3800 Rookwood avenue, Indianapolis.

Baur & Steinkamp have been sending their new carnation, Merry Christmas, to the florists' clubs throughout the states. One shipment of this variety was on the way five days and reached its destination in good condition.

Numerous clever advertisements have been appearing in the newspapers, in picture shows and on billboards advertising local tradesmen. Colored folders and circulars also have been effective. The advertising seems to have brought the desired results, as this has been one of the most satisfactory holiday seasons experienced by Indianapolis florists.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Never before in the writer's experience has there been such a scarcity of flowers for the Christmas holidays. While all were prepared for a shortage, no one could have foretold such a dearth as was experienced. Although wholesalers wrote, wired and otherwise advised their customers of what was coming, orders continued to pour in right up to the last minute and since then the wires have been kept hot explaining why they were not filled. Truly at such times a wholesaler's lot is not a happy one.

In the retail stores the same story was told. Several of the better class stores closed early Sunday, December 24, as they could not fill the orders already taken. Two Christmas leaders were practically out of the market; they were cut poinsettias and plants of azaleas. The former were so badly bruised by the high winds prevailing that they were almost useless, while the azaleas in some cases had not even arrived, let alone being brought into bloom at the holiday. Several firms report their plants frozen, while others have been so long on the road that they had not a single green leaf when they arrived and had to be thrown away.

In roses there was some excellent local stock, as well as that shipped from the north, the latter including some extra choice long Hadley and Russell. Carnations from indoors were out of the game early and the field-grown flowers did not nearly measure up to the demand.

At the time of writing there is a big call for flowers for the New Year's tournament of roses at Pasadena, but there is little chance for the orders being filled. Night after night the glass goes down below freezing, even in our most favored localities, and naturally the flowers do not open. Violets are scarce but good in quality, while the bulbous stock is coming in slowly.

Various Notes.

Having doubled their glass area, W. Armacost & Co., of Sawtelle, naturally looked for a far bigger holiday trade than ever before—and they were not disappointed. In roses the output was more than doubled, while plants also were sold in huge quantities. A number of cyclamens that did not quite make the holiday market are now finely in bloom and ought to sell rapidly on account of the scarcity of cut flowers.

At Darling's Flower Shop the doors had to be closed because everything was sold out, and H. Reeve Darling says he had a magnificent trade. Wallace Boyd, manager here, had the misfortune to injure his eye with a branch of redwood the day after Christmas and is suffering sevère pain.

We are much pleased with the results of our plant advertisements in The Review; orders have come in freely and from a wide range of territory.

Germain Seed & Plant Co.

Los Angeles. By M. L. Germain, Pres.

Wright's Flower Shop reports the busiest Christmas ever known and Manager W. Wern looked a tired man the day after. Some excellent azaleas were shown here, finely finished and full of blooms.

Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson not only did a big holiday business but a lot of good funeral work as well.

A big advance over last year's was Frank Lichtenberg's report.

O. C. Saakes had a splendid business and says he does not know what he would have done without those big northern-grown roses,

J. W. Wolters' store looked as though the high wind of the day before had got inside December 25, all the fine stock he had being cleaned out. A splendid Christmas was the report.

All shipping orders had to be cut at the S. Murata & Co. establishment, but at that an immense business was done.

Some clever jokesmith evolved the novel idea of sending loaded cigars out by mail at Christmas. One of the victims probably will lose his eyesight, but one who fortunately escaped was J. O. Burns, manager of the vegetable seed department at the Germain Seed & Plant Co. store. Joe handed over his Christmas present to the police, who are seeking the sender.

The L. A. Floral Co. has been shipping excellent Victory carnations during the holidays.

Many growers are absent from the California flower market on account of the cold weather, but at the time of writing a warmer rain is falling and things should be better shortly.

Howard & Smith report a banner Christmas business. Their large store was finely decorated and a large force were on the jump throughout the holiday.

BIG SEED COMPANY IS DISTRIBUTING NEW CATALOGUE.

AGGELER & MUSSER SEED COMPANY, OF LOS ANGELES, Issue Twenty-fourth Annual Book.

One of the largest seed houses in the west, the Aggeler & Musser Seed Company, Sixth and Alameda Streets, Los Angeles, have just received the first edition of their new 1917 catalogue and are giving it broadcast distribution. This is their 24th Annual Catalogue, and it certainly surpasses any previous edition.

It contains many new features, such as hints to the home vegetable gardener, how gardening may be made easy, etc. In fact, the supplementary booklet, called the "Garden Manual," which heretofore has been printed separately, is this year incorporated in the big Annual, and is claimed to be one of the most complete seed books published. It contains answers to more than 1000 questions and gives information regarding all varieties of plants listed and is fully illustrated. Not only does it tell all about seeds, but gives full data concerning the correct tools and implements agriculturists should use to obtain the best results. Valuable hints on Poultry, Spraying, Fertilizing and the use of Insecticides are also given.

The Aggeler & Musser Seed Company will gladly send this descriptive, illustrated and interesting catalogue free and postpaid to anyone writing and requesting it.

From all the smaller towns around Los Angeles come reports of good business, the only trouble being shortage of stock. H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Shipping of flowers east practically has been at a standstill since Christmas, on account of trains being blocked by snow, and this is having considerable effect on the market. Complete returns of the Christmas business done are gratifying to all branches of the trade. The growers had a close clean-up of seasonable stock, the wholesalers report a banner business and the retailers have no complaints to make. Nearly all the downtown establishments sold out their flowering plants, and reports from the outlying districts indicate that the florists in those sections did an unusually heavy business. It is believed the rain helped these, as many people bought near home, who otherwise might have gone downtown to place their orders. Notwithstanding the fact that larger stocks than ever before were disposed of, the florists say it was an easy rush because the people bought early and allowed their orders to be delivered either Saturday, Sunday or Monday.

Prices were well maintained. Customers picked out what they wanted and paid the prices, without comment for the most part. More orchids could have been used, and it will be two or three weeks before many more are available. A little valley appeared, but the offerings were not sufficiently large to cut much figure. Only a few stores had it. Violets are on the short side of the market, the cut showing the effect of the cold weather. Roses were good, but not overplentiful. Best American Beauties retailed at $15 to $20, Russell at $10 and other good roses at $5 per dozen. There is a nice cut of carnations, and these clear well, with prices no easier. Large chrysanthemums are off the market and Chinese bush mums are about gone, such stock receiving but little attention. A few cold storage lilies are offered at rather high prices. China lilies are held back by the cold and the limited offerings sell well at high prices. Daffodils are appearing, but it will require a little warm weather to bring them out in good shape. Anemones are plentiful and popular.

Various Notes.

T. Mosco is well satisfied with Christmas business. He was sold out of flowering plants by 4 o'clock December 25, and had good success with holly and mistletoe baskets.

C. W. Ward sent down some nice carnations from Eureka, Cal., to Pelicano, Rossi & Co. for the holiday trade.

According to Manager Shellgrain, business Christmas week at J. B. Boland's store showed a gain of twenty per cent over that of the corresponding period of last year. He says funeral work is keeping them busy this week.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee says Christmas business at her retail store was four times as large as ever before. She had plenty of violets for shipping and filled a large out-of-town demand.

Y. Oshima is bringing in some nice Red Radiance roses from his place at Stege, Contra Costa county, where, he says, he grows the only ones of this variety in that vicinity.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is bringing in a fine cut of freesias. The company has a whole house devoted to freesias, and now is shipping about 200 dozen blooms per day to Los Angeles. The cut is twice daily, making about 500 dozen per day, which is said to be the greatest cut ever made in this market.

After a marked scarcity in valley for a good many weeks, limited offerings arrived Christmas week. P. Ferrari brought in a few dozen and will have more soon. Domoto Bros. have many pips in and will begin to cut in about two weeks, so the outlook is brighter than for some time.

Walter Hofinghoff, of MacRorie & McLaren, says they had a wonderful Christmas trade. As this was their first year in the retail business, they had no way of gauging their needs, but they sold twice as much stock as they had anticipated. Truck-load after truck-load arrived from their nurseries in Burlingame and it seemed to clean up about as fast as it came in. The best selling commodity at this establishment was heather plants. Quantities of them were sold and they were especially popular with discriminating people, who were glad to get away from poinsettias and the other regulation things. In addition to a heavy store trade, MacRorie & McLaren had many decorations Christmas week, which necessitated their remaining open all night on several occasions.

Miss Bertha Cohn, of the Bellevue Florist Shop, says they had a good clean-up at Christmas, the demand running to flowering plants more strongly than ever. She noted a heavy transient trade, in addition to their regular customers, and says that people did not seem to hesitate about prices. California poppies attracted much attention here. They were used effectively on several Christmas dinner tables in conjunction with cornflowers.

Jack Olson, proprietor of the New Rosarie, reports a splendid holiday business, having sold out everything in the store.

B. M. Joseph says he had a satisfac-

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

The Christmas rush is past and everyone is glad. It certainly was a merry Christmas, at least for the florists, who are unanimous in proclaiming it the best Christmas business ever known. Real Christmas weather prevailed, cold and snappy and with plenty of snow, which condition usually heightens the Christmas spirit. Stock was good in every line, and, though not quite equal to the demand, was equal in most cases to the ability to handle it. English holly sold well, but eastern holly was of poor grade and many cases were carried through practically untouched. Wreaths of magnolia, frieze, boxwood, etc., sold moderately well, but the public seems to be getting out of the notion of buying this sort of thing. Red frieze sold well by the yard, and quite a revival of interest in ruscus was noted. All potted plants sold well and at good prices, the best sellers being poinsettias, cyclamens and primulas. Azaleas were limited in quantity, the only ones in bloom in time for Christmas being those held over from last year, this year's stock arriving, in some instances, but only three or four weeks before the holidays.

Various Notes.

Manager Austin, of the Spokane Greenhouse Co., says his company was completely cleaned out of everything salable. This concern had a good batch of cyclamens that netted good money.

W. S. Hoyt, in charge of the Hoyt Bros. Co. houses, had some exceptionally fine poinsettias in pots and pans. Besides supplying the store, Mr. Hoyt did a good wholesale business.

H. L. Olsson reported the biggest Christmas cut of carnations he ever

In Any Quantity BABY RAMBLERS At Any Time

This new class of miniature roses is gaining wonderfully in popularity, and most deservedly so. Their exceeding freedom and continuity of bloom is unsurpassed in any other bedding or border plant. Their possibilities are worth your attention and consideration.

A Few of the Best:

Echo	Orleans	Mrs. Taft
Phyllis	Ellen Poulsen	Jeanne d'Arc
Erna Teschendorff	Baby Dorothy	Maman Turbat
Jessie	Baby Elegance	Geo. Elger

BABY DOLL

The most rapturously and strikingly beautiful little rose ever introduced. The color is absolutely new and startling in its brilliancy—golden yellow, tipped with clear cerise. The little buds and open flowers are elegantly finished and of most perfect form. Habit of the very best, strong and compact; freedom of bloom is remarkable and continuous throughout the entire season. We have given it a fair and thorough trial and have no hesitancy in offering it as the one best selling rose you ever handled. It is a money-maker.

Also special prices on all commerial varieties of Hybrid Teas.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The Christmas rush began in earnest on Friday, December 22, and continued for four days. The amount of business done was limited only by the quantity of stock to be had. The shortage in carnations, roses and violets was relieved somewhat by shipments from California, but in most cases the orders were only partly filled. A few of the larger-sized pans of poinsettias and some inferior cyclamens and azaleas were not sold, but everything else went. Made-up baskets were in great demand. The cuts of roses were of better quality than usual and brought better prices. As a rule, both cut and potted stock sold for more money than last year. An increase over last year of twenty to thirty-three per cent in Christmas sales is reported by the well established firms. Several stores opened recently sold everything procurable.

Undoubtedly this has been the most profitable Christmas that Portland florists have ever experienced. A notable feature was the fine quality of the begonias, and the growers are to be commended for producing such splendid stock. Favorable weather helped the trade.

As there were no funerals December 24 or Christmas day, a large amount of

The Market.

Christmas shopping extended over a longer period here than usual this year. Considerable business was done on Friday. On Saturday there was a ceaseless flow of customers and on Sunday the stores had all they could do to handle the trade. Even on Monday there were a considerable number of belated orders to attend to.

Business was better than it has been for years. Everyone seemed to have money to spend and most of the stores were practically out of stock before noon on Monday, though the growers made strenuous efforts to send in a fresh supply that morning. In all lines of flowers there was a liberal supply to start with. Quantities of late mums were quickly disposed of and carnations were cleaned up entirely. The sale of cut poinsettias seemed to hang fire until the last, but there was a phenomenal demand for potted poinsettias, which, possibly, were finer and more plentiful than ever before. Roses were plentiful and sold quickly at enhanced prices. A small quantity of Romans were soon disposed of and more liberal supplies of Paper Whites met with a good demand.

Probably more cyclamen plants were sold during the week than in any such period before. There were quantities of them and while some were fine plants, others were mediocre, but nearly all were disposed of. Begonias were plentiful and sold well at fair prices. Primula obconica and malacoides were in good supply and sold readily. Peppers and cherries did not seem so plentiful as in former years. A few lilacs were shown and just a few azaleas, at fancy prices. There was a good demand for ferns. Araucarias were few and far between. There was no valley and there were few orchids.

Since Christmas, business has continued excellent; so the harassed florists may enter on the new year with brighter prospects than for some time.

The itinerant venders of holly and cedar wreaths were more plentiful than usual this Christmas, but the stores sold more wreaths than ever before. Many of the growers assisted at the various stores during the rush on Saturday and Sunday. More out-of-town orders than usual were received this Christmas—in some cases so many that they had to be refused and the money returned.

C. Hoffmeister had a stand for flowers in the Bon Marche, where he disposed of much of his own-grown stock.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and General Manager, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

As indicating how the service idea is developing in the sale of nursery stock, the new catalogue of Griffing Nurseries, Port Arthur, Tex., devotes practically one-half its space to plans and suggestions for the benefit of those not well posted in the horticulture of the extreme southern part of the United States.

THE manifest of the Dutch steamer Maartensdyk, which docked at New York December 25, lists the following forwarders as consignees of plants "via Rotterdam": Sheldon & Co., 77 cases roots; T. Cogger, 13 cases roots; Hampton & Co., 10 cases roots; P. C. Kuyper & Co., 5 cases roots; R. F. Lang, 61 cases roots; Ringh & Co., 1 case roots; Hempstead & Son, 13 cases shrubs; M. Van Waveren & Son, 40 cases plants.

NO EVASION OF QUARANTINE.

No violations of the Plant Quarantine Act were reported to the United States district attorneys during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916, according to the annual report for that year of Attorney-General T. W. Gregory. Nine cases, however, were pending at the close of the year.

During the fiscal year, eighty-seven cases under the Insecticide Act were reported, seventy-six of which were presented as criminal offenses and eleven as civil. Cases charging 103 violations were terminated during the year, ninety-three of which were criminal and ten civil. Fines were imposed in eighty cases, amounting to $2,040. At the end of the year prosecutions involving fifty-eight violations were pending. Sentence was suspended in one case.

NEW INSECT ENEMY OF PEACH.

An insect destructive to the peach and kindred fruits, believed to be new in the United States, has been discovered by entomologists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in the District of Columbia and its environs. This insect, which in its adult form is a brownish moth and in its larval stage a small white and pink caterpillar, attacks both the tender shoots and fruit, causing serious losses.

Because of the habits of the worm, the usual control measures, such as spraying with arsenates, will probably not be effective. The smooth young shoots, owing to their rapid growth, are protected by the poison solution for only a short time after the spray is applied.

The insect, known to science as Las-

Apple and Pear Seedlings

We are now busy grading and shipping Apple, Japan and Kieffer Pear Seedlings. As the supply is limited, we suggest orders be placed at once. We can also offer Apple and Pear Grafts, and a full line of Imported Fruit Tree Seedlings and Rose Stocks. Ask for our Winter Wholesale Trade List.

We can supply a very complete assortment of Shrubs, Roses, Vines, Shade Trees, Fruit Trees, etc., well grown and well graded stock that will satisfy your customers and build up your business.

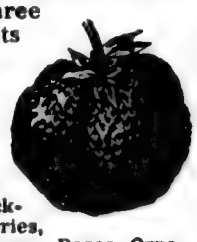
Boxwood



Some of the finest Boxwood imported in recent years comes from Grootendorst's Holland Nurseries. For the coming year we offer equally good plants in all sizes, from 8 ipches up to 3 feet in bush form, and in pyramidals from 2 to 7 feet.

Our trimmed Globe and Pyramidal Boxwoods are beauties. Each plant is strong and vigorous. We also have Boxwood in the standard and square pyramid shapes in addition to Buxus suffruticosa in the 8-inch size, just right for edging.

peyresia molesta, is believed to have been introduced from Japan. So far as the department's entomologists know, it has not been found in America other than in the District of Columbia and in the adjoining territory in Maryland and Virginia. The specialists are desirous of knowing if the insect has attacked peach, plum or cherry trees elsewhere in the United States.

The presence of the insect can best be determined in most cases by the nature of its injury to peach trees. It bores into practically every tender twig and causes new shoots to push out from lateral buds. These are attacked in turn, the abnormal stimulation of lateral growth producing a much branched and bushy plant. A copious flow of gum from the twig-ends often follows the attacks of the caterpillars.

In attacking fruit the young caterpillars generally eat through the skin at or near the point of attachment of the fruit stem. The larva, as it grows, makes its way to the pit, where it feeds on the flesh, which soon becomes much discolored and more or less slimy. Larvæ entering at the side of the fruit are more likely to eat out pockets or cavities in the flesh.

The full-grown caterpillar spins a whitish silk cocoon in which to pupate. Moths emerge in the spring for egg laying by the time the shoots are well out.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

Christmas business as a whole was gratifying and everyone seems well pleased with the returns. The "shop early" idea seemed to prevail in Knoxville, and orders were placed and deliveries made earlier than usual. High-priced stock did not sell extra well, but flowers of medium grade and price were in great demand.

Baum's "Home of Flowers" had a rushing Christmas trade. They had practically everything in the way of cut flowers and plants that could be wished for, except poinsettias. They placed immortelle wreaths and covers on display about December 1, and these were practically all sold out before Christmas. Business has been good since Christmas and nothing has gone to waste.

The C. W. Crouch Co. reports a good Christmas trade. It had the largest number and the finest poinsettia plants ever grown in this section, and these were cleaned up. There was an ample supply of cut flowers, but nothing was left over.

A. H. Dailey experienced an unusually good Christmas trade and the percentage of increase in his business probably was greater than that of any other florist, due to the enlargement of his store and its new location. He had a full line of cut flowers and some fine plants, such as cyclamens, poinsettias, Christmas peppers, narcissi, hyacinths, etc. His store was closed Saturday night, December 23, and was not opened until Monday morning, December 25, adhering strictly to the Sunday closing law passed by the Knoxville Florists' Society several months ago.

Mrs. W. R. Ryno reports a splendid trade and estimates an increase of thirty-three per cent over that of last year. Her sales were principally of plants, of which she had some fine specimens, especially poinsettias and ferns. She had a nice cut of narcissi and snapdragons of her own, but had to buy most of her roses and carnations. Since Christmas she has been unusually busy with funeral work. R. E. M.

Knoxville, Tenn.—M. U. Cook, of 237 Vermont avenue, says he is thinking of engaging in the evergreen business.

had. His Primula malacoides and obconica were especially fine and proved great sellers for the retailers, 6-inch pots selling readily at retail for from $3 to $4 each. His specimen cyclamens were fine and sold on sight.

Bernson & Halle came in with a good and large cut of Chadwick and Maud Dean mums, which found a ready market.

Henry Reimers handles the output from his own houses almost entirely. The quality of stock produced always is good. He reports the holiday business as being all that could be asked.

Jack Burt has weathered his first Christmas in his new store, and is pleased over the showing made.

C. T. Kipp, of the Spokane Florist Co., says it was by far the biggest Christmas he has known. All lines sold well, especially the more expensive plant arrangements and large azaleas.

The Hoyt Bros. Co. worked harder than ever before and did a bigger business than ever before. So great was the volume of business that the company closed its doors at noon December 24 and refused orders until the following day, not so much because of lack of stock, but because of the physical inability to care for more orders.

A business change has been announced in which the store, stock and business of A. J. Burt becomes the property of Adolph Donart and J. E. Stapleton, who will conduct the business under the firm name of Donart-Stapleton—House of Flowers. Mr. Burt has been in the landscape business for some twenty years, and after a few months' rest will devote his time entirely to this line. He has conducted a flower store for about six or seven years. He will retain his greenhouses on Augusta avenue, using them in connection with his landscape work. Mr. Burt contemplates a trip with Mrs. Burt to California and possibly to Honolulu before returning to Spokane. The new firm is composed of two men who bring to the venture practical experience in both ends of the business. Mr. Donart is the owner and active manager of the largest range of glass in this section, about 70,000 feet, at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. The output of this range will be handled largely through the Spokane store, which will be managed by Mr. Stapleton. Mr. Stapleton learned his business with Jenkinson & Son, of Staffordshire, England, serving a three years apprenticeship and later remaining in their employ for twelve additional years. He came to Spokane about a year ago from Brown Bros., of Vancouver, B. C., with whom he had been employed for eight years. He therefore is fully qualified to fill the position he has chosen.

A recent most welcome visitor was Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia. Arriving with the beginning of the Christmas rush, Mr. Reukauf proceeded to make himself useful. As a Christmas salesman he is a crackerjack. L. B. H.

New Varieties

Cottage Maid: Clear shell pink, sport of Mrs. C. W. Ward, possessing the same wonderful keeping and shipping qualities.

Merry Christmas: Color, intense deep scarlet; large flower, well formed, splendid stem and calyx, splendid keeper.

Doris: Color, brilliant maroon; vigorous grower, producing a succession of high-grade blooms on long, stiff stems; good calyx.

Rosalia: A true cerise pink; splendid grower and producer; a good commercial variety in every respect.

Old Gold: Deep yellow with faint pink stripes; the earliest and freest flowering of all yellow varieties; a decided improvement over Yellow Prince.

Superb: Seedling of Gloriosa x Enchantress; good stem of Gloriosa and free habit of Enchantress. Flesh pink, holds its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches. During the past four years it has proved to be one of the best commercial varieties.

potted plants could not be used and cut flowers had to be furnished.

A cold wave arrived December 27, with an east wind and a snowfall of about two inches. The lowest temperature, as officially reported, was 25 degrees, but in many places outside of the business center the mercury fell 4 or 5 degrees lower.

Various Notes.

The Tonseth Floral Co. and the Floral Studio opened branch stores for the Christmas rush.

The Holden Floral Co. and August Zitzewitz share the honors as growers of the fine Cincinnati and Melior begonias.

Clarke Bros. showed some yellow tulips in pans, the first of the season. This firm had some good azaleas, carried-over stock, which sold as high as $10 in baskets.

Max Smith had a special run on cyclamens.

The Martin & Forbes Co. cut a quantity of extra fine Ophelia roses.

The Tonseth Floral Co. cut over 150 dozen mums and sold them readily, getting $5 per dozen for the best ones.

A. F. Lalane thinks he has a good location for business, opposite the main entrance to the post-office.

O. R. Moeller, who was formerly with the store force of Max Smith, has opened a store at 326 Alder street.

F. A. Van Kirk cut some extra fine carnations, but did not have as many blooms as usual.

Rose growers report the prospect good for a heavy cut of midwinter stock, as the plants have formed but few blind shoots. S. W. W.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

tory clean-up of Christmas stock and is gratified that business has held up well between Christmas and New Year's.

Domoto Bros. are well satisfied over holiday business. All seasonable stock was sold out at their nursery at good prices. Now they are receiving heavy importations.

For Christmas Podesta & Baldocchi had a fine lot of azaleas from P. Ferrari's nursery, and Mr. Podesta says they sold every one of them. Other seasonable stock also was in splendid demand here, making it a most satisfactory holiday season.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co., according to Frank Pelicano, had the biggest Christmas business in their history, and the holiday falling on Monday distributed the rush over three days and facilitated deliveries. This firm made a specialty of mixed flowering plant baskets, which took exceptionally well. They had about 100 dozen lily of the valley, and these were readily snapped up. Potted cockscomb sold well, as did cyclamens, primulas and begonias. The sale of the latter was not urged here, however, as the plants are easily broken in delivery.

J. Eppstein, of the Art Floral Co., says his company sold out its Christmas stock and could have used larger quantities of certain kinds of flowers. For instance, the company was out of orchids two days before Christmas; violets were short and short deliveries were made on some kinds of plants. This concern received about forty dozen valley, for which it received an average of $1.50 and $2 per dozen, a high price here.

Avansino Bros. are well satisfied with their first Christmas business, as they provided a large stock and sold out completely. They say the demand was for good stock, prices apparently being no object. This concern expected a nice lot of azaleas for New Year's, as they were a little late for Christmas.

Despite the fact that the Emporium closed at 6 o'clock December 23, and remained closed until Tuesday morning, Manager Picetti, of the flower and plant stand, reports a close clean-up of holiday stock and says general business has kept up well since.

In their new Sutter street location, the Misses Hannon enjoyed a splendid holiday trade, practically everything in the place being cleaned out at a comparatively early hour. They had a good decorative business, etc., and expect to continue busy throughout the winter season.

A full attendance is expected at the January meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, as the election of officers will take place, and special features are included in the program.

A. O. Stein reports a banner Christmas business at his Sutter street store, fancy baskets having had a good call.

At Alfred Lundberg's store, 1440 Polk street, no complaints are forthcoming, as the holiday business in the new location showed a substantial increase over the records of former years.

H. Plath has been granted a permit by the board of supervisors for a 60-horsepower boiler, to be used in furnishing steam for his greenhouses at 210 Lawrence avenue.

A. J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has purchased a new 6-cylinder car.

¶ We are now booking orders for our new seedling Superb, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

Superb is a seedling of Gloriosa and Enchantress. It has the good stem of Gloriosa and the fine growing habit of Enchantress. The color is a flesh pink and it keeps its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches, are very full and generally receive full score on substance. The flowers are all perfect and do not split. In the four years we have grown it, it has proved the best commercial variety, barring none.

AVIATOR

¶ If you want scarlet carnations for Christmas, grow Aviator, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The market last week held up wonderfully well, with almost Christmas prices prevailing. Everything continued to sell as it had the week before, and wholesalers and growers cleaned up daily as they went along. There are enough roses of all kinds to go around and all orders are being filled, but the stock is being closed out each day and few flowers go to waste. The best sellers have been Richmond, Ophelia, Killarney Brilliant, My Maryland, Mrs. George Shawyer and Aaron Ward, with prices ranging from $8 to $20 per hundred. A good demand for American Beauty roses continued during the week, with $9 per dozen the top price.

The stores sold out on carnations at Christmas and cloudy weather since that time has caused a marked shortening of the supply. All varieties are in demand at from $6 to $8 per hundred, the deeper colors being most popular. Sweet peas have not been overplentiful. There seems to be a fair demand for violets, both doubles and singles, these moving at $1.50 per hundred. Roman hyacinths are in larger supply. There is only a limited demand for them, even at $3 per hundred. Narcissi have been selling better than usual; the price is held at $3 and $4 per hundred. White and yellow daisies are offered at $3 per hundred. Mignonette, usually sidetracked over the holidays, has been selling well, better than in any of the previous years. There are still plenty of stevias to be had. Cornflowers are being brought in from Boston and other northern points. Calendulas, lupines and nasturtiums help to fill out the market. There are plenty of cypripediums to be had, but the demand is limited. There comes an occasional order in quantity at $15 per hundred, the usual price being about $2 per dozen.

Calla lilies have been extremely scarce this season. They brought as high as $3 per dozen during Christmas week, but the price since has scaled down to $1.50 and $2 per dozen. There are plenty of Easter lilies and they continue to bring as high as $2 per dozen. Rubrum lilies are in but fair demand. A fine lot of miniature roses are being offered.

Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri have been dumped at the wholesale houses by the carload during the last two weeks and large quantities have gone to waste. The growers would have done far better had they cut more regularly throughout the season and not flooded the market at a time when the demand is limited.

Various Notes.

The Retail Merchants' Association has announced that the annual meeting of the florists' section of the organization will be held Friday noon, January 5. At that time the chairman of the section, who also will serve as a member of the board of governors of the organization, will be elected.

Washington's wholesalers and retailers alike are well pleased with the volume of business done during the year 1916. They declare this to have been the best year in the history of the trade and the outlook for a continuance of this prosperity is exceptionally bright.

What the Christmas business meant to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. can be seen from the statement of Manager Otto Bauer. "This year," he said, "despite the fact that we received enormous quantities of stock, we closed up our establishment early in the afternoon of Christmas day. We were completely cleaned out of cut flowers in all the popular varieties and grades and had little left to offer."

"We had a real Christmas business this year," said Manager Albert Schnell, of the Leo Niessen Co. store. "Our large, roomy quarters enabled us to do nearly 300 per cent better than we did last year, when we were in the old store and badly cramped for room. I expect that 1917 will prove a great deal better for us than was 1916, for this reason."

"The florists generally," declared William F. Gude, "did the best business in their history. There was a good demand for high-grade, expensive stock, and there were more $10 and $20 bills in the cash drawers than ever before. There has been a marked improvement in the business generally and I look for a prosperous 1917 for florists all over our country." C. L. L.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The month of December was one of the coldest Decembers on record in this part of the state. But the cold and snow heightened the Christmas spirit, and there was a good crop of cut flowers of all kinds. Roses were plentiful for the holiday, with the quality extra good, a decided contrast to what the quality had been most of the summer and fall. I doubt if there ever were so many good Russell roses on this market as during December; and other varieties were equally good.

Azaleas were on the short side and most of them not of the best quality. Most of the azaleas came in late and in bad condition. Some of the growers had to run them as high as 100 degrees during the day and 90 at night to get them in, but they came in and cleaned up nicely. The poinsettias were of good quality, but they were all sold out long before the demand was over, possibly because of the shortage in azaleas. Roman hyacinths were scarce and their quality was not up to the standard, yet they sold out early. Made-up baskets and boxes sold out before I had a chance to see many of them. Two days before Christmas I made the rounds of the stores, and in the end asked why they had not made up the usual baskets, etc. I was then informed that the usual number had been prepared, but that the demand had been so heavy that they were all sold.

The holiday trade this year undoubtedly was the heaviest ever known in the city. Everyone told the same story, of selling out everything salable before the demand was satisfied. This partly may have been because the local supply of holly was practically a failure. There usually are 100 wagons selling holly and mistletoe every day for a week or more before Christmas. This year I saw but two wagons, and they were poorly loaded and quickly emptied. Undoubtedly this helped the florists, for when buyers were disappointed at the market they went to the florists, paid a fair price and in the end were better satisfied. Novelties were scarce; about the only unusual articles observed were some beautifully made boxes and baskets of Easter lilies and poinsettias, with the proper greens. The combination certainly was a handsome one and the public appreciated it by buying them like hot cakes.

Various Notes.

Haury & Sons say they were more than pleased with the season's business.

At Geny Bros.', the Saturday night before Christmas, most of the plants were sold out and the cut flowers were running short. They had the best Russell roses I have ever seen in this market. They had a heavy cut of violets, and a few good mums that sold readily. Their azaleas were excellent.

The Joy Floral Co. had an exceptionally large supply of flowers of all kinds and the store was as busy as a beehive at swarming time. This firm's supply of azaleas perhaps was the largest in the city, but some of the plants were not quite ready for Christmas, having arrived too late. Nevertheless they all sold when the better stock was gone. Joy's roses were excellent but the best of the cut flowers were some unusually good sweet peas and valley. I have never seen better peas than those cut by Joy's for the holiday trade.

I unfortunately was prevented from seeing the McIntyre Floral Co. stock at PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

Pittsburgh florists have closed a most prosperous year. The Christmas trade was all that was expected, from the retailers' standpoint; all of them report an excellent business. The demand for plants and combination baskets was far greater than ever, but these did not seem to affect the demand for cut flowers. Although business was drawn out on account of the Sunday the day before Christmas, everybody seemed busy getting out the orders.

The wholesalers had much trouble with the express companies, which seemed to be unable to handle the holiday rush. It was useless to send out truck loads of orders to be delivered, as the companies would not accept them. The wholesalers had to send it up in small lots and then coax the express men to try to work the shipments out for them. The same trouble was experienced in getting stock to the market. Everything was at least twenty-four hours late. The violets again suffered. These came in late December 23, after all the shipping business was over, and disappointed many out-of-town buyers.

Stock was a little cheaper than last year, but the volume of business done made up for the decline in prices.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held its meeting Tuesday, January 2. Henry Meuschke read a paper on the faker problem, in which he advocated certain measures to keep cut flowers out of the hands of the street boys. Clarke.

Greenhouse Heating.

JOHN MARSH, of the Marsh Floral Co., Bay City, Mich., wants to know if any grower has a successful electric pump for taking hot water from a condensing tank and putting it back in the boiler. Write to him direct or through The Review.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

USE SEPARATE MAINS.

Will you please tell us how many rows of 1¼-inch hot water pipe we shall need in a house 16x40? It runs east and west. We have one house 27x40, and south of this is the 16-foot house, which has 4-foot side walls, entirely of glass. The boiler, which is at the east end, has a fire grate 36x36 inches. We expect to grow chrysanthemums in the fall and geraniums for the spring trade. We should prefer to put the piping around the wall, so we can grow chrysanthemums on the ground. Will it be necessary to have a new flow pipe from the boiler, or will it be satisfactory to tap the piping in the house 27x40, which has a 3-inch flow pipe? The expansion tank is at the west end. We want a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather.

W. H. G.—O.

For the best results we would use 3-inch main flow and return pipes for the house 16x40, and would prefer to connect directly with the boiler. As we understand it, the house to be heated is 16x40, with four feet of glass in each of the walls. This will require about 350 square feet of radiation if a temperature of 60 degrees is to be maintained. The main flow pipe should be carried to the end of the house and there connected with two 2½-inch feed flow pipes. These should be carried on the wall plates or about three feet below the ridge, and connected at the farther end of the house with ten 2-inch or fourteen 1¼-inch returns, one-half the number being on each side wall. Unless the east end of the house is considerably exposed and the bench is built along the end wall, it will answer if the coils are on the side walls only.

SOME PROBLEMS IN PIPING.

Will your heating engineer kindly give me some help with my heating problems? I enclose a sketch of two houses. House No. 1, the north house, is already built and will be used for propagating. The building of house No. 2 is under consideration. House No. 1 is 13x100 and eight feet high to the ridge. The north rafters are six feet long, the south ones ten feet. The north wall is four and one-half feet high, the south wall three feet high. There is no glass in the side walls. How much radiation should the boiler have for house No. 1 only? How much radiation should the boiler have for the two houses, if I build house No. 2 of the same dimensions as No. 1 and connect the two houses by a boiler shed? I shall use a hot water system.

If I build house No. 2, how many feet south of No. 1 should it be, so as not to cast a shadow on the north house? Please inform me how many and what size of flows and returns will be required to heat this one house to a temperature of 60 degrees at night. The outside temperature sometimes drops as low as 15 degrees below zero. Please describe how the piping should run, as I desire to have the returns under the benches. The south bench will be two feet from the floor and the north bench three feet two inches from the floor.

Which is the correct method—to have the high point of the flow pipe at the boiler, with a slope to the farther end, or to have the flow pipe continue to rise from the boiler to the farther end of the house? How much slope or rise is necessary on a 100-foot run of flow pipe? How much slope is necessary for the returns, for best results? Which is the correct method—to attach the expansion tank pipe to the high point of the flow pipe or to one of the return pipes? R. E. C.—Ill.

About 600 square feet of hot water radiation will be required for heating each of the houses, and we would select a boiler rated for 750 square feet of radiation for heating the propagating house, or 1,450 square feet for the two houses.

For flow pipes run a 2½-inch flow upon each plate, connecting the south flow with four 2-inch returns under the south bench and the north flow with three returns under the north bench. We would not vary the amount or arrangement of the piping in the two houses, except that the benches in the propagating house should be partly boarded in, in order to secure bottom heat. One or more of the boards should be hinged, for the purpose of regulating the heat. There should be a space of an inch or so between the benches and the wall, to allow the warm air to pass up and prevent the cooling of the air over the benches.

The slope of the flow pipes should be away from the heater and it need not be more than one inch in ten feet—and one inch in twenty feet will answer—for either flows or returns. The slope of the pipes does not directly increase the circulation; in fact, the less slope the better so far as the circulation is concerned, and it is only needed to allow the air to escape from the pipes so that they may be filled with water. The expansion tank may be connected with any part of the system, but we prefer to attach it to the highest part of the system, when the downhill arrangement is used, and thus avoid the expense and bother of air valves.

Not over ten feet between the houses would be necessary in any case, and since the north house is to be used for propagating purposes, they may be built together, with a common wall. The return pipes should be arranged in the coils horizontally and should be one foot below the bottom of the bench, except, perhaps, in the propagating house, where a somewhat smaller distance will answer.

Cadillac, Mich.—J. P. Herzog has sold his Cadillac Greenhouses to Percy Snell and contemplates locating in some large city.

Valencia, Pa.—The early weeks of 1917 will see G. L. Curry & Sons operating their new greenhouses. These are two connected houses, each 30x50, and they also are rebuilding one sash house 16x36. When they have finished building they will have over 5,100 square feet of ground covered with greenhouses, as against 2,100 square feet last season, or about two and one-half times their former space. The material for the new houses was furnished by John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, the glass by Baur Window Glass Co., Eaton, Ind., and the pipe and heating system by the Kelly & Jones Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose is made in the same factory and under the same standards of materials and workmanship as Goodyear Tires, the largest selling brand of tires in the world

This Hose Is Made for Florists

Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose is saving florists time, worry and annoyance every day and it is doing it economically, too, when length of service is considered.

This hose meets every requirement of the florist. It will not tie up into kinks. It slips easily and smoothly over rough concrete, cinder walks, and around greenhouse bench posts, without catching or damage.

And it will not burst!

Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose is so strongly constructed that the manufacturers are able to guarantee it against bursting at any time within two years.

It is a serviceable, all-the-year-round hose, made to withstand the workaday use around the greenhouse.

Do not confuse this superior, durable hose with the ordinary kind that gives but a few months' service.

Goodyear Wingfoot is entirely different from all other kinds.

Be sure to ask your dealer for Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose by name. You will find this name on every five-foot length.

The Market.

The week after Christmas was as dull as usual. Shipments were light and this kept the market steady. "No better than an ordinarily good Saturday," was the verdict as the old year ended. Wholesale cut flower stores were nearly all closed at midnight December 30, were reposeful December 31, and the doors were closed at noon January 1. Little extra nowadays is expected of New Year's, and so few were disappointed.

The supply of Hadley is increasing. There are several expert growers of this splendid rose. Prices are yielding, but still it holds values close to the old standby and ever popular American Beauty. Shipments of the latter are light.

Larger shipments of roses are anticipated this week.

In orchids, Percivaliana is done and Trianæ is arriving. A few extra flowers of gigas are worth 75 cents, and from this down to 25 cents is the present quotation. Those left too long on the plants at Christmas met with a serious rebuff, many of the flowers being unsalable. It doesn't seem possible, though, that anyone would pickle an orchid!

A few carnations sold at 8 cents December 30, but 6 cents was top with nearly all the wholesalers. Anything mediocre sold at 4 cents and under. Lower prices are anticipated. Gardenias so far this season have been a disappointment. Even for the Christmas trade prices were low, and since the holiday they have retrograded. Longiflorums have been remarkably steady at 12 cents. Many thousands of short-stemmed rubrums are disposed of daily at $4 to $5 per hundred. This figure seems to be top for valley also. Mums have vanished at last, New Year's taking the goodly number that remained.

Violets are all right again. December 30 sweet flowers were selling easily at $1.50 per hundred. Singles and doubles both shared in the returns.

Cut blooms from flowering shrubs are seen, with a general assortment of seasonable flowers. Some superb mignonette, sweet peas, callas, stevia, forget-me-not, lilac, iris, southern gladioli, calendulas, bouvardia, pansies, Roman hyacinths and narcissi in great abundance are offered.

Various Notes.

January 8 the first meeting of the Florists' Club for 1917 takes place at the rooms in the Grand Opera House building, Eighth avenue and West Twenty-third street. There will be the usual holiday festivities. Because of the flower show in March and the meeting of the S. A. F. in August, this promises to be the most important year in the club's history. The membership is close to 500, and soon will exceed it, now that so many retail florists have decided to apply for membership, following the election of G. E. M. Stumpp to the presidency.

Mr. Hanfling has recovered from his illness of a week ago.

Charles Lenker, of Freeport, is said to be out of danger.

The florists' supply houses are all in a condition of recuperation after the strenuous season just ended. Owing to the lightness of importations, there is a decided scarcity in many lines that only the end of the war can remedy.

Joseph Vocke, manager for W. H. Siebrecht's branch in the Coogan building, is recovering from an attack of pneumonia. J. Austin Shaw.

The Market.

Everything cleaned up well for Christmas. Prices on all stock were unusually high, but business was good just the same. The trade in general seemed satisfied with the amount of business done. The principal items were azalea, cyclamen, begonia, primrose, poinsettia and heather plants. Among the cut flowers, red carnations of course were the favorites and sold for $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Carnations in other colors sold for $1.25 and $1.50. Roses were of good quality, but not plentiful.

Various Notes.

Julius, the Florist, undoubtedly carried the largest stock in town, and he disposed of it all. He reports his Christmas business the best ever.

Fred Covill did a tremendous holiday business. Baskets sold well with him, and he certainly had some original creations in that line. He also used many azaleas.

William E. Mosher carried a large stock of Christmas trees. He disposed of all his own trees and then bought up all that the other florists had. He had no trouble in selling them. Mr. Mosher also carried a large and varied stock of flowering plants, for which he found a ready market. He is well satisfied with his holiday business. W. M. P.

The will of Simon J. Reuter was admitted to probate last week. The sum of $750 each is given to his daughters, Barbara Lueck and May Reuter, and all his shares of capital stock and rights in S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., are given in trust to the Washington Trust Co. His widow, Barbara A. Reuter, is to receive from the income $1,800 per year, to begin at the date of the decease of testator. To his son, Louis J., and to each of his daughters, Barbara and May, is given one-third part of the trust property. Upon the death of the widow, her share in the estate is to be divided equally among the three children, and in case of their death then to their heirs. The rest of the estate is given to the three children or their assigns, to share and share alike. W. H. M.

Our Square Paper Pots are worth 200 per cent more than any imitation on the market.

If you buy a pot with a half bottom the roots will all run out and break off when you shift the plant.

A pot with only half a bottom is not a pot, but only a dirt band with a strip of loose paper for the bottom.

All imitations are made from our discarded ideas.

We considered all the forms used by our imitators a long time before they thought of them, and if any other form were better we would be selling it.

No imitation has lasted more than one season.

The Market.

During the last week flowers have been somewhat scarce and high in price. Carnations, which should be coming in plentifully now, are not developing rapidly. The plants are fine, and are filled with large, strong buds, but the buds open slowly, with the result that the supply is limited. Paper Whites are much more plentiful than they have been, and are of good quality. Nearly all of the florists report a fine Christmas trade. Some say it was the best holiday trade they have had for some years. There was a considerable demand for cut flowers, though the greatest call was for plants. Poinsettias were good and sold well, most of the florists cleaning out their stock. Azaleas sold well, though the quality was not quite so good as usual. There was a strong demand for orchids, which were a little high-priced. Daffodils are just beginning to appear, and tulips in pots also will be here before long. Violets are arriving in fair quantities. Baskets are popular, and prettily arranged baskets play a prominent part in window decorations.

Various Notes.

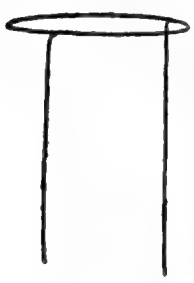
George Penek reports that the last year was a good one, and that the Christmas trade was highly satisfactory.

At the next meeting of the Essex County Florists' Club, which will be held at the Krueger Auditorium January 18, officers for the coming year will be elected. Preliminary plans for a flower show next fall will be made. The show given this year was quite successful.

Ferdinand A. Kuehn had a wonderfully successful Christmas business, ranking among the best seasons he ever had.

"The Ivy Flower Shop" is the trade name which has just been filed for the business at 454 South Orange avenue by Rose F. Schneider.

"The Davies Floral Co." is the title chosen for the business conducted by Annie Davies at Park avenue and Walnut street, Nutley.



Ernest Radany reports that the whole year has been a good one with him, and that the Christmas trade exceeded his expectations.

Henry Hornecker, of East Orange, states that the Christmas trade was the best he has had since entering business. While there was a good demand for almost everything, baskets and cut flowers were specially called for in his locality.

The S. A. Rogers Nursery Co., at 14 Branford place, made a great hit with miniature Japanese gardens, of which they laid in a good supply. R. B. M.

The Market.

All seasonable stock is selling well and many of the retailers report an unusual increase in business. A large quantity of funeral work has consumed much stock and social affairs have called for a great deal of decorative work.

Narcissi have begun to come into the market in large quantities, and move well. For the last two weeks the weather has been severely cold, but at this writing the indications are for rising temperatures, which will be welcomed by all the florists, whose boilers have been running full capacity too long on $6-per-ton coal.

Various Notes.

George Zimmer, who has been ill for several weks, now is reported to be better. He had an excellent cut of Beacon carnations for Christmas.

Lewis Henderson is among the first to offer Roman hyacinths to the trade. These are good and sell well. Mr. Henderson's Christmas and New Year's business was the best ever.

The Flower Shop, Fortieth and Farnam streets, reports a successful Christmas business. It has been having a heavy run on corsage bouquets for debutante parties.

The feature at the Parker Flower Shop Christmas week was a fine display of potted plants. The business for the holidays was all that the force could handle.

The Stewart Seed Store is one of the attractions in the downtown district. The force was on the jump during the holidays and states that the volume of business done will average much higher than that of last year's.

The Nebraska State Florists' Society will meet at Lincoln, January 16, for a one-day session, in connection with the week of "Organized Agriculture," January 15 to 19. The program is as follows: Opening address by President Edward Williams, of Grand Island; secretary's report, by Lewis Henderson, of Omaha; "Flower Culture, East and West," by J. J. Hess, of Omaha; "Roses," by C. H. Green, of Fremont; "Carnations, Especially Nebraska," by C. H. Frey, of Lincoln; "Competition in the Florists' Business," by C. Tanner, of Hastings. The program is to be given in connection with that of the State Horticultural Society. In the evening a banquet will be held in the Lindell hotel.

Greenhouse White

is made for us by paint experts, by people who have made a life-long study of painting problems; and in buying a product which bears their endorsement you can depend upon securing a product satisfactory in all respects for the purpose intended.

The value of a pure white, light-reflecting surface, which will diffuse and re-use every ray of light, cannot be over-estimated.

Greenhouse White will stay white—therefore, it is the paint to use.

Prices on application to Remember,

all ordinary paint will not do. The conditions are extreme—not to say remarkable, and it takes a paint complying with certain technical requirements to give satisfaction. You will find Greenhouse White to be the paint.
